ROCK HILL, S.C. - The job of directing a play – even a play with only one act – is not without its challenges. But during the Department of Theatre and Dance's Spring One-Act Festival, theatre majors like Wesley Henry learn how to overcome those issues.

Henry, who will direct David Ives' "Time Flies" during the April 8-10 festival, worked closely with his stage manager to coordinate rehearsal schedules around his actors' availability. Henry also learned how to channel his own vision for "Time Flies" through his performers.

"I really enjoy being able to show my ideas about a play through the actors," said Henry, a native of Lyman, S.C.

The festival, which is the culmination of student work in the class THRA 431: Directing II, will include performances April 8-10.
