None the less, when the blood pressure is unquestionably low, it is the cause should be made. More than this, recent researches go to show that the normal pressure standard for adults may be somewhat lower than that generally accepted by the medical profession.

TUESDAY, AUGUST 1.

The man who will reduce our tax bill will be welcomed like a long lost brother. We will kill the fattest calf for him and give him a perpetual annuity day, with bonuses and all. We will serve him grape juice galore, or if this isn't strong enough we'll pay his expenses to Cuba! What we want is a lower tax rate, and we want it worse than a fish in a frying pan wants a drink. Yes, a lot of folks are kicking about taxes, and complaining that they are too heavy. But who is going to lower them? It's all right for an "outsider" to yell for lower taxes but he had better talk to an "insider" and find out how it is going to be done and where the cut is to be made. The writer is not a prophet nor the son of a prophet. But we will wager the hole in a doughnut against the "insider" in a floating blind curtain that taxes are not going to be lowered enough to fill the corner of your eye.

The defeat in the recent primary in Texas of Charles A. Culberson for the Democratic nomination to the United States Senate, has proved himself, brings to an end, temporarily at least, and in all probability permanently, the public career of one of the Lone Star's most distinguished citizens.

For thirty-two consecutive years Senator Culberson has been in the active service of the people of Texas, first as Attorney General for two terms, and as Governor for two terms, and for the last twenty-four years as United States Senator.

In 1896 Jerome C. Kearby, of Dallas, Texas, Populist candidate, came very near being elected Governor Culberson, receiving the largest vote ever polled against the Democratic party in Texas. After this election the type of factionalism presented by the Populists died out rapidly in Texas and no new type of factionalism again rose to any degree of strength in the politics of the State until this year, when the Ku Klux Klan issue was injected into the race, which was the chief element entering into the defeat of Senator Culberson.

This year Senator Culberson wrote a letter to Texas opposing the re-nominated Ku Klux Klan and said, "It must be destroyed." This letter was the beginning of Ku Klux Klan politics in Texas. The Populist candidate and anti-Klan candidate, Senator Culberson being the anti-Klan candidate.

We have become so accustomed to strikes and rumors of strikes that the average American reads the latest news of the politics of the State and thinks with little more than passing interest; worried a bit perhaps at the thought that it might interfere with some contemplated journey or delay the shipment of some purchase he has ordered.

We are sitting on a keg of dynamite; the two industries most essential to our economic and industrial welfare are on the verge of disruption.

The potentialities of the situation are so vast and overwhelming as to justify great anxiety over the outcome. The coal bins at the nation's expense are depleted to the danger point, without coal to turn the wheels of industry and warm the homes of the masses, the life of the nation is in danger. Without the means of transporting the output of the factories to the country and the products of the farm to the city, we cannot live. For weeks the coal strike has been dragging along and is apparently no nearer to a settlement than it was at the beginning.

The railroad strike has just begun and already troop movements are in progress in many parts of the country to preserve law and order. No home bill on tariff bill confronting congress today can collapse in importance with the problems offered by the strikes in progress. The life of the nation is at stake and the sooner we realize it the better.

At some time in this land of ours, the old, old battle between capital and labor will be fought to a finish, and then the whole people will suffer. The strikes that are upon us now contain the menace that is the terror of all organized government. That is the menace of idleness. After a time idle men become hungry men and hunger and idleness are the enemies of all government.

Hunger and idleness are bound for a protracted railroad and coal strike.

As so we pray that the President and his advisers may be led by the hand of wisdom to solve the disputes before them now, with justice to all and with speed, for in their hands they hold the welfare of the land of ours.

The clash in the senate between southern and northern members over charges that efforts had been made to exaggerate lawlessness in a given state or section emphasizes in an unpleasant way the differences that still exist even after nearly sixty years. Sectionalism is the outstanding feature of such an encounter as was precipitated with Senator Calder, of New York, on Georgia; Shields, of Tennessee; and Dial, of South Carolina, on the other hand, was a very national thing for the southern senators to resent Senator Calder's attitude toward the south when he made the effort to have inserted in the Congressional Record a newspaper story of the lynching of two negroes in Georgia.

The southern senators were quick to take advantage of the opportunity to remind the northerners of the lawlessness of other sections than the south. The senate record a newspaper story of the lynching of two negroes in Georgia. The southern senators were quick to take advantage of the opportunity to remind the northerners of the lawlessness of other sections than the south. The senate record a newspaper story of the lynching of two negroes in Georgia.

It is apparent enough that no large section of the United States has the right to emphasize lawlessness while maintaining its own shortcomings. The thing for all Americans to do is to forget sectionalism and to oppose lawlessness no matter where it occurs. Together all Americans face the difficulty of standing together for justice in every section, and that means standing against lawlessness. It is true that the south has been criticized unmercifully by northerners because of its mob, and, as the southern senators now point out, the north has its mobs as well with the difference being that the northern mob goes at its work in a wholesale manner. The encounter in the senate recalls the old saying about it being most unbecoming for the pot to call the kettle black.

GOOD ROAD ALL WAY SOON.

Chester Chamber Co-operating For Charlotte to Columbia Highway Development.

With recent road improvements and those that are under way at this time, the logical route from Charlotte to Columbia is by Port Mill, Rock Hill, Chester, Blackstock, Winnsboro and Edgeway.

With the completion of the highway from Winnsboro to Blythewood, which will link up with the "hard surface road from Columbia, there will be only two bad stretches in the highway from Charlotte to Columbia via Rock Hill, Chester and Winnsboro. These two are from Blackstock to Winnsboro and in the Fort Mill section of York county.

The road from Charlotte to Columbia is already a State Highway designated as route No. 16. It is in the interest of the Charlotte to Columbia highway and the matter of improving the road from Blackstock to Winnsboro will be of first consideration. The proposed Fairfield development will include a new bridge across Broad river.

The people of Port Mill are heartily behind the movement to improve the road in that section. In fact, have practically let a contract for a hard surface road through the town of Fort Mill and funds will be raised, if not already available, to build a good road, although not hard surface, from Port Mill to the Mecklenburg county line.

On the Charlotte to Columbia way all the way through Chester county and in addition to this Chester county has only recently completed a new concrete bridge across South Fork creek, which is a great credit to this county. This bridge is open to traffic.

TONGUE MURDER.

It's easy to believe that somebody may have circulated unkind reports about the apostolic writer, St. James, at some time or other, that some old gossip, woman or man, for the women are not the only gossip-mongers and scandal-handlers, by any means—told tales on the march, whispered the handiwork of the "they say" preface, improving the road from Blackstock to Winnsboro will be of first consideration. The proposed Fairfield development will include a new bridge across Broad river.

It is a pathetic story of what one young woman learned along the line of St. James' description of the tongue. In a note she left, the young woman who took her own life declared that she could not live longer because of false reports which had been circulated about her. Whether or not she had about her. Whether or not she had about her. Whether or not she had about her. Whether or not she had about her.

Of interest to a number of Chester people is the fact that Senator James E. Beauford, of Clover, has entered the race for the House of Representatives in "Rock" county. He has previously served four years in the House and for eight years was Senator from that county.

The "Chicago Tax Experts" who received considerable attention at the hands of the last South Carolina General Assembly, members of which state that the "experts" got $18,000 for their work, have also been doing work in our neighboring state of Georgia. A number of the members of the Georgia legislature are making their own tax returns. The News is in receipt of a copy of a letter written to Governor Hardwick, of Georgia, from Senator Wylie, who recommends and commends the work of the "tax experts."

Rev. Henry Stokes and family left this morning for a few days visit to Lake Junaluska.

John Gary Evans has announced as a candidate for the House of Representatives from Spartanburg county. There are thirteen candidates for the House in Spartanburg county. It will be recalled that Mr. Evans was suggested as a candidate for Governor this year, but as is well known, did not enter the race. J. B. Akkinn, of Spartanburg, who has served his county for six years, declined to make the race this year.

A considerable list has been created among the dancing and music loving people of Chester which the fact became public that the internationally famed Newman Orchestra, of phonographic and radio fame, will be in Chester, N. C., on September 11th to appear this evening at Hardin's Hall under the auspices of the Chester Post, American Legion. The Newman Orchestra needs no introduction to the music and dance lovers of this community, for in any home that has a phonograph there will be found numerous Victor Orchestra records. This organization is now in its fifth annual tour, performing for the most part in the city of Virginia. North and South Carolina and judging by the advance press comment, also by the opinion of some of the clubs who have danced in the "light fantastic" to the strains of this combination, the prevailing forecast among the dancers is that Chester is going to have a night of dancing at Hardin's Hall this evening. The concert, which precedes the dance, will commence at nine o'clock. The dance will commence at nine-thirty o'clock.

The campaign picnic at Filbert tomorrow promises to be of interest to a large number of people in this section of the state who are interested in politics. All of the State candidates are expected to be present, and it is at Filbert where the contest will be "at home." His speech will be of special interest to a large following in that section. A number of Chester people will no doubt attend the picnic.

The government cotton condition report came in today at eleven o'clock and showed same at 70.8, which would estimate a yield of 11,449,000 bales. this course of study in your paper before now and the opening of school.

We have made some changes in the primary and grammar school course of study that very few changes have been made in the high school course of study. In the primary and grammar grades, we have followed the present state adoption as near as possible, except in the geographies. We have been using the Tarr and McMurtry series of books and will continue to use this series as revised by McMurtry and Parkins of Columbia University. We are using an unusually fine set of reading books in the primary grades. Much thought and care has been given to the selection of these books. In the high school we are going to use "The Sentence and Theme" in the eighth grade, which is the finest beginners book I have ever seen. We will use Smith's eighth grade Latin grammar, instead of Collier and Daniels'. These two books will be the only changes in the high school course of study. One advantage of using the state list in the lower grades is that the contract price to the State of South Carolina is much cheaper than buying the books direct from the publishers. Chester is exempt from using the State list by a Special Act of the Legislature. But in order to conform with the general rules of the people we use just as many of them as we deem advisable. Another addition to the course of study is the use of the Hollis-Dann Music Course in all the grades, through the seventh. It will also be of interest to the patrons of Chester to know that we are going to have a part time vocal music supervisor, Miss Mary Hines of Seneca, S. C. Miss Hines is a daughter of Dr. E. A. Hines, Secretary of the S. C. Medical Association and Editor of the S. C. Medical Journal. Miss Hines graduated from Winthrop in 1921 and is especially gifted in music. There will be more about the school later.

Yours truly,
M. E. BROCKMAN.

EASY TO TRACE EVOLUTION.

Probably That of the Horse is the Most Perfect of Which There is Evidence.

There is no record no more perfect example of evolution than the horse. Under the able direction of Prof. Henry Fairfield Osborn, the distinguished president of the American Museum of Natural History, the greatest collection of fossil horses in the world has been brought together in the museum. We have so detailed a record that the complete evolution of the horse, from the tiny, five-toed, forest-living, cretaceous ancestor, to Man of War, the most perfect living horse, is there, for all to trace, writes Roy Chapman Andrews in Asia Magazine.

The horse, we know, originated in Wyoming and adjacent parts of the West. At first he was a shy, retiring creature, no larger than a terrier with five toes on feet adapted to the soft, springy ground of the forests. As the wooded area began to decrease in extent, the horse's performance changed his habits, becoming more and more a plains-living animal dependent upon speed to protect him from enemies. Since his five-toed feet were not adapted for swift running on hard ground, the middle toe gradually developed the hoof, and the side digits disappeared, except for the so-called "splint-bones." In horses as we know them today. The causes that forced the evolution of the horse are in certain respects similar to those that we see affecting in human evolution.

Many theories concerning the evolution of man have been advanced by eminent scientists. That proposed by the late Prof. Joseph Barrill of Yale University has much to recommend it.

Professor Barrill believes that, as the forests decreased and the anthropoid apes could no longer retreat southward because of the great barrier of the Himalaya mountains, they were forced to adapt themselves to a life upon the ground. Whether or not they did this from necessity or choice, it seems almost sure that the progenitor of man was a "ground ape"—a creature living on nuts and roots and, when in danger, running to the trees for safety. As he gradually lost the shelter of the forest, he had to acquire the means of protecting himself and of embedding the middle of the ground. This led to a continual life, hands with unopposed thumb with which to grip sticks and stones to be used in defense, an erect posture and a foot adapted to swift and sustained running. These bodily changes, which were of profound importance, must have taken place very slowly—in hundreds of thousands of years. The physical adaptations carried with them a mental development correspondingly remarkable. Thus it is, says Professor Barrill, that man diverged from the parent ape-look.

RAIL WAGES AND LIVING COSTS

Much has been made by the railroad strikers' charge that the Railroad Labor Board has been "basing the rates of pay upon a minimum rate of 23 cents an hour, $1.84 a day or $63 a year." It is a striking argument which pictures an American workman and his family seated at table and asking, "Can I live on $63 a year?"

A striking argument, but is it a fair one? No, and for several reasons. The Labor Board based the rates of pay upon that 23-cent rate. That rate applies only to section men, the lowest paid form of railroad labor, and to section men in only a very small section of the country. Section men under the recent decisions of the board get from 25 to 35 cents an hour and the fact that the average rate is 32.7 cents shows how few would come under the 23-cent rate. Those few are on a small number of divisions—of some southern and southwestern roads in places where costs of living is low and where the men get, in many instances, free living quarters. Furthermore, these men in 1913 got but 15 cents an hour and in 1911 but 10.3¢. Or, take it from the angle of what the wages will buy and (the figures are the Labor Board's) the purchasing power of that 23 cents per hour is 44.5 per cent greater than the purchasing power of the 1915 wages.

And this last consideration holds true of the wages of all others affected by the board's recent decision. Living costs are higher than in 1915, but wages have outstripped living costs. The stationary engineer can buy 70 per cent more than he could in 1915, boiler room water tender 25 per cent more. These instances might be multiplied, but let us get back to our starting point. The Labor Board never did base rates of pay upon a minimum of 23 cents an hour. It fixed that rate for one small group of labor in one section of the country and it did this and the pay of similar labor after considering local living conditions and the pay of similar labor in other industries.—The Nation's Business.

MAKE A MISTAKE.

The following item is from "the Fox Hill Times of recent date": "Hon. O. W. Potts and his neighbor, Dick Wolfe, of the Pleasant Valley neighborhood seem to have caught the entomologist (bug inspector) of Clemson college napping. Some days ago Mr. Wolfe found in a plum, which he had gathered from his orchard a number of insects which he thought resembled the boll weevil. He showed the insects to Mr. Potts and they agreed to send them to Clemson for identification. Mr. Potts mailed part of the insects to the college with a cotton square as Mr. Wolfe the other with a plum similar to the one in which all had been found. In a few days reports came from the Clemson entomologists that the insects forwarded with the cotton square were genuine boll weevils, while the others were pronounced "plum gnawers."
