HARRIS URGES FARMERS TO HOLD COTTON UNTIL LATE

Does Not Think State Will Grow Over 850,000 Bales

Columbia, Aug. 17.—S. B. Harris, commissioner of the state department of agriculture, commerce and industries yesterday, in estimating the cotton yield in South Carolina, declared that, in his opinion, the crop will not exceed 850,000 bales.

The following letter from Mr. W. F. Howell, of Lancaster, should be of interest to Chester county farmers. The general use of bur clover in Chester county for a few years would mean thousands of dollars in the way of increased crops and the general building up of the soil.

For the information of those interested in our efforts to build up the fertility of our soils and to promote the prosperity of our farmers, the following information has been compiled, giving the experience of a few of our farmers in growing bur clover:

T. Y. Williams says: "Bur clover will not only make your land rich but it will keep it rich washing and after a few years in clover you can take out more if not all of your terraces."

J. C. Melton says: "I like it better than any other clover. I intend sowing all the seed I can get this year."

P. B. Hammond says: "I like it better than any other clover. I intend sowing all the seed I can get this year."

W. M. Yoder says: "I prefer it to any other legume for soil improvement."

R. L. White says: "I think I have been benefited to the extent of $200 a year since I have had clover two years. It kept me from buying corn, although we had a dry year. It will double the price of the land on which I am sure it is one of the least expensive land builders."

M. M. Clyburn, Jr., says: "My bur clover mat, which is 1 1/2 x 8, in 1924, a very poor year for me, made about 60 bushels of corn with only two rows with any fertility at all. These rows could not be told from the remainder. This was good ground laid before being put in bur clover."

During the last century, the average crop production of the entire South of Australia has been increased from four pounds to 8 and 10 pounds.

Mr. Caldwell Addressed Farmers.

Mr. R. B. Caldwell, of Chester, president of the Commercial Bank and member of the board of directors of the South Carolina Cotton Growers' association, addressed a meeting of the association, held on Tuesday afternoon.

Mr. Caldwell in his speech pointed out that the farmer's biggest enemy is the insect, who is interested in the fight; third, who the cooperatives are having to fight against, the weevils that the growers are using in the fight, and fourth, the success the cooperatives are meeting with so far in the fight.

Mr. Caldwell is very familiar with all phases of the cotton business and is in position to give excellent advice to those interested in the association.

A large crowd was present at Dillon to hear him, and his instructions were enjoyed by his respective town to very much.

The ordinary harvest of winter wheat is the variety which should be planted in the state.

An stated above, it may be planted between the cotton rows before the cotton is picked.

For best results vetch should be sown with either ryegrass or oats. Ryegrass is considered somewhat better for a clover crop, while oats and vetch make a hay of excellent quality.

VETCH IN COTTON MIDDLES.

Chilmon College. The new crop of vetch is probably the best all-around winter legume crop for the farmers of South Carolina.

It makes splendid growth during the winter, and the spring it may either be cut for hay or plowed under soil improvement.

It is admirably adapted to either purpose.

The ordinary harvest of winter wheat is the variety which should be planted in the state.

An stated above, it may be planted between the cotton rows before the cotton is picked.

For best results vetch should be sown with either ryegrass or oats. Ryegrass is considered somewhat better for a clover crop, while oats and vetch make a hay of excellent quality.
