City Council Met Tuesday.

The members of the city council met last Tuesday afternoon to receive the report of the managers of the bond election held in Chester on September second, and to arrange for the sale of the bonds.

The report of the managers showed that the election was in favor of the bonds by a vote of 160 to 38, as to the streets, and 178 to 17, as to the water works improvements and extensions.

It was decided to offer the street bonds for sale on September 29th, and an advertisement to that effect appears elsewhere in this issue.

The matter of the note covering the cost of the material in connection with the extension of water on Harris street was brought before the council, and by a vote of 3 to 2 council decided that the city would not pay the note, claiming that council did not authorize the expenditure of the money, in speaking.

Making Progress Dredging Creek.

With two dredge boats in operation day and night on the two prongs of watercourse, satisfactory progress is being made of ice in the work of dredging Turkey Creek. The channel is being materially deepened and in some places where deemed advantageous is being entirely changed. The contractors were given 35 months to finish the job and herein unforeseen delays, they will experience no difficulty in completing the work in that time. The minimum cost of the job was to be $78,000, provision being made for additional compensation in case rocks are encountered and where changes from the original specifications involve additional work. The six month of the creek will be dredged, which will result in the reclaiming of several hundred acres of land. Some 200000 cords of lumber in York and Chester counties, now almost valueless on account of the overflow of the stream.

COTTON GRADERS

FOR SEVEN COUNTRIES
Clemson College—Seven Countries in South Carolina have been grading cotton; graders during the coming season: namely, Anderson, Charleston, Darlington, Sumter, Greenwood, Laurens, and Oconee. This cotton grading work is financed jointly by the Extension Service, the United States Department of Agriculture, and the individual counties, and is under the administrative direction of the Clemson College. The graders are selected by the Bureau of Markets of the United States Department of Agriculture from experienced men, and are given technical instruction by the Bureau of Markets.

This is a disinterested classifying service, and it is hoped that it will help to reduce the difference between the prices paid for cotton by the mills and the prices received by the farmers. It should enable the farmer to know the value of his cotton and to realize that value more fully. In this connection, it is interesting to note that studies made in North Carolina have shown that the average cotton mill paid about $11.50 per bale more than the farmer received for the same class of cotton. It was estimated that 50 points, or $2.50 per bale, would amply meet the cost of freight and other legitimate charges in sending the cotton to the mills. The employment of expert cotton graders should help to save for the farmer at least a considerable part of the remaining $9 per bale.

Department Circular 56, of the U. S. Dept. of Agriculture, entitled "Suggested Improvements in Methods of Selling Cotton by Farmers" contains some interesting facts and figures on this subject. It may be had from the U. S. Dept. of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

KESLER COTTON MILL AT SALISBURY CLOSED DOWN
Salisbury, Sept. 9.—The Kesler Manufacturing company cotton mill is closed down and late this evening Supt. J. P. Curlee had no idea when it would resume operations. This morning a team tier was being hauled and paid off, according to Mr. Curlee, after his overseer had gotten after him for looting on his job and the mill had stated that he was not giving satisfaction. He wanted his time.

When the 75 weavers in the mill heard of the proposition, they walked out and the management immediately closed the entire plant. The Kesler is known as one of the J. W. Cannon mills.

If You Had a Million.
Human beings delight to dwell upon the possibility of great wealth. Most of us, when we are young enough, think of the cent of fortune as if it were liable to become an accomplished fact shortly. Few of us ever stop to measure our character by considering just what it would do if we had a million dollars. If you had a million dollars would you enjoy it to yourself, spending for what you liked while you were living and leaving the bulk of it to your heirs? If you would, you are of the common, ordinary type of human beings. Most men can make money; often the size of the bill of wealth, regardless of character. The miser is not a jealous savior. Put your trust in him and you will soon come to worship him more truly, more fully than the makers of old worshipped their graven images.

"Of course, you haven't a million, but if you had the much money would you leave your church a little or give some of it to the poor?" asked. Think the matter over, reader, and see if you can't decide that money is responsibility, both to God and man, and that you would give freely of your wealth, if there were it. The man who won't give liberally today, with what he has, will never give tomorrow, no matter how fortunate may be his financial lot. The man who is ready to give, when he gets the million, rarely gets that much because he gives now.

WHY INFELUZAZA RAGE A

The doctors are not in agreement as to whether the scourge of influenza is really upon us again this fall. The history of those pandemic number 1918 people have suffered from its germs and their offspring infect themselves. And their history is about all this we can go by, for it must be admitted that the doctors have not made any progress toward finding a check for the malady. They have not discovered its elusive germ and their efforts toward prevention are therefore limited. Lack of exact knowledge of what the influenza is hitting at, is just what that impressive of immortality is in the dark.

Some of the more eminent physicians who have been studying this mysterious sickness believe that the worst of the epidemic came to this country last fall and winter and that there will be no country-wide spread this fall and winter. They are basing their conclusions upon the vast number of cases already recorded, and having been ascertained that the victims become rather thoroughly immunized and are reasonably well before the influenza returns. That is about one out of every three people. Very young and very old people are not likely to be caught by the contagion and there is a good proportion of uneducated folks who are immunized by nature from its attacks. The most exact calculation showed that not more than 30 per cent of the population can have it.

We have no statistics showing the number of cases there were in this country last summer, but in Charlotte the best information shows that there was approximately 12,000 cases. There may have been more, many more. During the height of the epidemic, when physicians were unable to keep track of all their cases, but the records show that practically 12,000 people of this community have already had the influenza and are, therefore, relieved from its further attacks. That is not one out of every three people in Charlotte, but it is about one out of every four and little better elsewhere. Some where between 1,000 to 6,000 people who may still be regarded as susceptible to the disease. Thus the best figuring possible will give the encouraging revelation that the epidemic can only be best about half as severe as it was here last winter and if only from 4,000 to 5,000 people take it in Charlotte this fall and winter, each a number of cases, being spread out across a given stretch of months, can be much more easily handled than the 12,000 cases of winter which developed so suddenly and so rapidly. Far the best attention was not at all times possible.—Charlotte News.

Hard on the Lawyer
A young lawyer was very sore at himself, after believing in brooding witnesses. You are a laborer? Believe he said, to a quietly-dressed man in the witness-box.

"A workman, sir," said the man who was a civil engineer.
"With pick and shovel," said the lawyer, nodding respectfully.
"These are not the chief implements of my trade," said the man.
"What are the chief implements?" asked the lawyer.
"What can't help you if I told you," said the workman, "you don't understand their nature or their use."
"Probably not, but I insist on knowing what they are," said the lawyer.
"Well, if you insist," said the witness, "brains."
