Imminent danger.

I was terribly frightened. I think it was a clear morning. From my window washing over the trestle and the sound, most of the passengers got off aboard. The car started. When it was half way up the beach, I came to a decision and It went there, and the rest of this story is where I stopped at Whitleyville.

Wayne Balfour and Stewart of the Great Western Journal placed a personal appeal for aid. The Keystone board was heard in general remarks tonight at which subscriptions were received for the benefactors. Many of the poor people in Jellolo are destitute and it is felt that all aid should be given to the sufferers so that the Work of God may proceed without interruption.
