Forum held

President Lader and a panel of faculty members fielded questions from students during a student forum sponsored by the SGA held in Kerrey Auditorium Wednesday night.

Questions and complaints about security and lighting for parking lots, rude construction crews, cultural requirements and user fees for campus buildings were addressed among other things.

The auditorium was only 75 percent full. Attendance was down compared to the spring forum sponsored last year by the Student Government Association and the presidential interns.

Jeff Mann, vice president for student life, was the forum moderator. President Phil Lader, John Presto, Athletic Director Steve Vacendak, Vice President for Academics Mike Smith, Public Safety Chief Bob Williams and Vice President for Budget and Finance Tucker Johnson were among the panel members who attempted to answer students’ questions.

When one student asked why beer and tobacco ads aren’t being carried on the new coliseum marquees, Vacendak replied, “It was an attempt to use discretion.” He emphasized that the school was trying to get “more shows and more entertainment of a family nature.”

About the products themselves, he said they “won’t be available.” Lader also replied that this was a “policy adopted by the trustees.”

Another student asked how often the gravel parking lot behind Johnson was patrolled by security. Williams replied that the lot was patrolled every few minutes.

He also announced that of the three cars broken into, public safety signed a warrant on a non-student three days ago for two of those incidents. Mann spoke on ways students could protect themselves and their property, the best way being to rely on themselves. There is no way on this green earth that we can insure your personal safety with the security force we have, although we give our best effort,” he said.

One student asked how long students can park on the yellow lines on the streets next to dorms before getting a ticket. Mann explained that those were fire lanes that have to be kept open at all times. “You don’t have any time on those yellow lines,” he said.

When questioned about the rude behavior of some of the construction workers toward female students, Presto announced that three workers from the Bancroft renovation had been given the “pink slip” and that two other workers from the Phelps project were fired because of complaints about their behavior.

A fraternity member asked why building rent fees were so high. Mann explained that the fees should be borne by whoever benefits (renter), not everyone as a whole.

When asked why Epicure is the only source for purchasing alcohol on campus, Mann replied that Epicure was the only contractor with a liquor license that was allowed to sell on campus, according to state law.

The forum continued until past 11 p.m. By then the audience had dwindled, and questions had been reduced to complaints about parking tickets. Mann adjourned the meeting around 11:15. Another student forum will be sponsored by the SGA and the presidential interns in the spring.

Search committee seeks Lader’s successor

By VIOLETTA WESTON

The Board of Trustees appointed a presidential search committee to find a successor for Phil Lader who resigned as president of Winthrop College in July.

The committee, comprised of six members, includes Dr. Terry Peterson, Governor Richard Riley’s representative on the board and committee chairperson, Dr. Gerald Perselay, faculty representative, Brett Smith, SGA president, and Elizabeth Singleton, Merritt Wilkerson and Mary C. McElveen, three members on the board of trustees.

The committee is looking for someone with a distinguished academic background, successful academic or business administrative experience at a senior level and dynamic leadership ability.

The committee is also looking for other qualities which include the ability to work successfully with constituents of the college including faculty, staff, students, alumni and friends. Lader’s successor must also have effective communication and relation skills to work with the general public, state legislature, and the Commission on Higher Education.

Deadline for applications was Sunday, Sept. 18, 1983. At that time, approximately 150 applications had been received.

Peterson, chairman of the committee, was unavailable for comment, but Brett Smith, student representative, had this to say: “This (choosing a new president) is a tremendous opportunity (for the board) to elect more dynamic people here at Winthrop. I feel fortunate to be a part of a six-person committee who will make a decision which could change the direction of Winthrop. It’s a good opportunity.”

Changes in Safety policy made

By TOM STEARNS

New night clerks and stricter enforcement of campus policy are among the changes in the residence life office and public safety department in order to ensure the safety of Winthrop students.

Chief Robert Williams, head of Winthrop public safety, said recently, “We’ve been trying to keep an eye out for any potential problems, especially since the incident that happened in the apartments last year.”

Williams was referring to a Winthrop co-ed who was raped in her apartment last spring.

While the public safety office to Griffin, is the night clerk in taking extra caution in dealing the apartments. “There was not with incidents around campus, a regular officer in the apartments last year. There is now a regular guard there with a radio and the Commission on Higher Education.

Cynthia Cassens, dean of students, explained, “We have a new security company, Mark IV new security company, Mark IV officer stationed in Richardson, Rodkey and Breszale, and Bancroft Annex. They are in charge of making sure no unauthorized students enter the building after hours. They also report unusual incidents to public safety.”

Frankie Griffin, assistant director of housing security, said, “Mark IV has installed night clerks in the co-ed and male dorms. They are on duty from 11:30 at night until 7:30 the next morning. They perform the same tasks as the night clerks in the other buildings, which is to make sure only authorized students are allowed into the building. All hall offices are manned by students during the rest of the day.”

One major change, according to Williams, was the forum held on campus. “We felt bad about that incident,” Williams said. “We had a very good record as far as incidents such as that happening, much better than the averages say we should have. And, of course, no matter how tight your security is, things can still go wrong. But still, we are trying our best to make sure things like that don’t happen again.”

The Johnsonian Staff
S.O.B. to offer seminars

By VIOLETTA WESTON
TJ staff writer

The School of Business Administration will offer a series of seminars beginning September 24. Titled Senior Seminars, the coordinator of the Senior Seminar Program, says, "The seminars are very informal with a great deal of interaction with the instructors. The discussion leaders will be James W. Pearce and Dale Dove, two local attorneys and Winthrop College faculty member Jerry Smith. Roger D. Weikle, assistant professor of management and coordinator of the Senior Seminar Program, says, "The programs are a good idea. The topics to be covered are some things people need to know."

Weikle added, 'This year's programs are on a trial run. The students are the ones who will determine how far it goes. But we hope to sponsor something like this every semester.' The seminars are divided into four different sessions. Each session will cover such topics as "Understanding the Basics of Contracts, Real Estate Agreements and Laws, How to Get the Most Bang for Your Buck, and Will Estates, Family Law: How to Keep It All in the Family." The instructors will also offer short topics and questions should time permit.

The School of Business Administration is looking forward to good attendance at the seminars. Weikle concluded, "I think we owe it to the students to offer a program like this. That way, students won't end up in debt once they are out of school, and they don't end up signing their lives away either."

The program is open to all Winthrop College seniors and any other interested parties.

Alpha Kappa Psi wins award

By JUDY ALSTON
TJ staff writer

The Iota Phi chapter of Alpha Kappa Psi Business Fraternity at Winthrop College was ranked number one in the nation and the Southeast Region on their performance throughout 1984-85. Carmen Alston, Scott Rhein and Roslyn Jeffcoat attended the National Convention held in St. Louis, Missouri on August 20-26, 1985.

Iota Phi Chapter is one of the nine chapters in the Southeast region to receive the award. The Southeast Region is the number one region in the nation.

Carmen Alston, first black president of the chapter, said, "We are very proud of this award since we are considered a small chapter." The Iota Phi Chapter currently has 30 members. The award is given based on performance evaluation. Each chapter is graded by points for their performance throughout the year. When a chapter reaches 100,000 points, they receive national recognition. Points are based on the number of speakers, fundraisers, meetings, member, social activities, and business activities that a chapter features.

Alpha Kappa Psi is a professional National Business Fraternity with 146,000 chapters nationwide. Alston said, "Our purpose is to distinguish a student, and a better business professor relationship through our work with the School of Business and outside businesses." The fraternity helps with career day, and many fundraisers such as credit card sign-ups. They are interested in recruiting more members, especially second semester freshmen, sophomores, juniors and 1st semester seniors.

The award is given based on a chapter's performance. "This year's programs are on a trial run. The students are the ones who will determine how far it goes. But we hope to sponsor something like this every semester," says Weikle.

Fine Arts schedules events

Isaac Stern, concert violinst, will be featured in this year's Fine Art Series.

"Isaac Stern is the premier violinst on the planet," said John Alan Presto, president for administration and planning.

The Fine Arts Series is a joint venture between Winthrop College and the Rock Hill Fine Arts Association.

"The Fine Arts Series is a cultural experience that Winthrop provides for the students and the Fine Arts Association provides for area residents," Presto said. "Presto hopes to "fill the auditorium" for Isaac Stern's performance. "This may be the only chance many will be able to see a musician of this stature."

Also on the list this year is the Salt Lake City Symphonic Choir, the largest independent tour choir in America, will be featured on April 5. Another performance scheduled for April is the Winthrop College Music Celebration on April 19.

Extremities featured

By TOM STEARNS
TJ staff writer

The Winthrop Theatre will open its 1985-86 season this week with Extremities, a character study of the relationship between attacker and victim. The show will run Wednesday, September 25 through September 28, at 8 p.m. in the Johnson Auditorium.

Blair Beasley, director of the play, said, "Everything is going well. The sets are finished, the performers are ready, and everything will be completed by Monday. "It's an extremely difficult play to do, but I'm very pleased with the way it's taking shape."

One thing that makes the play difficult to present is its explicit sexual references.

Extrmities is about a girl who is sexually assaulted in her home. Students are invited to attend. "From the main concern of the play is whether she will kill him," Beasley said.

"By this point she is as much an animal as he is. The remainder of the show deals with how she and her roommates intend to resolve the problem."

Support TJ
Faculty should be screened

By LISA BUIE
TJ editor

What makes a good teacher? According to some students, a good teacher is one who knows his subject and can make his students understand it. Therefore, in order to make students understand, the teacher must possess a wide variety of communication skills. Naturally, the ability to speak in terms and language that students understand is paramount in the learning process. One would like to think that institutions such as Winthrop would consider that aspect when selecting professors. However, this doesn't always appear to be the case, especially in the math department.

This is exemplified in the fact that students have complained about a particular professor that they can't understand. This professor was hired in August before school started. According to the students, he doesn't speak English very well.

It appears that the administration only wanted to fill a vacancy when they hired this faculty member. They didn't care about who students could relate to.

In a problem solving class like mathematics, it is crucial that students concentrate on understanding formulas and solutions. If they must spend their time trying to decipher the instructions instead of the problems, then a new problem is created.

This is not meant to be a reflection on the professor or the current chairman, but rather on their superiors.

If professors were screened more carefully, the problem would cease to exist.

Pedestrians jeopardized

By MONNIE WHITSON
TJ news editor

Excuse me, but do you know what a pedestrian crossing is? You know, those two white lines running parallel across the road. These areas allow pedestrians to cross without having to wait for cars to pass. This means that automobiles must slow down or completely stop so that we, the students and other pedestrians, may cross.

But there's a slight problem, my fellow students. You're not stopping for pedestrians. You're not stopping and it makes me very angry.

I used to wait for you to drive by first, yes, you in that car, my dear student, traveling about 35 mph in a 20 mph zone.

But not anymore. Now I simply walk between my two lines, minding my own business, while I'm sitting comfortably in the plush interior of my automobile - and you know what? I might not be responsible for my actions.

And then you see me walking slowly across the road with my head down, slumped shoulders, feet dragging behind, sweat pouring from my face - and what do you do? Speed up and attempt to splatter my body all over the road.

Thanks - thank you so much for your kindness and thoughtfulness. Thank you for the courtesy you have shown me so well.

Let me just tell you this - I don't forget faces. I know who you are. I might see you one day walking between your little white lines, while I'm sitting comfortably in the plush interior of my automobile - and you know what? I might not be responsible for my actions.

Boy, what a day

By MARK WOOD

I just knew that today was going to be a bad day.
I got to bed late, I got up early, and I had to endure another boring philosophy class.

But my problems really started when I picked up my State newspaper and saw former President Richard Nixon's face on the front page. That was the low point of an otherwise imperfect day.

Unfortunately, the tragedy did not end here. When I opened up the paper and saw the headline that adorned the top of page 6-A I nearly went into a state of comatose. The headline read, "Reagan consults Nixon about Gorbachev summit."

What an unsettling thought.

So the fact that Reagan has stuck his foot in his mouth on numerous occasions is quite obvious. The disturbing thing is that people completely disregard these incidents and act as though they never happened.

When I read that the president of the United States was asking a man who had to resign that same office 11 years ago in disgrace is a fact that should be taken into consideration.

Well, now that I've gotten all this off my chest I had better go study for my religion test. See, I told you today was going to be a bad day.

The Board or Big Brother?

By JAMES DEDES

"Censorship can make the world a better place." "What?"
"I responded as my roommate encouraged me to continue reading the advertisement. "Censorship can make your life easier. When somebody else makes decisions about what you can read, see and hear, you don't have to think as much." "Come on," I said. Winthrop students don't have to worry about things like censorship. Or do we?

Once upon a time, in a land called Winthrop, the Great Board of Trustees grew restless. "Let us build a marque and billboards in our beautiful coliseum to produce revenue for the athletic program," they dictated. So it came to be. And the advertisers came forth and produced much gold to exercise their right to be seen. All except two. You see, the Great Board ruled that there shall be no tobacco or alcoholic beverage advertisements on our billboards. "But why not?" cried the seniors. "Those advertisements have always been in good taste!"

"Silence!" rumbled the omnipotent Board of Trustees. "We don't like them, so let them not be seen."

"But what about all of the gold, gifts and generous support of athletics, scholarships and public service programs these advertisers already provide for us?" "WHAT IF THEY CUT OFF ALL OF THIS SUPPORT?" "Silence" rumbled The Board. And there was silence. That was easy," said The Board. "Now what about those ads in that loathsome Johnsonian, and gun ads and beer lights in dorm rooms, and..."

Volleyball team
Serves it up right
By LAURIE ANN DEDES
TJ sports editor

The Winthrop College volleyball team is shaping up in the Big South Conference. Although they have lost their first two games (Clemson defeated them 15-9, 15-11; Coastal Carolina Sept. 26) they seem to have a fair amount of depth. Ginger Rowell seems to be the top server for the team with a 91 percent efficiency. Of 46 serves, Rowell has made 42 errors. She has served three times with a 71 percent efficiency. Rowell has 27 attack attempts, has made eight kills with only six errors.

Janet Dykton appears to be the most outstanding player on the court. Her service efficiency is 93 percent. Of 24 service attempts, Dykton has had three service aces and only three errors. Of 71 attack attempts she had 21 kills with only 11 errors.

Melinda Eubanks has accumulated a 91 percent serve efficiency. Of 35 service attempts Eubanks made only three errors and has pounded two service aces. Of 22 attack attempts Eubanks had 11 kills with two errors.

Hazel Turnbell continues to pace Winthrop as well. From 33 service attempts she's had only four service errors. Of 54 attack attempts she has made 15 kills with only seven errors.

Winthrop has one of the youngest teams in quite sometime due to freshmen being played more. Winthrop has started with a 1-2 record which is not typical of the team. But don't cancel them out. Last year the ladies were at 2-5 in the beginning and finished with a respectable 28-15. Head Coach Cathy Ivester is concerned about the team's slow start but says that the teams they have lost to are Clemson and Appalachian State. These are both Division I teams and have finished in the top six of the Sun Belt.

The team has improved from their first game. Although they lost Tuesday their performance was the best I've seen it thus far. And why shouldn't it be? It's taken a while to get started, but says that the teams they have lost to are not the most difficult.

The volleyball team will go against Clemson at Clemson Sept. 24. The Lady Eagles will also be on the road against Coastal Carolina Sept. 26.

Trainers keep athletes fit
By TRISH McKITRICK
TJ sports writer

A basketball game is in the last few minutes of the first quarter. No one has scored when all of a sudden our star player surprises everyone (maybe even himself) and catches the rebound from our opposing team. As he is running with full intentions of a dunk to our basket, an opposing player somehow gets himself tangled up in our team's legs. Our Eagles end up flat on his face. However, from out of nowhere, quick as a flash, one of our trainers is there and ready to treat the serious injury of our Eagle's discomfor.

Winthrop's team of trainers is under the direction of Dr. Joe Kinney. The students who make up the respected team of hard workers, that help to make sports activities possible here at Winthrop, are as follows: Larry Baker, sophomore; Tom Burns, graduate; Katrina Eure, sophomore; Julie Johanna, freshman; Scott Mosely, graduate assistant; Cheryl Parris, freshman; and Reena White, freshman. These students devote an enormous amount of their time to learn training techniques. Katrina Eure said, "In order to become a trainer, one needs to be a hard worker, love the work, and have no desire to get rich!"

"To most people the trainer is visible only when a player gets hurt during a game. Head trainer Kinney said, "During the game they watch and react to any situations that might occur." However, the majority of the trainers' work is done before and after the game. The name of 'trainer' goes back to the Dark Ages, according to Kinney. He said, "A more accurate title would be 'athletic therapist.'"

The student trainers are taught bandaging techniques, first aid and conditioning and reconditioning procedures.

"A trainer's number one job is to prevent an injury," Kinney said. "Each trainer is assigned to a particular sport and is to help provide preventive care to athletes. They check to see if a player has a problem before if then he would be taped," said Kinney. "If an injury does occur then 'the trainer's job is to treat and rehabilitate,'" said Kinney. The trainer is not a doctor and is limited to what he can do for treatment. "If the injury is serious, then we are responsible for getting the athlete into qualified hands," said Eure. Dr. Haefele is the team physician and is on call during all games.

After a player has been treated the trainer still has the responsibility of making him strong. "Treatment is not complete if there is not a rehabilitation period. Once the pain is gone, the player can still be weak," said Kinney. According to Scott Mosely, rehabilitating a player is one of the most difficult, yet worth-while aspects of training. "I find it a challenge to get injured players rehabilitated. If the job is done right and the injury is not too serious, then we can get the player back into action with a full 110 percent!"

The trainer's job isn't restricted to just treating an injury or restrengthening the muscles; he is often faced with emotional or sociological problems to handle. Athletes, by their very nature, tend to develop tensions. The trainer is in an excellent position to help ease or even prevent such tensions. Kinney said, "Trainers basically stick to a single team in order to get to know the players. The trainer's job is one that requires tact and a certain amount of abruptness."

The right word spoken at the right time can often resolve a situation that could develop into an unfortunate circumstance. David Wood, a cross country runner, said, "My experiences with Winthrop trainers has been very positive, they always give 100 percent."
Gutierrez lands job

With all the new changes in the 85 Winthrop athletic department, the men's basketball team added a new graduate assistant to go with their remaining staff. Glenn Gutierrez comes to Winthrop after playing ball at West Liberty State in West Virginia. Gutierrez, a native of Williamstown, West Virginia, played four years at West Liberty with his last three seasons as a starter. He is also a native of Sao Paulo.

Gutierrez\'s rank in the state in men's career, he was the top player for the Eagles this year. The challenge is competing in the NCAA on a regular basis. The experience of playing NCAAs schools is nothing new for Gutierrez's Lady Eagles.

Winthrop, a perennial NAIA national powerhouse, has battled many DI powerhouse programs, included among these is the University of South Carolina. Gutierrez said, "Our schedule over the last few years, has included a number of Division I teams, and we have played .700 ball against them. So I expect us to do well this year."

Gutierrez has seven starters returning from a 36-12 squad, players, especially Paige Nichols, but we have a great NAIA tournament last summer.deal of potential in our incoming class."

Eagle Odyssey not a good one
By SHARON HIX

The Winthrop Eagles scored four goals over King College, and they had 11 more shots on goal than their UNC-Asheville opponent. Ralph Carrero had one goal and two assists by his name, and Choco Gutierrez, Doug Aldridge, and Frank Wagner each contributed to the Eagles' scoring. That's the good news. Now, the rest of the story...

King College scored six goals creating a loss in overtime, 6-4, and UNC-Asheville scored a goal on a penalty kick, making the third loss for the Eagles this season. 1-0. Back Alex Herrera is injured as is goalie Bryan Cribbs, and one has to wonder what will happen as the season progresses.

With three tough matches down the Eagles are taking a week to re-group before their next match. Forced to play with 10 players for the second half of the UNC-Asheville match, due to Winthrop goalie being ejected from the game on a penalty, the Eagles continued to dominate play despite the fact.

"I've never seen a team dominate the play so much, and still lose games like we have," commented a Winthrop player.

Eagles play at home on Monday, September 23, at 4:00 against Francis Marion College. With a week to prepare for this one and a week to rejuvenate in injuries, the Eagles are preparing to turn the tide around on their luck.

Gerald Hendrix resigns position
By JILL ZEIGLER

Gerald Hendrix, tennis coach here at Winthrop for the past five years, officially resigned Friday. Hendrix has decided to make a major change in his career by moving from coaching men's and women's tennis to biochemical research. He will take on his new job at the school of medicine at East Carolina University. Hendrix is being replaced by Cid Carvahlo, a former student and tennis player here at Winthrop.

When asked how he felt about suddenly leaving the players in the hands of a new coach, Hendrix said that it probably would not affect their upcoming performances. "Since I'm resigning early in the semester, there won't be a big effect on the players," commented Hendrix. "They'll have plenty of time to get used to Cid's coaching."

And that they have! Carvahlo runs with the players Monday through Friday, beginning at 6:30 in the morning.

Three of his goals that came against Winthrop were on penalty kicks, (which is a shot taken straight at the goalie from the top of the penalty box), and no other defenders can assist him.

The penalty kicks killed us this week-end. We played hard and should have beaten every team that we have played," was the common comment from the Winthrop team.

The Eagles play at home on Monday, September 23, at 4:00 against Francis Marion College. With a week to prepare for this one and a week to rejuvenate in injuries, the Eagles are preparing to turn the tide around on their luck.

The program will include seminars, guest speakers and displays to promote career awareness for all students.

Masone, who has been with the placement office since December 1984 and director since July 1985, said, "The purpose of this program is to not only make students aware of business and school opportunities, but to let the businesses and schools know we do have well-educated students open for positions."

The daily activities will be held in Dinkins Student Center, and the evening events will be held in Kinard Hall. The Student Affairs building will act as the center for the program.

Resume and interviewing seminars will be held on Monday and Tuesday from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Included in this time are several guest speakers, including Masone. On Wednesday, local school districts will set up displays for students. On Thursday, businesses, government agencies and non-profit organizations will set up displays.

The evening programs will feature several speakers in Kinard. Dr. Bill Wells, director of counseling, has been confirmed as one of these speakers.

The program is open to all students regardless of class or major. Masone said, "These companies will be looking for students with good writing and communication skills."

"We have a number of businesses recruiting on campus. We encourage students, especially seniors, to check into us," said Masone.

Alcorn to perform

By LORI CASALE
TJ staff writer

Ken Alcorn, mime, will perform at Dinkins Student Center on Thursday, October 3. He will "create illusions from air, tell stories with movements and express ideas, philosophies and dreams."

Alcorn has been performing for college students for about five years. He also plays at clubs and for charity organizations, such as the New Jersey Hunger Project. He was the Master of Ceremonies at the Superdance for Muscular Dystrophy in 1984.

At Winthrop, Alcorn will perform two 45-minute shows, between which there will be a brief intermission. The program, which consists of many short scenes with a musical background, will be held on the first floor of Dinkins. It will start at about 11:45 a.m. and will be free for everyone.

DSU hopes that the time and location of this show will allow for many students to see it.

"Ken Alcorn is really good. He's an excellent performer and I think the students will love his Project. He was the Master of program," said Ann Howell, DSU's assistant director of student activities.

Circle K helps others

By LORI CASALE
TJ staff writer

The Circle K Club is in its second year at Winthrop College. Last year, Circle K, sponsored by the Rock Hill Kiwanis Club, was a service organization through which college students can help both their communities and their campus.

Winthrop's Circle K received its charter in the fall of 1984. Last year's main project was helping the Children's Attention Home. Members painted rooms in the home and also took the children on several outings. "I think we did very well last year, considering that we were a new organization," said Charles Camp, Circle K Vice President.

This year, the club has a lot of new members and hopes to be active in many community projects.

Some projects planned by Circle K for this year include clowning for Nursing Homes and Institutions for the Mentally Retarded, continuing to help the Children's Attention Home, and visiting children in area hospitals. The club also hopes to become involved in United Way's Big Brother - Big Sister program.

Sex seminar held

By MAGGIE ZALAMEA
TJ staff writer

During the week of Sept. 18-19, the Kappa Alpha Psi's sponsored Human Sexuality Seminar was held in Dinkins. According to Stanley Graham, who counseled the students of the "Male's Place," a family planning center in Charlotte.

Dr. Bennett's topic on abortion was presented to students interested in this program. "The interest is there, but sex is a very sensitive subject," Bennett said. "We have a lot of members interested in this program," said Becky Hamilton, Circle K vice president. "We'd like to be a part of it this year," said Hamilton.

Circle K will have a booth at Halloween Happening to help raise money for projects.

The club presently has 23 members and is hoping more students will join. "We want to grow," Hamilton said. "so that we're able to help even more people in our community.

Circle K club meetings are held every Tuesday at 8 p.m. in room 230 Dinkins. All interested students are welcome.

Circle K officers for 1985-86 include: Becky Hamilton, president; Charles Camp, vice president; Denise Morton, secretary, and Eddie Beavers, treasurer. Kiwanis and Circle K advisor is Dr. Houk.

Students interested in helping others are enjoying doing so through Circle K. "We're working for a good cause," said Hamilton. "I really like helping people and I get this same feeling from others at the meetings. Everyone is very enthusiastic," Hamilton added.
