Panama seeks Force of 10,000

Use of the Marines to Enforce Award

Washington, Aug. 21—The Department of State yesterday issued an order authorizing the recruitment of 10,000 marines under the terms of a treaty between the United States and Panama. The marines will be used to enforce the arbitral award of the International Court of Justice in the dispute between Panama and Colombia over the Soledad Islands.

The United States government has taken this action in response to the recent failure of Colombia to comply with the terms of the arbitral award. The award, made in favor of Panama, required Colombia to evacuate the Soledad Islands and pay reparations to Panama. Colombia has refused to comply with these terms, and the United States has determined that the use of military force is necessary to ensure compliance with the award.

The recruitment of the marines is expected to take several months, and the marines will be stationed in Panama until the dispute is resolved. The United States government has also been in discussions with other countries, including France and Britain, to seek their support in enforcing the award. The United States has expressed its intention to use military force if necessary to maintain peace and order in the region.

The use of military force by the United States is a clear indication of the severity of the dispute and the determination of the United States to uphold its international obligations. The United States has a long history of using military force to enforce international law, and this action is likely to be seen as a strong signal to other countries of the consequences of non-compliance with arbitral awards.

Baron Rothschild, the famous Parisian Banker, in refusing a loan to a friend, said:

"I won't lend you the money, but I will let you walk arm in arm with me across the floor of the stock exchange. That will get you all the credit you need." And it did.

Advisors in Several Councils Call Out for Work, Home Envelopment

New York, Aug. 25—What was intended to be a joke on the part of a group of workmen in the section of the city where they are employed has turned into an actual fight. A few days ago, a group of workmen, observing the manner in which a certain politician was delivering speeches to the public, decided to passively resist his efforts. The politician, who is known to be a strong advocate of the Republican Party, had been making speeches in the area for several days, and the workmen were determined to show their disapproval of his views.

The workmen, who are employed by the city, decided to refuse to work for the politician, and instead to focus their energies on other tasks. The politician, who had been expecting a large turnout for his speeches, was taken by surprise by the workmen's actions. He tried to speak to the workmen, but they refused to listen to him.

The Cleveland holds a distinctive place among district by the constant, better service it renders to its owners.

On the boulevards or country roads, the Cleveland performs as few cars perform. In its highly refined overhead-valve motor, found under the hood of no other car, is alive with power that smiles at long hills and welcomes a request for speed. Power, too, that through the years has been constantly added to; that now gives you the results you demand.

The Cleveland is not only a machine of beauty but also a machine of power. It is alive with the new spirit of the day. It is the result of years of research and development. It is the spirit of the future.

The results of this research are evident in every part of the car. The body is graceful, streamlined, and perfectly proportioned. The wheels are light and powerful. The suspension is perfect. The steering is smooth and effortless. The clutch is smooth and efficient. The brakes are powerful.
The engine is quiet and economical. The speed meter is accurate. The dashboard is well arranged.
The interior is luxurious. The seats are soft and comfortable. The windows are large and ergonomically correct. The dashboard is well arranged.
The Cleveland is not only a machine of beauty but also a machine of power. It is alive with the new spirit of the day. It is the result of years of research and development. It is the spirit of the future.

David O. Day, majority leader of the House Ways and Means committee, in New York. He was the House majority leader from 1953 to 1961, during which time the House passed several important tax laws. Day was a key figure in the development of the tax bill that was passed in 1962, which increased the exemption for married couples with children to $1,000 and allowed the deduction for interest on home mortgages.

In his letter, Day explained the rationale behind the increase in the exemption for married couples with children. He noted that the increase was made to recognize the fact that married couples with children had a greater number of expenses than single individuals. The increase would allow them to pay less in taxes, thereby providing them with more disposable income.

Day also pointed out that the increase in the exemption for married couples with children was part of a broader effort to simplify the tax code. He noted that the current tax code was complex and difficult to understand, and that the increase in the exemption would help to simplify it.

In conclusion, David O. Day's letter to the House majority leader is a key source of information about the history and development of the tax bill that was passed in 1962. It provides insight into the political and social context in which the tax reform took place, and highlights the efforts of politicians like Day to make the tax code more fair and equitable.
