Heisman Trophy winner to speak at commencement

(PIO)-Heisman Trophy winner, Rhodes Scholar, America's youngest Army General and now investment banker Peter M. Dawkins will be Winthrop College's commencement speaker April 27 at 11:00 a.m. at the Winthrop Coliseum.

People magazine profiled him as a man "who can dominate in any profession by sheer force of character, intellect and integrity."

To sum up the football star and war heroes' achievements thus far in his career, the Wall Street Journal has said, "Everything he tried to do, he did exceedingly well."

Dawkins became senior executive vice-president of Shearson Lehman/Amex in 1983 after 24 years in the U.S. Army. He was the Army's youngest general in 1961 and served as the Pentagon's director of strategy, plans and policy.

Dawkins was West Point's top cadet in 1958, was a rugby star at Oxford University as a Rhodes Scholar and earned his Ph.D. from Princeton University.

He received both the Heisman Trophy and Maxwell Award in 1958 as the nation's outstanding football player, and was inducted into the Football Foundation and Hall of Fame in 1975.

At West Point, Dawkins was a star player, class president, top student, football captain and All-American halfback. The first Heisman Trophy winner to decline professional football offers, he served as 82nd Airborne paratroop commander and received two Bronze Stars in Vietnam.

Winthrop College President Philip Lader explained that "The most admired college student of the 1950's has, from his subsequent military and business experience, an important message for graduates of the '80's."

Dawkins will receive an honorary degree, Doctor of Humane Letters at the ceremony, Terry Dozier, S.C. Teacher of the year and one of the two finalists for the National Teacher of the year award, and Allen Paulson, majority owner and operator of the world's largest corporate aircraft manufacturing company, Gulfstream Aerospace Corp. will also receive honorary degrees.

Board appoints new editors

The publications board announced the new editors for the 1985-86 school year.

Patricia Toepke and Margaret Patterson have been named co-editors of the yearbook, The Teller, replacing this year's co-editors Roxie Fogle and Liz Johnson. According to Toepke, since this is the 100th anniversary of Winthrop College the yearbook will probably reflect Winthrop's heritage over the years. Whatever the students like most about this year's annual will probably be carried over and used similarly in next year's annual. "I'm very excited about my new position and I'm looking forward to producing a book that will in some way reflect everyone at Winthrop," Toepke said. Patterson commented, "We'd like to get as many students involved as possible. The yearbook belongs to the students and we want them to have a part in its development."

Robert McDonald has been named editor of the Anthology replacing Thomas Wright. His goals for the literary magazine are to include more colorful pages. To do this will cost more money so McDonald stated there would have to be a cutback on the number of copies printed. There will also be a lot more art work, at least one sketch or drawing on every page spread. McDonald stated, "I'm excited about my new position and I have high hopes for a quality literary magazine for Winthrop. We're going to really push hard to find all the hidden talent we have here at Winthrop."

Lisa Buie was named TJ editor-in-chief replacing Susan Smith. Concerning her goals Buie stated, "I hope we can cover newsworthy events and put them all into perspective. I also want to get everybody involved and work closely with Lane Bembeneck and Brett Smith (DSU president and SGA president respectively) in making Winthrop a better place."

I would also like to thank Susan Smith for doing a great job on such a short notice. This is total excitement," Buie commented, "I would like to thank the staff for all their hard work and for being so easy to work with. I would also like to thank Dean Mann and Bob Bristow for their continuous support."

Senior Invitation opens

By DONNA CAPPS
TJ staff writer

The formal opening of the Senior Invitational Exhibition will be Tuesday, April 9, from 7-9 p.m. The exhibition will be shown in both Rutledge galleries until May 4. Eight seniors were chosen by the art faculty this year to present their works. Mary Mintich, sculpture and 3D professor, founded the show six years ago. Mintich started the event as a type of honors program for art students. She stated, “It was a response to students who felt a need for special recognition based on their effort and the quality of their work.”

Each October the entire art faculty meets to discuss senior students individually and then determine which ones will be chosen. “The choices are based on the effort, the energy that is demonstrated, the growth and attitude,” said the professional approach of the student,” said Mintich.

This year the eight seniors, all freshmen working in various types of media, Beth Wesson, from Greenville, will be showing her “sculptural paintings canvas beyond a completely flat, rectangular shape.” She will show three of these which all deal with cityscapes including white photographs. “The theme streets, churches, remains of old buildings, windows and doors. Her interest began while in Italy in the summer of 1983. “I felt an intrigue with the Etruscan cityscapes,” said Wesson. These pieces are constructed out of irregularly shaped plywood forms mounted at varying depths on a canvas-covered lattice. One of the pieces is rather large and had to be painted over. The other two are quite smaller but deal with the same subject matter. Wesson will also present five to six drawings using mixed media of acrylics, pastel, prismacolor, ink, and graphite/pen. These also represent abstract architectural elements. The elements are realistic but dealt with in an abstract manner.

Pat Kelsey, from Chester, will present sculpture consisting of laminated wood, plexiglass, and brass. There are five pieces ranging from 6’x6’ to 22’x22’x22’. Each of these students have had six months to prepare their works. The students have been able to seek advice from any of the faculty members during this time. Each is responsible for everything about their work including installation.

The admission to this show is free and everyone is invited. The galleries are open 9:00-4:30 p.m. Monday-Friday, and 2:00-5:00 Sunday. The opening will be held during the “Come-See-Me” week. There will be special gallery hours during this week.

SGA-DSU have goals in sight

By LISA BUIE
TJ managing editor

“Relieved and excited” were the words used by SGA president-elect Brett Smith and DSU president-elect Lane Bembenek to describe their feelings following student body elections. “While we waited on the results, I spent the time thinking about keeping commitments and promises and writing. When I won and if I lost, being able to handle it and continue to do the things I’d normally do,” Smith said.

Smith, a sophomore from Lake Wylie, feels that next year will be challenging but has clear goals in mind. “One of my main goals is to represent students’ needs and interests to the administration and the board and to improve communications,” Smith said.

Other goals include expanding the Leadership Winthrop program, attempting to convert WCRE to an FM radio station, and getting freshmen involved in college activities. “The first six to eight weeks of college are crucial if new students are to get involved. I want to spend a lot of time with freshmen and transfers. When I first came here someone showed me that I had potential. If I can, I want to pay it back.”

“Some of the students are the main thing. Their interests are my interests, and I’ll do everything in my power to make SGA and the Student Government Association the true voice. That’s why it’s called the Student Government Association,” Smith said.

Bembenek, a junior from Longwood, Fla., would like to program more student-oriented DSU events. “I want DSU to be doing a lot about what would please the students rather than the Rock Hill community,” Bembenek said.

Other goals included bringing in student-oriented comedians like Bill Cosby and Gallagher.

“We’re working on getting a larger stage to accommodate bigger performers. We also want to offer bigger trips next year, like a spring break trip to the Bahamas and a trip to Snowshoe, a big ski resort in Tennessee,” he said.

According to Bembenek, Otis Day and the Knights, the band from the Movie “Animal House”, will be a possibility for next year.

Bembenek said that since the drinking age will not change this fall, DSU will sponsor Fall Bash.

“I’m really excited about next year. I’m hoping that DSU can get involved in bigger and better activities,” Bembenek said.
Tavino sacrifices for African Relief Fund

Many Winthrop students and organizations will be working for a worthy cause this week - to raise money to help African famine victims. The idea of raising money for Cerebral Palsy, originated from Larry Tavino, a senior at Winthrop, who has an entire fraternity in the project. He decided to fast for a week.

Tavino, from Suffield, Connecticut, will graduate in April, double-majoring in Math and Sociology, having played two seasons of soccer and maintaining a 3.77 G.P.R.

Robert Jolly, Pi Kappa Alpha Fraternity president, has decided to join Tavino in the fast. "The Pikas are already involved with the relief activities. The idea of raising money for Cerebral Palsy, originated from Larry Tavino, a senior at Winthrop, who has an entire fraternity in the project. He decided to fast for a week."

"I'm not saying I'll make it the whole week, I'm just looking for donations per day," both Jolly and Tavino will be staying nights at the Wesley House.

Assistant Dean of Student Affairs Cristina Grabiel said, "Larry wants the campus to come together for a purpose. His fast is just one thing that's happening but not the only thing. His intent is for the whole campus to get together."

"I really like the idea of all the groups coming together for a purpose. It's good to see the students wanting to do what are you doing it for? Larry is such an easy-going person. He's doing this for the glory - for the humanity." Mann continued, "We might not have a good response, but by God we're going to try."

Tavino said the idea of fasting was just a way of getting started. "A few people have come up and offered to fast with me. We're trying to get the faculty someone they had to fast they and staff to participate. It's important for students to have gone without food longer than I sense of what is happening will. I don't see any problem in the world."

APRIL 5th - Application deadline
Missing notes

By ROBERT McDONALD
TJ contributing editor

I tell you what, folks, trying to think of something to write every week for this column is no easy job. If the copy has to be turned in by five o'clock in order to be typed, I am usually still running around at two o'clock trying to decide what I can "comment" on. It is sheer panic.

This week, though, was especially tough. After two weeks of not having to write, my mind had gotten lazy, and my usual train of grandiose thoughts and ideas about what to write had run dry.

The panic began the night before the copy was due when I began dodging frantically from door to door, begging my friends to "please give me some ideas. I have to write my column for the paper. What can I do?" Most of them sat there and smiled, appearing to enjoy watching me in such a state of delirium. I gave each one of them a dramatic snarl and stormed out of their rooms, probably in a worse state than I had been before I went seeking their help.

I walked back to my room and pouted. Things seemed hopeless. I had no idea what I was going to do. I did know, however, that I had to write something. There was no way that I was going to face Susan, our editor and fearless leader, on Tuesday and simply tell her that I didn't write my column because I couldn't think of anything to say. Anyone that knows me personally would quickly decide that this was a bald-face lie! Robbie always has something to say.

Deciding to give my mind a rest, I lay down in my bed with high hopes that the morning would bring at least a spark of an idea to my poor, self-pitying brain. I wrapped myself in my covers and made everything all nice and snug (my room was freezing!) and drifted off into a quiet, peaceful sleep. It felt wonderful to have my mind set free.

I don't know what time I went to bed, so I don't know how long I had been sleeping, but at exactly two minutes after four o'clock in the morning, I suddenly sat upright in my bed. I had an idea! I knew what I was going to write about!

Still half-dazed from sleeping, I waddled over to my desk and began to scribble thought and notes about my topic. I figured I would make a few general notes, and when I got up in the morning I would fill in all the necessary details and add any needed polishing touches. With a big smile on my face, I crawled back into bed feeling very secure and relaxed. My problem had been solved.

The morning came and I slept late because I remembered that I only had to put the finishing touches on my column before I went to class, and I would be finished for the day. Finally, though, I got up, showered, dressed, and went to a very late breakfast/lunch. I sat in the cafeteria like any good Winthrop student, for a minimum-required-gossiping-time of one hour before I went back to my room to get everything in order. This was going to be a great day.

I went over to my desk, pulled out my chair, and sat down. My heart sank. The paper was gone! What happened to it?! My stomach filled with butterflies, and I felt as though I were going to be very sick. I had no idea what I was going to do. This thing had to be turned into the typists in two hours, and I had no ideas, no scribbled notes, and, best of all, I couldn't even remember what that "fabulous idea" I had discovered in the middle of the night had been.

So, ya'll, I sat down and began to write. This is what came out, and it probably sounds ridiculous. I'm sorry if I bored you, but if you've read this far, you must have found something interesting. For my personal satisfaction, though, I certainly hope I can remember what that great idea that woke me up at four a.m. was. Anything capable of waking up me that early in the morning ought to be a slinger!

I think it's too much to study. I don't think we can do as well as we could without as much.

Leslie Highfill

"It doesn't really matter to me. I have more papers than anything else."

Jeff Hudson

"It's a little much. I think we have enough to worry about already."

Honorable Mention All-American McKinnon receives honor

By ROBERT JOLLY
TJ sports writer

Though the 1984-85 Eagles basketball season didn't produce numerous team victories, one such victory was the recent naming of Fred McKinnon as an Honorable Mention All-American. Way to go Fred! You're a great American, playing a great American sport, at a great American school.

According to an announcement made by the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletes, March 25th, McKinnon was named All-American. McKinnon, a 6'6 junior (yes, he'll be back next year) forward from Crystal River, Florida, became the second All-American in Winthrop men's basketball history. Forward Charles Brunson (1980-82) was the first Eagle to obtain All-American status.

McKinnon led Winthrop in scoring this season, averaging 18.5 points a game. The standout forward was second in rebounding at 9.9 rebounds per game. McKinnon was the leading scorer in 18 games, and the leading rebounder in eight games. McKinnon jumped in a career high 36 points against Livingston College and scored 10 points in a win over Big South opponent Armstrong State. An accurate shooter, McKinnon shot .512 percent from the field and .814 percent from the line for the year. The All-American honor follows McKinnon's earlier selection to the NAIA All District 6 team.

"Fred was certainly deserving to be named NAIA All-American. He has proved to be one of the top players in the state of South Carolina as he carried our team all year long," stated Winthrop head coach Nield Gordon. "We are fortunate to have Fred in our program and look forward to his senior year.

Other players from District 6 receiving honors include: Greg McKinnon (College of Charleston-1st team), Wiley Adams (Presbyterian-HB), Demetric Goode (Flemstone-HM), Robert Mickie (Wofford-HM), but none can compare with our Fred. These type honors will be what it takes to put big W.C. on the map. Thanks Fred!

Tennis team swings into spring

By LAURIE ANN DEDE
TJ sports writer

The Winthrop College Women's tennis team began its campaign to provide a more aggressive season this month with Coach Bunker-Gilbert and her associates.

This year's team consists of eight players, with six of those playing doubles as well as singles.

Starting the lineup is Candle Dora, a sophomore from Savannah, Georgia. She is the team's captain and her experience will add depth to the team. Dora was named A-11 player of the year.

Carolyn Leake, a junior from York, S.C., is also a veteran on the Winthrop team. Hendrick recruited Leake from Summerville, S.C. to be her most consistent player.

Jean Gallagher returns for her junior year. She is from Denmark, S.C. According to Hendrick, Gallagher's strongest area is her serves and her volley.

The men's tennis team will begin their season this month with Coach Bunker-Gilbert and her assistants.
