CHESTER MAN TO CLEMSON.

Clemson people will be interested in the following dispatch from Clemson College:

Dr. W. M. Riggs, president of the college, announces the appointment of Dr. George Dawson Heath as official surgeon for Clemson as a successor to Dr. A. M. Redfern, who is retiring after 27 years of faithful and efficient service.

Dr. Heath is a native of Chester, and was graduated at Porter Military Academy and the Citadel before entering the medical department of the University of Louisville, Ky., which he received his M. D. degree in 1907. In 1908 he was commissioned as first lieutenant in the medical reserve corps, and immediately took a year's course in the army medical school at Washington. He served in the general hospital at San Francisco and at Fort Logan, Colo., during 1909 and 1910. He then went to the Philippine islands where he remained three years until March, 1913, during which time he was commissioned as captain.

Dr. Heath's health was impaired by his long typical service, and he was retired in 1914, but retaining his health he entered the University of Michigan, graduated with the degree of master of science, and afterwards did post graduate work at Columbia University, Cornell Medical School, and the New York Post Graduate Medical School. Locating in Birmingham, Ala., he practiced his profession until 1917 when he re-entered active service and held the rank of major when discharged in 1919. During a part of this last army service he was camp physician and head of the medical department at Camp Saylor, Greenville.

The college authorities feel that in Dr. Heath they have secured a most able and experienced physician and worthy successor of Dr. Redfern.

Mr. W. F. Caldwell, of Washington, D. C., is spending a few days in Chester with relatives.

The concrete road from Rock Hill to Catawba river through the Cherry farm was hard-hit by the cloud-burst of last Friday. In two places along the road the underdrainage proved insufficient to take care of the tremendous volume of water that tried to push its way through, and the outside of the embankment was badly washed. The concrete surface was not broken, however. The macadam extension of the road from the concrete work to the river suffered severely.—Yorkville Enquirer.

CHESTER,

SOUTH CAROLINA

THE TRYING SUMMER DAYS.

We are supposed to be fairly well advanced on the long midsummer period, but if we look at the calendar and count the days until the beginning of fall we shall see that it is not so soon to begin to prepare for the cooler days, when the winter's work must be taken up again, if, indeed, it ever has been entirely laid aside.

There are in the South there are a few signs yet to preface the coming of fall, the scabbie continues her work and sultry and there are few persons who are able to bestir themselves with thoughts of work. It is hard enough as it is to gather the energy to continue in harness without going out of one's way to play for other work and other interests. The kind of weather we have been enduring during the past few weeks is only typical of what we might expect during the midsummer and the first part of summer, but this year it seems to be unusually trying, perhaps because of the comparatively comfortable season until recently that we have had in Charleston this year. But whatever our feelings may be as regards the temperature and the lack of energy so conspicuous in August, the season is fast approaching its end, and notwithstanding the trying weather conditions, the farmer of Time is pointing to the fall days just ahead.

The careful housewife has probably by this time laid in her winter supply of fuel, thus safeguarding her household from any possible inconvenience as to coal problems and, in addition, getting that much responsibility off her mind. Now is the time also to look after the furnace and grates, the plumbing and gutters, the necessary repairs that are always developing and the thousand and one things that add comfort and coziness to home life. Already the business man is opening up his fall supplies of merchandise, new winter clothes are beginning to make their appearance in stores and feather hats and woolen sweaters, and other feminine attire are pointing the way to home life. Already the business man is opening up his fall supplies of merchandise, new winter clothes are beginning to make their appearance in stores and feather hats and woolen sweaters, and other feminine attire are pointing the way to home life.

THE SOUTH FACES THE BATTLE OF THE YEARS IN COTTON PRICES THIS FALL. The Public Health Service at Washington estimates that in food alone it costs the people of the United States one cent a day apiece to maintain the rat population. Any one who thinks a cent a day doesn't amount to anything should be a little figuring. It comes to $3.65 a year apiece, or nearly $400,000,000 a year for the whole nation. And that sum, be it noted, represents the interest on about $10,000,000,000 of government bonds, which in turn is about half the nation's net war debt.
