The efficient operation of a home heating plant depends on many factors, including proper construction of the chimney flue, proper installation, a thorough understanding of the plant in order to get a maximum return from the fuel used, tight house construction, a correct degree of humidity, and good ventilation, says the Division of Agricultural Engineering of the United States Department of Agriculture. The problems of construction can be solved only by a skilled builder, while experience is the best teacher as to satisfactory ways of handling the individual home-heating plant. The other factors, however, can be controlled with a little careful attention at the start of the winter season.

Cracks around doors and windows and leaky floors waste a great deal of heat in the average house. Under conditions of moderate temperature and wind the resulting air change is not objectionable and does not materially affect the operation of the heating plant. But when snow or rain is driven before a wind of 25 to 60 miles an hour, if window and door cracks permit, the air will change four or five times more rapidly than it should. Many people try to remedy this by shutting off the rooms on the windward side in an effort to force the heat into the other rooms. The only sure cure, however, says the department, is to use storm wood, wood and felt weather stripping or metal stripping, and caulking materials to fill in the cracks and to make the house comfortable in all kinds of weather.

The proper degree of humidity is another factor in heating the home that requires careful consideration. Investigations have not proved definitely what are the best conditions as to temperature and moisture for our dwellings, but a rough practical test for determining whether the air in a room is too dry is to observe the inside of windows on a cool day. If frost forms freely on the inside of the glass there is no doubt but that the inside air has sufficient humidity.

If there is no sign of frost the air is likely too dry. The degree of humidity and the amount of ventilation both have their effect on the inside of the home-heating plant. The proper amount of each is best determined by experience and individual conditions, as a rule.

Night Schools To Open Soon.

On Friday night, at 7 o'clock, September 28th, the night schools fostered by the Chester City Public Schools will open at the respective mills, with the following teachers in charge:

Springstein, at the Club-House; George C. Galpin, Misses Maud Big-ham and Mayne Colvin.

Bureka, at the school building; J. W. Wilson, Misses Mary Grace Douglas and Nancy Carroll.

Baldwin, at the school building; Mrs. J. A. Wofford, Misses Kella Garvin and Jamie Kilgore.

Miss Beatrice Arnold is to be the Supervisor of all night schools and adult teacher at Baldwin in the afternoon. It may be possible that another teacher will be added to the night school force at the Eureka Mill if the situation demands it. All of the people interested in these schools are urged to be present on the opening night, Friday September 28, in order to get organized and ready to begin work in earnest on Monday night, October 1.

With this program we contemplate great things for the adult folk of our industrial institutions who will sacrifice the time to come out and take advantage of these opportunities.

FLORIDA SHERIFF SLAIN BY WOMAN

A. Cary Ellis of Escambia Shot. For License Fire Into House. When Sheriff Falls on Front Porch.

Pensacola, Fla., Sept. 25.—Sheriff A. Cary Ellis of Escambia county was shot and killed instantly here late today by Beatrice McClain, 49, when the officer attempted to arrest her on charges of contempt of court, and the woman in turn was shot to death when two city policemen, who accompanied the sheriff, fired into the house. The policemen began firing when they saw the sheriff fall on the front porch.

One shot struck the woman, killing her instantly. According to police, the woman had been suffering from an affected mind, and according to them, had annoyed families living at the house owned by H. M. Cobb of Bagdad, Fla., which house she is said to have claimed as hers. She had been ejected once before by Sheriff Ellis after some resistance.

Cobb obtained an injunction to prevent her from entering the house again, which she is alleged to have violated and was quoted as having told persons in the vicinity she would "die in the house." Ellis, armed with a warrant, went to arrest her, accompanied by the two policemen. Ellis found the door locked and all shades drawn. He asked the woman to come out but she refused. When the officer tried to force the door she fired twice, neither bullet taking effect. He again remonstrated with her to open the door and submit, but refused again. Ellis succeeded in opening the door and had started to enter when she fired again and he dropped dead.

Captain of Police Harper, at the front door near where Ellis stood, began firing. Captain O'Connell fired through a side window. One of their shots struck the woman. Sheriff Ellis was serving his second term as Sheriff. He is survived by his widow and three daughters, all residents of Pensacola. Before becoming sheriff Ellis was a conductor on the Duvalville & Nashville railroad.

BRIEFLY TOLD.

The people living along the Yukon River in Yukon and Alaska bet when the great ice break will occur. They organize pools at Fairbanks and Dawson where large sums are won and lost at the betting. A pole four inches thick and twenty feet high is frozen in the ice in the middle of the river. A wire cable connects this pole with an electric stop clock on the shore, set to Standard Time. The second the ice moves the pole the clock stops, and that moment marking the record of the beginning of the ice break and decides all bets. The usual date is about May 10.

The giant Sequoia, thirty-two feet in diameter and 280 feet high, which is the second largest tree in the world, was dedicated to President Harding's memory as the Warren Harding Tree. The giant redwood is 5,000 years old and is second in size to the General Sherman tree.

"STANDARD"
 The Balanced Gasoline
 You can't dodge it
 —the principle of balance. It is universal. From the beginning of time, practically everything that man has invented has afterwards been improved by getting a finer balance of parts or constituents. That is the way we have improved gasoline and the performance that it will give. A certain proportion of low-boiling constituents for better, quick, surer starting. A certain proportion of high-boiling constituents for better power and mileage. A certain proportion of intermediate constituents for better acceleration and snappier pick-up. That is what "Standard" has. The proportion, or balance, is everything. "Standard" has it. It is the better gasoline—all ways.

"The Yard of Quality"

"This is what spoiled your oil"

Long experience has given the Fleece Boss a remarkable instinct for locating oil. One of his drivers complained that the oil wasn't any good and the motor heated up. The Boss discovered a leak in the upper radiator connection and the fan blowing water straight into the oil sump. No wonder the oil didn't work and the engine over-heated!

Daylight Your Kitchen! Drive Out Gloom!

Good lighting makes your work easier and more pleasant. It is all important in the kitchen where you spend so many of your working hours. It drives away shadows—and glare and gloom. It saves eyes and prevents eyestrain, and makes it unnecessary to peer into the ovens or cupboards. It enables you to do more work in your kitchen in less time with less effort.

You can have good lighting in your kitchen by means of a Daylight Kitchen Unit. This new "daylight" unit makes your kitchen bright and cheerful. It is sanitary and easy to clean. It provides an abundance of good, soft and helpful artificial daylight in every part of the kitchen.

Let us install the Daylight Kitchen Unit in your kitchen on 30 Days Free Trial. If you are satisfied at the end of that time, pay us

Only $6.00

EXPERIMENTS SHOW VALUE OF LAMB AND MUTTON AS FOOD

The production of sheep for wool alone is rapidly on the wane in the United States. More and more emphasis is being placed on the production of lamb and mutton for the table, although only 3.7 per cent of the meat consumed by the average American for the last five years was lamb or mutton. This proportion should be much larger, according to the United States Department of Agriculture, as mutton and lamb are among the most healthful, nutritious, and palatable of meats.

The reason for the limited use of lamb and mutton throughout the central section of the United States probably had its origin in the days of the development of the great Corn Belt region west of the Appalachian Mountains, department workers say. At that time the sheep owned by the settlers of that region came largely from the North Atlantic States and had been developed almost without exception for wool production, regardless of the inherent flavor of the meat. The flesh of these animals was no doubt tough, not so palatable as other meats, and possibly, owing to the crude methods of caring for it, much of it was unfit for use. As this section of the country has been somewhat slower in the development of mutton breeds of sheep, and as much prejudice against the meat has been handed down from generation to generation, there has developed the idea that the flesh of all sheep is not appetizing and carries peculiar flavors.

There is a characteristic taste in cooked mutton and lamb, due to the chemical contents of the meat fat, that makes it easy to distinguish from other kinds of meat. The same is true of beef, chicken, venison, or rabbit. In order to prove that this taste was not unwholesome and that the meat was palatable, experiments were made by the Bureau of Animal Industry of the department, in cooperation with the Office of Home Economics, which proved that lamb and mutton are wholesome, appetizing, and economical meats for family use, ranking well up with other meats in food value per pound. The fact that only a small proportion of sheep carcasses are condemned under Government meat inspection furthers the opinion of department workers that mutton and lamb should be used more generally.
