TANK CREWS PICKED MEN

Short and Wily Soldiers Necessary for the Dangerous Work

British Headquarters in France—Under the shelter of a green ridge of shell-proof farm land about fifteen miles behind the present front line trenches, one may come upon the encampment of the tanks. The tanks in question are like a cluster of jagged mounds, the mounds being made of Gulliver-Lilliputian metal plates with protruding rivets. A dozen of the monsters are lying stretched out in the warm afternoon sun, being oiled and greased and scoured by their industrious attendants, who are like men melting wax from the side of the great steel steeds. Over at the edge of the parade, where the level ground breaks up into ridges and hollows, two or three of the big iron beasts are being put through their paces.

Grunting and puffing, crawling and complaining, they move along, not with the easy trill of the tank-book giants, but with the cumbersome gait of a huge muscle-bound turtle, hound on a picket line. They decompose them in their grunting advance. They mount a terra-cotta five feet high with the same dignity, complaining now must have they negotiate a mole hill and the steady pace of their caterpillars is unchanged whether climbing up a steep embankment or descending a declivity.

The job of a tank man is a dangerous one. The interior is not built for comfort. It is crowded with machinery and guns and armor, and in motion the deck wags and bucks like that of a little totter boat in a storm. Nor is the top high enough to prevent danger of receiving a sound thumping if one is off tall. For tanks are picket lines, and a rifle and slender bulk they must be tough as nails, but they are not necessary space. A fat man would wreck the machine, and a man who enters and exits a tall man would have to spend his time in a half erect posture, which would interfere not only with his own work, but with that of everybody else on board. If they would be few in number, they would be hard to find. They must be carefully chosen in their selection, and ready for emergency.

Nothing through the machine, and a little knack of the eye. Less first is the approved technique. Although to the novice there appear good grounds for believing that the reverse process might be just as dangerous. Legs first, one is in danger of placing one's foot on a leather-tipped wheel against the side of the tank. Disastrous results. But with care this can be avoided, and a landing made just beside the steaming engine.

Everything is a tick and a snap, slipping with abundance of oil, but no superfluous luxuries of brass or nickel to take away the weight of the armor plate which obscures every view. As in a battleship, the professional position of the tank man is one of view of safety is given to the engine. They lie just above the floor, stretching in a longitudinal position through the tank.

Wheels and cranks run under a special armor casing at the back to the tanks which operate the caterpillars and the tank wheels at the rear. The painting of the tanks is a great pastime in the tank encampment. Modern protective coloring of battlefield weapons offers a wide field for the development of the wild and the decorative. The tank is a tank, and the tank is a tank, and the tank is a tank.

GEN. WOOD ENDS WRONG PROTEST

Washington, S. C., July 25.—Major General Leonard Wood, commanding a Southern department, today sent a letter to the war department protesting against the elimination of Fort Mifflin, Pa., and Fort Logan, Ark., from the second series of officers' reserve training camps.

General Wood objected to the places substituted as an alternative to those abandoned, and the plan should be trained in gullies or camps to produce the highest efficiency in the new army, he said. It was a mistake to train men in spots where winter conditions interfere, he said.

PRODUCE MORE PORK

Principal Meat of Army, City, and Home—How Raising It Profitably and Patriotically

The quickest and surest way of augmenting the meat supply next to the raising of poultry is by raising hogs. The United States Department of Agriculture points out. The hog is the most important animal to raise for meat and money. He requires the least amount of food and the least amount of care. He produces the most meat per pound of feed. He is the most profitable animal. As a consumer of by-products the hog has no rival. No other animal equals the hog in its fat-storing tendency. The most satisfactory meat for shipping long distances on train, boat, or wagon, and for long storage after reaching market, is the hog's.

There are many ways of producing pork. There is no animal which produces more meat and more products than the hog. There are many ways of producing pork. There is no animal which produces more meat and more products than the hog. There are many ways of producing pork.

More dairy farmers should raise hogs. They are a profitable and patriotic industry. They are a profitable and patriotic industry. They are a profitable and patriotic industry.

This number should be able to care for an army of nearly 2,000,000 men. The Red Cross will have to replace these nurses drawn from civil hospitals without impairing the efficiency of these institutions. ## RULING ON EXEMPTION QUESTION

Decision of War Supply Workers to Be Made on Individual Basis

In reply to a letter asking for a statement from the War Department as to its policy in exempting men employed in the manufacture of material used by the Government in the war from military service under the selective-draft law, the following reply was received:

Exclusive jurisdiction to determine exemptions, exclusions, and discharges, with reference to the class of work referred to is vested in the district boards. The policy of exempting by classes would seem to be in violation of the law, and to be in violation of the proper basis upon individual cases coming before them. The section of the act providing for exclusions and discharges under the Persons engaged in industries clause will be supplemented by regulations authorized by the War Department.

WORK ON VAST AIR FLEET

Draft Will Be Used to Get 100,000 Men Needed—Automobile Factories Required to Make Motors

Washington, July 23.—Plans for the construction of the great air fleet which is destined to effect the defeat of Germany are well advanced. The peacetime program of construction provides for 20,000 airplanes and a force of 100,000 men, trained to maintain and pilot them. Five hundred of these planes are to be ready for service before January 1, and after that date they will be turned out at the rate of thousands per month. With $40,000,000 immediately available through the passage of the aviation appropriation bill, the Government will give all arrangements well in hand for the prompt and effective execution of this program.

The automobile industry, with all its facilities, is to be utilized in the building of this great air fleet. Two of the biggest plants in Detroit are to devote their resources to the construction of motors. Another plant is now erecting 10,000,000 worth of planes, and the construction of blades and wings and the assembling of the completed machines.

Auto mechanics who have registered under the selective draft law will be called for service in the aviation branch. The aviation bill gives the corps the pick of all men in whatever branch of the military or naval service, so that instead of exempting aviation mechanics between the ages of twenty-one and thirty-one, it is proposed to have them assigned to the aviation units.

It is estimated that anyone will be drafted as a flyer, but the mechanics will be drafted into the service to look after the machines, and they will have the opportunity of learning to fly if they care to take up this branch. The big force of mechanics who are needed may be imagined from the fact that ten assistants are required for each airplane. The war type of machine, which is being built, will have a motor of an airplane must be taken down, thoroughly cleaned and new bearings put in, involving a tremendous amount of labor.

A Test of Ability.

Perhaps the greatest of ability lies in our reserve power. When we first enter actively into life's experiences we do not regard this fact as essential to our welfare; indeed, we are then at that stage of existence when we do not think beyond the present, but as time goes on we learn through practical knowledge that it is wise to keep in reserve certain forces with which to meet with success unexpected emergencies. We cannot take out of our lives what we have not put into it, and in order to be in a position to have reserve powers from which to draw when necessary we must continue, day after day, year after year, to accumulate those powers. How to do this of course, is the problem of the individual, but the first step in accomplishing this object is the will to do it. Without that we shall not get very far, because the man who lacks "spring" will never succeed. The more he develops his mind the better able he is to understand the need for persevering in the business of preparing himself not only for his ordinary work, but also for those unanticipated eventualities which occur from time to time throughout his daily life. We must not be content simply with the ability to tide us over the present, we must develop by degrees a reserve surplus force, a capacity for doing even more and more, a reserve power which will give us confidence in ourselves and faith in our ability to meet whatever is good or evil, success or failure, joy or sorrow may come to us.

BEAUTY SPOT OF THE MOUNTAINS

In Western North Carolina there is a section of country known the world over on account of the wonderful scenery, fine climate and the cleverly accommodating mountain hotels and boarding houses, and almost every farm home has thrown open its doors to the people of the lowlands at rates that are so low almost any one can afford to spend a few days or a few weeks among these kind hearted mountain people.

This section is known as Cherry Rock, and is reached either by the Seaboard Air Line, or Hendersonville, or the Southern Railroad. From Asheville the distance is about 100 miles. A great many editors have gone to view the wonders of this section, and have written glowing articles written by the editors appearing in a few of the many articles written about this section.

Richmond Times.—"Here, with lofty mountains on each hand and the most picturesque scenery of the Rockies, we, a society of editors, have met to see for the first time the real grandeur and sublimity of the mountains."

STOCKMEN THREATEN TO BOYCOTT RAILROADS

Chicago, July 23.—S. N. McClure, of Salt Lake City, secretary of the National Wool Growers' association today declared that stockmen would boycott every railroad that adopted the proposed food conservation plan of refusing to serve spring lambs in their dining cars. According to McClure, the stock dealers will refuse to patronize the diners on these roads and will ship their stock over other lines. A telegram from him received here said: "Our stockmen took their share of Liberty bonds, gave heartily to the Red Cross and will be heavy payers of war taxes. If their products are to be boycotted simply because they have risen in price along with every commodity then our only recourse is to patronize the diners ourselves. If we cannot sell our products then we will stop raising them."

CHARLOTTE OBSERVER

"The shades of night were falling as we drew across the mountains. The harvest moon hung in the sky as we retraced Chimney Rock. At our right was Old Baldy, under whose gigantic cliffs the insignificant mortals were creeping along. The river sang a sweet hymn, and it seemed as if nature was offering her evening prayer to the Creator. It is useless to try to describe the beauties of this region. Do see them for yourself!"

Richmond Review.—"It was up hill and down dale in the valley that in my high hills, and upon skirting the brow of a precipice hung the magnificent mountains. The country between Richardson and Chimney Rock is beautiful."

We stood upon the summit of the rugged and picturesque Chimney Rock, the eye taking in the peaks of a hundred magnificent mountains. The view is simply sublime."

Richmond Dispatch.—"There is not a missing element in this beautiful mountain scenery. No language can depict the grandeur of the scenery. The Broad River certainly is picturesque."

If you have a friend who wants to go to the mountains this year, have them get information about this wonderful section of the mountains, write to Thomas F. Turner, Proprietor, Chimney Rock, Bat Cave, N. C.

CALLED HER FAMILY TO HER BEDSIDE

Six Years Ago, Thinking She Might Die, Says Texas Lady, But Now Clo Is A Well, Strong Woman and Praises Cardui For Her Recovery.

Moyle City, Tex.—Mrs. Mary Kilman, of this place, says: "After the birth of my little girl, my side commenced to hurt me. I had to go back to bed. We called the doctor. He treated me, but I got no better. I got worse and worse until the misery was unbearable. I was in bed for three months and suffered such agony that I was just drawn up in a knot. I told my husband if he would get me a bottle of Cardui I would get up to this."

Do you suffer from headache, backache, pains in sides, or other discomforts, each night? Or do you feel weak, nervous and fagged-out? If so, get Cardui, the woman's tonic, a many days unless I had a change for the better. That was six years ago and I am still here and am a well, strong woman, and I owe my life to Cardui. I had only taken half the bottle when I began to feel better. The misery to my side got less. I continued right on taking the Cardui until I had taken three bottles and I did not need any more for I was well and never felt better in my life. I have never had any trouble from that day to this."
