TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 28.

That Chester county roads cost any 10 adjoining counties is well known to those who have traveled during the past few months.

On last Saturday, following the rains of Friday night, the writer made a trip to Charlotte, going one way and returning another.

The roads in Chester county did not so much as show the signs of the rain of the previous night. The minute you leave Chester county the bad roads start and for a distance of eight miles to Rock Hill the roads are very bad. From Rock Hill to Catawba river one gets the benefit of the Chester county road, that is a part of the way. About one and one-half miles of the road between Rock Hill and Catawba is macadam, which was very badly damaged by the heavy rains of a few weeks ago. However, arrangements are being made to repair the damage.

After you leave Catawba river going toward Charlotte, following a rain, you may expect hard pulling and strenuous driving. Speed is of secondary thought; the real idea is to keep from skidding into the ditch. After reaching Mockleburg county, at the point where "Squire" Bates lives, you have good sailing to Charlotte.

The return trip was made by Pineville, thence the Lancaster road to the Pleasant Valley section where you turn in toward Fort Mill. The Mockleburg end of this road is an old macadam, with the exception of about four miles out of Charlotte, and very rough but you have no fear of skidding into the ditch. After leaving the Mockleburg line you again come in contact with that red York mud and it makes you eager to reach the sight of Chester county.

As the News has previously stated in the matter of the people of East Chester, joining York county is an affair of ours, but what these people see in York county to cause them to have a desire to become a part of that county is more than the News can comprehend. Chester county has approximately 100 miles of excellent roads and will soon have more. York county has about four miles between Rock Hill and Catawba river. If they have any others we have been unable to locate them and we have traveled almost every thoroughfare of any importance in York county this summer.

A gentleman who travels for a wholesale grocery concern who was in Chester a few days was conversing about the high cost of groceries and stated that one reason for the high cost was the enormous profits being made. He said that he was selling lemon potatoes for 40 cents a bushel and that they were being sold on the local market for 70 cents. "Why 60 cents a bushel would be high for them," he said. The News is not in the grocery business but we are just quoting a man who makes it his business.

In a dispatch from Washington dated Wednesday, Dr. Eshelbert Stewart, labor department economic expert, said: "The present retail price of sugar, ranging from 15 to 18 cents per pound, is far above what sugar should bring." Wonder what he would say if told that sugar in this territory is selling around 22 cents!

Low stock goods have been in demand from the University of Kentucky. Very good for a starter but wonder what they are going to do about the bottom of the dress.

It takes low prices longer to reach a fellow than it did high prices.

in times that you could buy goods about as cheap one place as another but now it pays to read the advertisements.

Many friends in Chester were grieved to learn of the death of Mrs. J. L. Barnes, which occurred in Norfolk, Va., Monday, after an illness of some time. Mrs. Barnes is sister of Mrs. Alex. Fraser, of Chester, and was born and reared here, where she has numerous friends, who mourn her loss. The remains have been brought to Chester and the interment will be made in Evergreen cemetery this afternoon. Funeral services will be held at the home of Mr. W. A. Cohn, on West End, this afternoon at four o'clock.

Invitations have been received in Chester to the marriage of Miss Mary Dunovant, of Columbia, formerly of Chester, and Mr. Ell. Werlick, of Newton. The marriage will take place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Aiken, on York street, on Thursday evening October 14th.

All who expect to attend the World's Famous Artists at the Opera House tomorrow (Thursday) evening, are requested to be seated, if possible, not later than 8:30 o'clock, at which time the curtain will be raised.

The Carrie Lane Bible Society of the First Baptist Church will entertain the other societies of the church at the home of Mrs. J. T. Collins, on Friday afternoon from 4 to 6 o'clock.

The drop in cotton of 25c points Monday came as a surprise and shock to people in this section. The market rallied today and gained nearly 10c of the points that yesterday. The commissioners who were appointed by Governor Cooper in connection with the proposed election to decide whether or not East Chester should join York county held their meeting at Port Law yesterday and elected Mr. J. B. Nunnery, of Wylie's Mill, chairman and Mr. H. H. Hall, of Great Falls, secretary.

The matter of surveying the proposed territory was discussed. It will be recalled that about 1400 ft. has been provided for the work and it is stated that it will take at least $1,000 to get the territory surveyed. It is supposed that York county will hold a large meeting of citizens of the county to raise the needed amount. The News understands that a similar definite was done at the meeting yesterday.

The City Manager form of government in Rock Hill is under fire. A large meeting of citizens of that city held a meeting Monday night and passed some drastic resolutions, which call for a thorough investigation of the city's financial condition.

That certain reports are in circulation which "seriously reflect on the council and indicate a truly alarming condition of affairs" was the statement made last night at a meeting of citizens by J. B. Crockett, while others present stated they had heard reports, the truth or falsity of which could not be proved, and, hence, denounced by no concerted action, and it true those responsible for the conditions existing should be brought to task.

THINKING FOR OURSELVES.

It seems strange that, in this day of multiplicity of effort and results there should exist persons who are still willing, and even anxious, for others to do their thinking for them. Yet every now and then we come across such persons. The natural inclination is to catalogue them as the last specimens of a species long thought to have been extinct. They are, in fact, merely the last links which connect this generation with the older one. In the days that we like to read about, the days that some people refer to as a better civilization, there were many persons who were well content to let others think for them, not because they wished to shirk the duty, but because they did not feel themselves capable of performing it. Such persons, however, gained nothing by their action, and in fact lost a great deal. It may have been that the conditions of life at that time made it unnecessary for them to trouble about reaching their own conclusions, much less expressing them, but the fact remains that they missed a great deal of the best that life can give. The power to think and to express our thoughts is God-given, but it has not always been exercised to its best advantage. Who in this day would permit anyone else to think for them? They would be willing to abide by the decisions of others in regard to their individual lives? From right to the common surface of a man, linked with the power to think, constitutes a man's life.

Today, however, we are taking full advantage of our rights to think, and unless the pendulum swings too far the other way we shall be all the better for it. Our trouble is not so much the disinclination to do our thinking as it is the temptation to think too much, or at least to try to think for others as well as ourselves. One man may hold an entirely different view from another and yet the two views may be equally true. The fact of two opposing views coming together is the effort of each to prove his judgment correct often leads to impatience. Neither is willing to give in to the other; both are anxious to win out, and the difference between the two often deepens into a downright quarrel. Of course, the only thing to do in such circumstances is to agree to disagree and then dismiss the subject, but the error we too would have been to prevent such a development. This is but one result of thinking for ourselves and expressing our own opinions regardless of the right to think and the opinions of others. If we could only remember always that others exercise the same rights and privileges that we do, we would not plunge unexpectantly into hot water as so many of us do.

The right to think for ourselves is inherent, but at the same time it brings its own obligations, and chief among them is the duty of respecting the other man's opinions as well as not pressing our own views unobscured upon him. Tolerance is a quality badly needed in the present day; tolerance of the other man's ideas and judgments. If we used it as a guide in our daily lives we would avoid many obstacles that sometimes block our way to our contentment. We may hold perfectly good opinions, they may be far better than the other man's, but we have no more right to insist that he should agree to them than he would have to try to make us agree to his opinions.
