Eleven requisitions for funding by various campus organizations totaling $31,154 were reported by the Regulations Committee for final senate approval. A recommendation to provide additional money to the Student Life Committee to purchase foods for the student union was included in the requirements.

Chairman Kevin Lanier and Senator Randy Newkirk asked the Student Life Committee to present a list of approved requisitions to the senate for further discussion.

A standing room only crowd estimated at 75 persons showed up in Richardson Lobby for the first annual Richardson Roach Race on Oct. 20.

The event, sponsored by Professor John Richardson, was the brainchild of seventh floor RA Barry Price. "We needed something for our hall project," Price said, "and with all the roaches around we decided to put them to good use."

The one-dollar per-roach entry fee was slated to go toward the Richardson Ice Machine Fund. However, due to lack of entries, the money went to pay off the prizes: $5 for a trophy to the winner, and a t-shirt to the runner-up.

The races were marred by several tragedies, though Bocephus Longfellow cockroach, a promising entry, died the night before the race. Another early favorite, Ram Roach, bolted the track during the first heat and had to be destroyed by its owner and Orkin before the race could finish. During the finals match-up between Roach O'War and Clip, Roach O'War's owner, frustrated at his entry's performance, struck and killed his opponent for four years' entry. It was immediately disqualified, and first place was awarded to Clip posthumously.

Chairperson Wendy Truitt moved that the Roach Race be held in committee for another year. Senator Barry Newkirk moved to increase the number of outlet rooms in residence halls. Senate approved the motion. The Smith amendment was passed, reported Chairperson Rhonda Patterson, and senator Lanier for the successful passage of Roach Race legislation along with amendments.

Chairperson McConnell noted the Roach Race does not seem to be a determining factor, but a good sense of direction seems to be major asset.

A variety of laboratory fee hikes for Winthrop College students have been approved by the Finance Committee of the Board of Trustees.

Laboratory fee hikes will be used to update Computer Science 101, designed as a course with two hours of lab and two hours of lecture per week. "In the past, students programming. With these new computers, students will have their own computer to work on and will have an introduction to word processing and learn to use the computer."

The laboratory fee hike will go toward making payments. "If I don't think that the experience is worth more than the laboratory fee, I wouldn't do it," said Padgett.

Many colleges require entering freshmen to purchase a microcomputer, at a cost in excess of $2000, or about $50 per month for four years to lease/purchase the equipment. Winthrop investigated this option but found it too expensive for the typical Winthrop student.

Newsbriefs

WC Republicans

There will be an organizational meeting of the Winthrop College Republicans Monday night, Oct. 28 at 7 p.m. The meeting will take place in Dinkins Auditorium and anyone interested may attend.

Theatre Tour

Alpha Psi Omega, honor fraternity in theatre, has instigated a tour program for getting Winthrop students to major theatre shows in the Carolinas. Upcoming tours include “A Chorus Line” in January, Ibsen’s “Ghosts”, and two special appearances by England’s Royal Shakespeare Company at USC, Columbia, March 21 and 22. Anyone interested in joining the tours may call Chris Cook (4020) or Dr. Chris Reynolds (2287).

“True West”

“True West” opens Wednesday, Nov. 6 and runs through Nov. 9 at the Winthrop Theatre in Johnson Hall. Shows start at 8:00 p.m. Tickets are available at Dinkins desk Nov. 4. The play is the classic adventure plot of the “Good Brother and Bad Brother” locked into a game of competition resulting in a showdown. Playwright Sam Shepard reworks this old plot and places it in a modern setting, a Hollywood suburb. This is a “comedy for discriminating theatre viewers.”

Student Try-Outs

Director Leigh Vandegrift will hold try-outs for the modern comedy, “The Typists”, Oct. 30 and 31 at 7 p.m. in the Johnson Hall “Lab” theatre (second floor). Students need not bring a prepared reading; scripts will be available at the auditions.

DSU sponsors ski tour

By GINA WHITTLE

Dinkins Student Union is sponsoring a ski tour to Mt. Snow Vermont Dec. 30-Jan. 6. There are 57 slopes and 13 chair lifts on the mountain. Students will be able to ski Wednesday through Sunday of the trip. DSU Travel Chairperson Ann Tucker said, “I’m really excited about the trip. It’s a good chance for people who ski to go somewhere besides the N.C. mountains. But if you don’t ski it’s a good place to start.”

This will be a special college week and groups from colleges around the country will be there. More than 1,000 students are expected to attend. Students will stay in condominiums on the mountain. The condos have fireplaces, fully equipped kitchens, color cable T.V., an indoor pool and a hot tub.

The cost of the trip will be $168. This will include transportation, accommodations, lift tickets and ski rentals. A $30 deposit is due by Nov. 9.

Tucker said, “This would be a great Christmas present to ask for and now’s the time to ask for it. There will be an informational meeting, with a video tape of the mountain, in Dinkins auditorium Oct. 30 at 7:00 p.m.

Annual Crop Walk to aid relief

By STEVE CODY

TJ staff writer

The eighth annual Crop Walk will be held on Sunday, Nov. 3 beginning at the Cherry Rock in Rock Hill.

Rev. Risher Brabham, coordinator of the Crop Walk, said the walk will begin at 2:00 p.m. and end at approximately 6 p.m.

Brabham said the Festival of Life which precedes the walk will include the Rock Hill High School Band of Distinction, clowns, banners and other entertainment.

“Seventy-five percent of the funds raised will go to Crop which is an ecumenical agency of the church involving 32 denominations,” he said.

Brabham said Crop tries to focus on self development aid which means they work with people in countries such as Africa to help dig wells, buy seeds and train in reforestation.

“Crop also provides relief services in time of natural disasters such as earthquakes and typhoons,” he said.

Brabham said the other 25 percent of the funds raised will be used in York, Chester, and Lancaster countries to aid in feeding programs for senior citizens.

“One program provides hot meals throughout eight senior citizen centers and the other provides home delivered meals to over 2,000 elderly citizens, he said.

Brabham said sponsors don’t have to give this way through church world services. “Sponsors may designate their funds to go through Catholic Bishop’s Relief Fund, HOPE, or CARE,” he said.

Brabham said that last year, 500 people walked and raised $11,450. He said he expects 750 people to walk this year and raise $15,000.

“Winthrop College Campus Ministry organizes and co-ordinates the project but it involves community people as well as students, faculty and staff,” he said.

Brabham said that any students interested in walking or sponsoring may contact him at the Wesley Foundation, 327-5640.

Neild discusses success formula

By ROBERT JOLLY

TJ managing editor

Elizabeth Neild, owner and president of Circle Seven Communications near Houston, Texas spoke Oct. 16 to freshmen about the badges of success and how to achieve them.

One of the main reasons Neild decided to come to Winthrop was to tell freshmen how important they are and that they can become successes, just as she did. Neild said, “Freshmen are the neatest people in the world.”

The keys to success are to learn to learn, be curious, to listen with action, and to be involved, she said.

She said research shows that, within five years of graduation, students will have forgotten 85 percent of what they were taught in college, and Neild said, “When one listens to the majority of the information a commercial on TV it is objected and would not be outward.

Neild used Huckleberry Finn as an example of a person learned to make decisions even though he opposed all he had been taught.

“School is directly related to achieving the badges of success,” Neild said. “However, to choose good role models. Decide to be truly successful we must what you want to be, and be it.”

Consumer science gains computer

By TOM STEARNS

The Winthrop College School of Consumer Science has been granted use of the software program for computer graphics recently acquired by the Winthrop College Department of Art.

The program, including one AutoCAD ADE 3 software package, was awarded to the Department of Art by 2AutoDesk Incorporated of Sausalito, Calif. The package is a state-of-the-art computer graphics program.

Barbara Fuller of the School of Consumer Science and Allied Professions said, “Wade Hobgood, chairperson of the Art Department, applied for general AutoCAD packages, but received the AutoCAD ADE 3 software package. However, the Art Department does not have the equipment to use the program.

Fuller explained that since the Interior Design Department has an IBM system on order, the program will be used there. However, the Art Department does not have the equipment to use the program.

Although the system will be used primarily by Interior Design students, Fuller said the system will be available to all Consumer Science students. Fashion merchandising and food and nutrition majors will be able to use the system to design displays and manage inventory.

“Winthrop College Campus Ministry organizes and co-ordinates the project but it involves community people as well as students, faculty and staff,” he said.
Monitoring program for athletes

By ROBERT JOLLY
TJ managing editor

Wanda Briley, assistant athletic director and head women's basketball coach, believes athletics should take a back seat to academics. Briley heads a new athletic monitoring program for the athletic department designed to help athletes make better grades and graduate on time.

We have a program that has set its goals to graduate student athletes at a higher rate than the student body as a whole," Briley said.

The program consists of a mandatory study hall, counseling, a no-cut class policy, and progress reports from the faculty.

Every freshman athlete must attend a 90-minute study hall Monday through Thursday of every week. Upperclassmen with G.P.I.s lower than 2.0 must also attend until they bring their grades up to 2.0. The athletes meet with their teammates at a designated place on campus, and each team has a monitor, usually an assistant coach, to supervise the study hall.

"The athletes may miss class only when sick and go to the health center for a doctor's excuse or a family emergency," Briley said. "The only other excuse would be a family emergency," Briley said.

On the first offense, the athlete will be given a warning and must attend mandatory study hall. On the second offense, the monitor and Briley will meet with the athlete's parents. On the third offense, the athlete will be given a formal warning. On the fourth offense, the athlete will be required to have a mandatory study hall, counseling, and a letter will go into the athlete's permanent file.

According to Briley, a program officer of the NCAA rules and regulations, freshmen must have a score of 700 on the S.A.T. or a 15 on the A.C.T. Students must have a 2.0 G.P.R. in the core curriculum to receive scholarships. Students must take 12 hours a semester, and must pass 24 hours a year to be eligible for play. This will not officially take effect until August 1986, as Winthrop moves into NCAA Division I.

Each monitor will keep a schedule for each team member to insure that all academic progress is made. Briley said, "We won't allow crip schedules." According to Briley, the NCAA student athlete must make normal progress while working closely with the student athletes' advisers to ensure this.

Briley, who has had several years of experience in athletic monitoring, said, "Our program at Wake Forest was similar to this one. As a coach monitoring my teams, I have graduated all my players in four years but who dropped out for personal reasons. It's a big change, I think it's going to be a success.

Briley comes to Winthrop from Wake Forest University, where she was head women's basketball coach for five years. Before that, Briley was head women's basketball and volleyball coach and faculty member at High Point College.

Briley received her M.A. degree in physical education with an emphasis in athletic administration from Appalachian College in 1978, her B.S. in health and physical education from U.S.C. in Columbia in 1974. She was named national coach of the year in 1978 at High Point College.

According to Briley, her first impression from her overview of Winthrop was that there was some lack of respect from the students and athletes towards the students because of low class attendance. "We have to gain support from the students and faculty. Through this program, our success will make everyone's degree mean more," Briley said.

"Our philosophy is to make better people by instilling pride. When a person has pride they get respect of others. To be a good athlete you have to be a good student first. The student comes before the athlete."
A forgotten holiday

By LISA BUZE
TJ editor

Why are people fascinated with death? Why would they rather celebrate a festival dedicated to the wicked souls of the world? Although the church established All Saints Day every Nov. 1 to remember Christian martyrs, people still refuse to acknowledge this holiday. Instead they prefer to celebrate the night before and honor evil spirits on Halloween.

According to Encyclopedia Britannica, Halloween began with the Celts who occupied Great Britain, Ireland and parts of Northern France. The festival honored Samhain, the Celtic lord of death. It marked the start of the season of cold, darkness and decay. According to legend, Samhain called the souls of all the wicked who had to inhibit the bodies of animals for 12 months to walk the earth for one night. The Celtic priests ordered all citizens to put out their hearth fires and build a bonfire with animals, crops, and even human sacrifices.

Then, because the church wanted to put an end to pagan rituals, it began a festival called All Saints Day where all Hallowsmas, a special ceremony, was held.

However, the new holiday didn’t seem to catch on. The same is true today. No one ever hears anyone talking about what a great time they had at all Saints Day bash. Dinkins Student Union never sponsors an All Saints Day happening. Even churches hold Halloween carnivals and haunted houses. It looks like they would have a house with St. Francis and St. Christopher in it rather than one with Dracula coming out of a coffin.

Who knows? Maybe one day someone will use all Saints Day as an excuse to have a party, and a precedent will be set. Until then, have fun Oct. 31, and forget it.

Sticker is everywhere

By JAMES DEDEES
TJ advertising manager

Life can be cruel sometimes. You know what I mean. You see something that you want very badly, but for some reason you know you can never possess it. For some it’s expensive cars. For others it’s communications classes. For me, however, it’s something just a little more reasonable. I want a “Phil Lader for Governor” bumper sticker!

Since the first day that I saw one I knew that I had to have one. With each passing car my desire grew greater. Finally, I decided to jump on the bandwagon and get a sticker. Realizing that my roommate was an avid supporter of Phil, I asked him for one. “No,” he replied. “Why not?” I exclaimed in anguish. “Because I know what you are going to do with it,” he responded. End of discussion.

They’re heeeere!!!

By MARK WOOD
TJ contributing editor

Well, it’s Halloween time again and time for all of you weak stomached voyeurs to flock to your favorite neighborhood theater for the fright of your life.

Yes, the horror movies are back and ready to exploit those of you interested in a good scream. But unfortunately, most horror movies leave much to be desired. As a matter of fact, I have only seen a few truly good horror movies in my life. Most fright flicks tend to follow the same basic formula. And it’s for that reason that most of them stink.

Being the avid movie fan that I am, I have had no trouble spotting the basic characteristics of most horror films.

First of all, most of these films feature a group of idiotic and sex-starved teenagers. They are all out of school for the summer and looking for some good fun at Camp Cuttem’Up. As they are sitting around the campfire telling ghost stories, the group’s cut-up (no pun intended) decides that he is going to scare the stuffing out of the pretty girls in the group.

So he runs off into the woods and rustles a few bushes and evokes a cheap scream from one of the air head females.

But we all know that he’s going to run into Steven: the psycho who was disfigured by a runaway weed-eater as a child. And, according to the mood the director happens to be in at the moment, the victim will either be stabbed with a pitchfork, impaled with a javelin or turned into a human shish kabob.

Now, upon learning this disturbing news, do our fearless teens go for help? Nope. Do they grab flashlights and wander around the house? Yep. And because of this totally unrealistic and stupid choice on the part of our fearless teenagers, we, the audience, are forced to sit and watch each one of them get turned into diced griblets. A sight which is anything but pleasant.

Now, I wouldn’t mind a little blood for reality’s sake, but that is the only thing that today’s horror crop has to offer. The films aren’t scary, just disgusting. One can always tell who is going to get killed and when. (It’s usually the girls who get it while they’re skinny-dipping.)

An element of surprise has always been my favorite part of a horror movie. And today’s films just don’t have that.

So if you want to get a good scare around Halloween you would be better off to see your roommate when he or she first got out of bed. If you want a few laughs then go see a horror movie. That’s about all they’re good for these days.
Letters to the editor

Freshmen

Dear editor,

In response to Mr. Wood’s article in the Sept. 30 edition of The Johnsonian, and his revised Oct. 21 edition, I would like to reveal my feelings about the situation.

As an upperclassman, it is relatively easy for me to understand many of the instances that occur here at Winthrop. It may be true that “some” freshmen need to gain respect for Winthrop College and their peers, but have you, Mr. Wood, observed the upperclassmen lately?

Many sophomores, juniors, and seniors possess these exact same qualities that you accuse the freshmen of having, and, personally, I feel you are being very unjust accusing the freshmen especially when the majority of them learn from their beloved upperclassmen. We the upperclassmen are the example these freshmen have to follow and upon observing the sophomores, juniors and seniors, I have to admit that they act just as badly, if not worse, than any of the freshmen.

As a resident of Thomson, which is more or less an upperclassman dorm, I experience many disruptions while attempting to study. I think you, Mr. Wood, would love to enter some of the rooms, and observe the broom handle imprints on the ceiling where students have beaten to request silence from above. It is really great at what time these “mature upperclassmen” decide that they want to play basketball, have major fights and, even, believe it or not, turn up the music for the whole dorm to enjoy.

I agree totally that some freshmen need to become more respectable of their peers and college, but after living at Winthrop and observing some of the upperclassmen, it appears that they have a great deal of growing up to do themselves. I would strongly suggest, Mr. Wood, that in your following articles you take time to observe everyone not “just” the chosen few.

Sincerely,
Kim Highfill

Marquee is new addition
By LAURIE ANN DEDES
TJ sports editor

Have you seen the new “marquee” on Cherry Road? I suppose it will be used to announce the events at the coliseum. It’s a great idea, I think. The first message on the “grand Marquee” read “Winthrop and Rock Hill, a classic pair.” A classy pair of what? It’s not bad but “Winthrop and Rock Hill, a classic act” would be better. I’d also be interested in knowing who the engineering genius was that designed the thing in between two magnolia trees? Rather, what is left of those two magnolia trees? Why would anybody want to cram a sign between two trees and THEN crop them? Thought provoking, isn’t it?

Concerning school spirit, I’ve thought of something else we could do to honor our athletes. Since basketball seems to be the major sport at Winthrop, I thought we could do this before the first basketball game of the season (in honor of all the athletes, of course). We ought to have a bonfire. The cheerleaders could lead in cheers and the Winthrop Eagle could be featured. That’s a great way to get things going and unify all of the classes. A lot of colleges do it and we’ve got the whole farm area to do it in. (I hope someone is taking notes on these ideas and will do something to get new traditions started.)

This week in volleyball has been excellent for the Lady Eagles, who won all four of the matches they played. All of these matches were during the Big South Invitational at UNC Asheville. Winthrop stumped Campbell, 15-1, 15-3. Host team UNC Asheville fell to the ladies in a tough match with a final score of 15-3, 15-1, 15-6.

Radford was defeated 15-12 in two sets. In the final game the Eagles took on UNC Asheville and defeated them once again by a score of 15-2, 15-9, 15-9.

Winthrop walked away with this tournament championship and in the Big Conference now sporting a record of 7-0. Overall the ladies are 19-5. Two players, Janet Dykton and Hazel Turnbull, were named to the All-Tournament team.

Dykton has been leading Winthrop in statistics for the better part of this season. Her serve percentage is 98 percent. She has only six errors in 294 serve attempts. Of those 294, 228 have been service aces.

Dykton’s attack percentage is 88 percent with 60 kills. Of 42 serves received she has made only five errors. (No wonder she made the all-tournament team.)

The cross country and soccer report isn’t that good this week. At Furman Invitational the men finished 20 of 29 while the women were 14 of 20. The team has been doing fairly well against schools the same size as Winthrop but there has been a lot of NCAA-I action for the runners.

The men are now 3-3 while the women are 2-4.

The soccer team now has a disappointing record of 5-9 after three losses last week. Catawba beat Winthrop 3-2, Boca Raton shut them out 2-0 and Lander defeated the Eagles 5-2.

Even with these suffering they are still second in the conference in scoring, thanks to Choco Gutierrez and Doug Aldridge. Aldridge’s outstanding performance of the past several weeks named Big South Co-Player of the Week.

Garnets dancing hard; looking good
By MARC HOWIE
Special to TJ

The Golden Garnets, a carefully choreographed, twelve girl high school dance team, have been working hard this year to help add a little more excitement to basketball games this season.

“No team or school has been working hard this year,” said Carolyn Yonce, who is in charge of both the Golden Garnets and the cheerleaders.

She went on to say that The Golden Garnets, who will be performing during haltime at basketball games this season, have been working through some changes since last year.

This year the girls are required to follow a proportional chart. Their weight is checked once a week, they practice three times a week, and they also have new uniforms. Yonce said that Andrea Grier, who does most of the choreography for the girls, has been working very hard to get them ready for the coming season.

This year Yonce and Grier have also worked with the girls and taught them how to be really “good fans” and help generate some more excitement in the stands. The girls are really looking forward to the season opener November 18, when all of the hard work will begin to pay off.

Easterling holding her own
By DAVID McCALLUM
TJ sports writer

The chill of the fall air and leaves on the ground means only one thing—basketball is right around the corner. Senior Guard Debbie Easterling could not be more ready for the roundball season.

“We’ve been ready to get on the court, but we had to wait until Oct. 15 to get started,” Easterling said. “We’ve been doing a lot of running and lifting weights getting ready for the season. Everybody is real excited about starting. We’ve got a lot to work on, but we’re ready to learn,” she added.

In Easterling’s time at Winthrop she and fellow seniors Janet Dykton and Stephanie Pykton have been through three of coaching against Division I teams. Coach has a lot of new ideas to the program, and that means nothing but good things for Winthrop.

The 5’8” guard, who averaged 10 points and 4.4 rebounds a believes with the arrival of new coaches in three years Easterling said it has been difficult adjusting to different sets of rules, and different styles of coaching.

The Kingsport, Tenn. native and with experience as a coach at a big program, “Easterling believes the arrival of freshers Cher Foster and Kim Seegars will bolster the Lady Eagles team. “Kim is going to be a big help in the middle, because she is a strong player. Cheri is going to help the backcourt situation a lot.” Easterling said that the first week of practice has been a good one. “The freshmen are looking real good, everybody is working real hard, giving 100 percent, and everyone is coming together as a team.”

The WC guard believes she and her fellow teammates have been working to prove this season.

“We want to prove that we can beat the Division I teams on our court. We’re opening with USC-Spartanburg and we have a score to settle with them from last year.”
G-Man McKiver settles down

By JEFF RUBLE TJ sports writer

Ups and downs have been a part of Jerome McKiver's career. McKiver is known as the "G-Man" because of his 42 vertical leaping ability and slamb Dunking exploits. He also has been part of a Winthrop basketball program that has put together three up and down seasons, finishing 14-21, 21-10 and 11-16 in the past three seasons. So what does McKiver want to do? He wants to set's down to personal ups and downs and team consistency.

McKiver has had a lot of setting since he was a student at Blenheim High School. There he was a superb all-around athlete, territory in four sports and leading his basketball team to the state championship. As he heared graduation, colleges recruited him in all four sports, so McKiver made a choice. "I thought basketball was my best sport, and I enjoyed the most." So McKiver decided to drop the other offers and settle down to basketball.

In his freshman year at Winthrop, McKiver had trouble with grades. "I was doing everything, just like in high school. Then I realized that I had to set my priorities and settle down to basketball and studying." McKiver did just that, improving his grades to among the best on the team and winning the Coaches Award his freshman year.

McKiver went on from his freshman year to play good ball for the club, but still the Eagles were an up and down basketball team. "During my years, I've played point guard, shooting guard, for ward and even a little center." Last year the Eagles had a discouraging year but McKiver displayed his improvement by winning the Most Improved Award.

This season McKiver is anxious to step in and settle down the Eagles to winning habits. "My goals this year are to score more points for take for losses of Brian Pope (Pope) and Pat (Sass) and to play a true point guard." By playing a "true" point guard role, McKiver hopes to cut down on team turnovers and do direct court action, feeding the ball to the post players. "I'm going to have to get the ball inside to Fred (McKinnon), Allen (Washington) and Jon) Bowman. McKiver's last goal, and probably his most important, is to be the leader on defense.

McKiver along with three others on the basketball team, is a senior this year, forcing him to consider his future prospects. "I'd like to get my degree in communications within a year and then I'd like to pursue a career in broadcasting;" McKiver is in a position to do this because of the same advice he gives freshmen now: "Settle down and get your priorities straight, education straight, then execution is the most important aspect."

Intramural standing

By CHRIS BOWELL Special to TJ

Winthrop College recently ended the fall season of softball intramurals, that recently intramurals, while the football season began, as are following. The intramural teams are currently "Crowd Pleasers," and are competing.

According to Grant Seuury, intramural graduate assistant, 21 teams participated in the softball intramurals that began in September. The winners of the Monday and Wednesday league, and the winner of the Thursday league, and Thursday league competition in the championship Sunday, Oct. 20. The "Brew Crew" won the championship, defeating the "L.R. Express." The "Snailhunters," the "No-Names," and "Nally's Patrol" are all tied for first in the Monday and Thursday league with a 5-0 record. The "L.R. Express" is currently holding the first place position for the women's league with a 20-0 record.

Wrestlemania at Winthrop

By TODD HUTCHISON TJ assistant sports editor

On Oct. 1 the National Wrestling Alliance, on the N.W.A., brought its traveling "show" to Winthrop Coliseum for a television taping. Included on the card were: N.W.A. World Tag-Team Champions, the Rock & Roll Express, Superstar Billy Graham, Abdullah the Butcher, the Russians, and many more notable NWA stars.

The Rock & Roll Express started the evening by pounding on two unknowns. The match was decided by a pinfall for the Rock & Roll Express, as they performed double-flying dropkicks that won handily. The next match brought the first surprise of the night. As the hated Midnight Express awaited, after a humble greeting by their manager Jim Cornett, the arrival of Jimmy Valiant and Rocky Johnson. As Valiant's own lady, Big Mama, was introducing her "main-man," Valiant and Johnson entered the ring in street clothes and proceeded to clean house. The match never took place as the chad's forehead. After an exciting Midnight Express ran back to change outside the ring in which their locker-room in a cowardly fashion.

The next match was also an action packed event. Abdullah was going to slap Babydoll, but Abdullah took on Starship Hamburg was allowed on the Eagle in one of the night's better match. Abdullah made a huge mistake in his error in the beginning of the Starship ring. The Seed duchilla came on and defeated both then wrestlers were count young lion by squashing him out of the way with a whopping 462 pounds of rope too long.

The Nature Boy, Buddy Land dell made quick work of his geek tag-team champs, the Rock & Roll Express, defended their titles against the Russians. As the match ended in a pin-fall for the Express.

Washington is into action; USC transfer getting plenty

By JILL ZEIGLER TJ sports writer

Standing at 6'5" and weighing a good 186 pounds, Winthrop College basketball player Allen Washington is already getting the most best getting into the action!

Despite his unassuming year at the University of South Carolina, Washington felt that he was simply not getting enough action as a player. He comments, "I was ready to contribute to a team, and at USC, I wouldn't do that until my junior year."

Then Magnum retaliated and smashed a gusher on Blan gashed his forehead. After an exciting action packed event. Abdullah was going to slap Babydoll, but Abdullah took on Starship Hamburg was allowed on the Eagle in one of the night's better match. Senator Mitchell addresses rally

By ALLAN C. JENKINS
TJ staff writer

Senator Theo Mitchell (D-Greenville) was the featured speaker at a "Rally for a Free South Africa" held on Thursday, Oct. 10, in Dinkins Auditorium. The rally was jointly sponsored by the Association of Ebonites and Winthrop College Campus Ministries.

Mitchell, who has sponsored several bills in the S.C. Senate calling for divestiture of all state funds from companies having business relations with South Africa, called the South African system of racial oppression, also known as apartheid, "the most cruel and inhumane on earth."

"By cruel fate, 4.4 million Africans have been able to set up a system that leaves 24 million Africans in homes unlighted by electricity, not graced by running water, sanitation, health, or education," Mitchell said, "and this system is propped up by the economic systems of the United States and Israel."

Under apartheid, Africans are not allowed to vote or live in "white reserved" areas, and must carry internal passports. Most have been relegated to "homelands" or "bantustans," and cannot leave these areas except to work.

Mitchell called for citizens of the U.S. and especially South Carolinians, to support divestiture, and to prepare to boycott businesses and banks doing business with South Africa, South African companies, and U.S. companies doing business in South Africa.

"You may be called to lend your support to this cause by boycotting these businesses, because apartheid will last as long as there are greedy businessmen who do not care about how much blood is spilled for their profits," Mitchell said.

"We will watch and see how many can survive boycotts, we will see how many can survive massive withdrawals of deposits, we will see how many can survive pickets everyday."

"It will be interesting to see which legislators oppose these bills calling for divestiture," Mitchell continued, "and very interesting to see which corporations come forth to lobby against this."

Mitchell said that the blacks in South Africa were exercising restraint, and that he hopes an eventual non-violent end to apartheid is possible, but warned that any further delay could be bloody.

"Blacks in South Africa are sick and tired of their people being tortured, killed, mysteriously disappearing, their women and children being treated like animals," Mitchell said. "A dam may hold back a lot of water, but when it bursts, it will drown a lot of people."

After his speech, Mitchell answered questions from the audience. When asked what students could do to protest South Africa's policy of apartheid, Mitchell replied, "Nothing works like an economic protest; you must raise your voices and boycott American companies doing business in South Africa."

Mitchell was asked if that included U.S. businesses abiding by the "Sullivan Principles", a set of voluntary guidelines that many U.S. businesses follow to prevent racial oppression within their factories in South Africa.

"Sullivan himself, just two weeks ago, called his principles "outmoded", out of time, and out of step," Mitchell replied. "More stringent measures are needed."

Prior to Mitchell's speech, Dr. Mary de Grys, professor of anthropology at Winthrop, gave a short history of the Afrikaner rise to power in South Africa. Afrikaners are the leading white ethnic group in South Africa and are of Dutch descent. They settled the area in the 17th century, and have ruled ever since, except during a period of British rule in the late 19th century. The British rule culminated and ended in an Afrikaner rebellion, known as the "Boer War", which deGrys cited as being primarily responsible for the extreme conservatism and siege mentality of the Afrikaners today.

"I had really expected Winthrop students to care a lot more about this issue than they obviously do," said Winthrop freshman Gene Broadway. "It is sad to see that less than 1 percent of the student body cared enough to attend."

About fifty persons were in attendance at the rally, which was less than some had expected.

Strom wins award
By KAREN PARKER
TJ staff writer

Allison Strom was named Religious Heritage of America's Outstanding Youth of the Year at a banquet on Monday, Oct. 14.

The Religious Heritage of America is a St. Louis based interfaith group. It has four goals: to make Judeo-Christian principles part of America's daily life; to demonstrate that religious values are part of a successful life; to speak out on moral issues; and to strengthen Judeo-Christian congregations. The organization stresses a commitment to personal growth, life, to speak out on moral issues, and to understand other cultures and demonstrate that religious values are part of a successful life. The award, given to Strom, is the highest recognition for a student.

In addition to the title, Strom received a plaque, a trophy clock, and a medal. The award also brought Strom a $500 cash prize, which Strom plans to use to support her studies.

Strom had to fill out a three page application. Some of her activities and achievements include: Chair, Who's Who Among American High School Students, Yearbook copy editor, UNICEF volunteer, President of United Methodist Youth Fellowship, varsity cheerleader. International center plans tours
By ALLAN J. JENKINS
TJ staff writer

The International Center will plan four trips abroad this year that will give Winthrop students a chance to experience another culture and possibly gain college credit, according to Dr. Glenn Thomas, director of the International Center.

Two of the trips will be during the Christmas holidays, Thomas said.

For $1,399, a student can spend the week of Dec. 26-Jan. 2 in Paris. The price includes round trip airfare from Atlanta to Paris, hotels and breakfast in a hotel near Notre Dame cathedral, and dinners in a variety of Parisian restaurants.

The "Holidays in Paris" will be led by Mile. Claudia Zachry, assistant director of the Winthrop College Studies Abroad program. A $25 deposit must be paid by Nov. 14 to reserve a place in the tour group, and full payment must be made by Nov. 22, according to Dr. Glenn Thomas, director of the International Center.

Students preferring to spend the holidays in England can go on the "Holidays in London" tour, which will be abroad Dec. 27-Jan. 6. Participants will fly from Charlotte to London, and spend nine nights in the Cumberland Hotel overlooking Hyde Park. The price is $1,550, and will include airfare, bed and breakfast, a theatre ticket, half-day trips to Stonehenge, Windsor Castle, and Brighton, a full day in Bath, and seven days of unlimited travel on London's "tubes", the subway system.

The International Center will plan hikes in the Alps, tours of Europe, and other trips.

Student advisory committee formed

By LORI CASALE
TJ staff writer

Winthrop’s School of Education has formed a Student Advisory Committee. Eight students from the course Edu 180, introduction to education, have been selected to head the newly formed committee.

These students will mix with other education majors and gather opinions about various education-related concerns. They will be visiting education classes on the freshman, sophomore, and junior levels and will be talking with education students and faculty throughout the semester.

The student representatives will also be available by phone to talk with any education students about their various programs and to take any comments or suggestions they might have.

The aim of the School of Education’s Student Advisory Committee is to encourage student input as the school seeks to change its curriculum.

“As we move through this major curriculum revision process in the School of Education, we need student input so that we’ll be better able to develop a curriculum that will meet the students’ needs,” said Dr. Sue Smith.

The eight student representatives are Brian Brunson, Susanne Couch, Amy Harrelson, Rita Hines, Leslie Lewis, Lena Poole, Terry Steele, Becky Turpin.

Any interested students wishing to express their views may contact these representatives.

Perselley awarded grant

By MAGGIE ZALAMEA
TJ staff writer

Dr. Gerald Perselley, professor of business administration and management at Winthrop College, has been awarded a $25 thousand grant to write a book.

This grant was awarded by the National Defense University of Fort Lesly J. McNair in Washington, D.C. Perselley expects to finish Human Resources and Defense Management within a year. “I haven’t begun yet, but I will within the next two weeks. I still need to go to Washington and pick up some materials,” said Perselley.

When asked what kind of materials, Perselley answered, “mostly government publications.”

The book will cover people, population and how personnel is used in the armed forces.
