TUESDAY, OCTOBER 2, 1923.

"I'VE DONE MY BEST."

It matters not how hard I strain and sweat, and fall, in spite of brain and brawn, if I can still keep hope alive.

Within my soul to urge me on; What do I care how much may weigh The burden that has me hard-pressed?

If I can say at close of day "I've done my best."

The world may laugh because it seems I try in vain to reach my goal.

Fit still may shatter all my dreams And leave me in the same old hole; And if my sides do still keep aching I still may take a well-earned rest.

If I can say at close of day "I've done my best."

If I can't give a thousand to the betterment of some one's plight, I can at least be glad to do.

"My pay—yes, give the Widow's Mite."

And if I can work on and pray I know I still may stand the test.

If I can say at close of day "I've done my best."

My friends may lose all faith in me Because I do not prove worth while.

No one may listen to my plea Or cheer me onward with a smile; But if I do not go astray I still may be among the best.

If I can say at close of day "I've done my best."

So others may win wealth and fame Before they rest within the bier; But I may not win in life's game—No matter how I struggle here.

So if it's not my lot to sway I will not even be distressed; If I can say on Judgment Day "I've done my best."

PERCY W. GREENE.

Local and Personal

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hayes, of Rock Hill, spent Sunday in Chester with the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Freasley.

Judge DeVore yesterday decided that the South Carolina Railroad Commission was not authorized to regulate and supervise motor vehicles operated in South Carolina for hire and that the commission exceeded its power in attempting to assume such authority.

Miss Elizabeth Boyd, a native of Chester county, eighty-five years of age, died at her home in the Pleasant Grove Presbyterian church neighborhood, last Friday.

Judge L. R. Williams died at his home in York early yesterday morning after an illness of some time. Mr. Williams was one of York county's most influential citizens.

Sellers, who is a cotton buyer, formerly lived in Monroe, but now lives in Wadesboro. He claims the colored man who was driving the car was on the left side of the road, there being a fog of dust which prevented the driver from seeing each other until the collision occurred.

Remember?

It isn't such a far stretch for memory to recall the day when you had to wait for a long, clear, cold spell of weather before you could have sausage.

Today?

No wait for weather or seasons. Just telephone your meat dealer.

The delightful tang of Fall mornings is made more zestful by a breakfast of Brookfield sausage, made from the choicest morsels of carefully selected pork, blended with spices.

That is but one of the services that Swift & Company renders—making available to you numerous products of the highest quality, when, where, and as you wish them.

This has been made possible by the development, during more than a half century of service, of 23 packing plants adjacent to the best producing centers, hundreds of branch distributing houses, one of them near you, and several thousand refrigerator cars which carry the meat to your dealer in the best condition.

Volume production enables Swift & Company to offer you this service at an average profit from all sources of only a fraction of a cent a pound.

The following is from The Monroe Enquirer. Mr. Sellers resided in Chester several years ago and has a number of friends here. Mr. W. T. Sellers, wife and little daughter, Beatrice, were right severely shaken up, bruised and cut when they met head-on another car yesterday afternoon about 5 o'clock near the home of Mr. Sim Williams, five miles east of Monroe on the Pageland road.

Miss Kathleen Stein and Mr. Ernest V. Roberts, of Chester, were married Saturday night by Rev. Henry Stokes.

Big things happened in the cotton market this morning. At ten o'clock the government's cotton ginning report as of September 25th, came out giving the ginnings as 3,215,294 bales as compared with 3,883,000 for the same period last year.

Speed in travel appeals to the Chinese and thousands of Chinese take joy rides simply for pleasure. It is no uncommon thing for a poor coolie to ride his last "chuck" on an automobile ride that leaves him stranded many miles from home.

CARD OF THANKS.

We wish to express our gratitude to our many friends for their kind acts of service rendered us during the illness and bereavement of our wife and mother, also the many floral gifts.

Mr. Pierce Grant and Children.

NOTICE OF APPLICATION FOR DISCHARGE.

From the Ground Up.

Few persons are willing to pay the penalty of learning how to work from the ground up. Most of us want to gain the top at first leap, and are not satisfied with having to feel our way. Of course, success easily attained is a very alluring theory, but in actual practice it is not possible, and those of us who for one year or another are not satisfied with the progress we make should bear this in mind. This is one reason why it should be the sacred trust of all those who have the training of the youthful mind to see to it that it gets the best possible attention, that solid foundations are laid for the future and that each young man and young woman should have something with which to fare the world when it opens before them as a great unknown field of effort. The child of today should be far better prepared to take up the duties of life than the child of a generation or two ago. Much has happened during that intervening period and in an educational way opportunities have been offered that were not available a quarter of a century ago. Backed by careful training and solid education the young worker faces life in a very different frame of mind than his father did. He feels that he is able to make a good fight if once his feet are settled toward the right path, and if education and sound counsel have not been able to do that, then his own trained intelligence and common sense should be able to do so. The wise young man or woman will resist the lure of the "short cuts" and "hit-or-miss" methods that are so much evidenced during the present strenuous time, although the temptation to make use of them is so strong that it is not surprising that it is yielded to time and time again. If real success is desired, however, the occasional-wise head or young shoulders will resist. The snare is spread for it and will choose the longer, slower, but safer methods of feeling its way, and thus learning through rich experience how to reach the bright goal. Naturally a great deal of time is wasted in experiments in order that the longer and slower methods may be avoided, and much of this time can never be regained no matter how hard we try nor how faithful we may be to our duty—once we appreciate its full import. Those who make the most haste, as a rule, are the last to reach the goal, and this truth is demonstrated all through life in practically all interests with which we are concerned. "Watch your step" is a powerful plea to those who would seek to obtain high rewards without having worked honestly for them, and, besides, such rewards should they by chance be thus obtained should ring true. They have been won through some ruse which probably does not reflect much credit, and they do not stand the acid test of time and experience. Only those who have worked their way slowly and painstakingly through life's manifold hardships and temptations can really be said to have deserved the success that crowns their efforts. For them the light that floods about them is no reflected glory. It is a radiance all their own because it has come to them through their own efforts begun, perhaps in small ways, but which, persevered in, brought them in time to larger opportunities. It is not possible, however, to take full advantage of all our opportunities as they increase in value unless we, too, have been able to develop proportionately, and to glimpse their great possibilities. We may do this only through our own efforts, because it is not possible to sense to any appreciable degree the changes that lie before us unless we have ourselves discovered the way. Help from others may be sought in difficult places, but it cannot make us continue to progress. We must find out how to do that ourselves, or else remain where we are until some friendly hand gives us another above in the right direction.

There are times, perhaps, when lucky fortune, or some kind fate seems to place us at the top which we never could have reached unaided. Experience will soon show, however, that unless we reveal certain latent possibilities within us it will not be long before we shall begin to slip back into the mediocre position that we had filled before. On the other hand, however, if we are ever able to work ourselves to the top through our own efforts we shall most probably remain there because we have earned the right to be there. Those who do not seem to work from the beginning—regardless of how insignificant and even humble these beginnings may be, rise rapidly, provided they give the best that is in them to each new duty as it arises. The knowledge thus gained is incalculable and contributes in no small manner to our future success. It is better to earn the right to reach the heights through our own endeavors no matter if reaching the goal is long delayed, than to get there through the aid of others which, once removed, makes us helpless to keep the place we have attained.

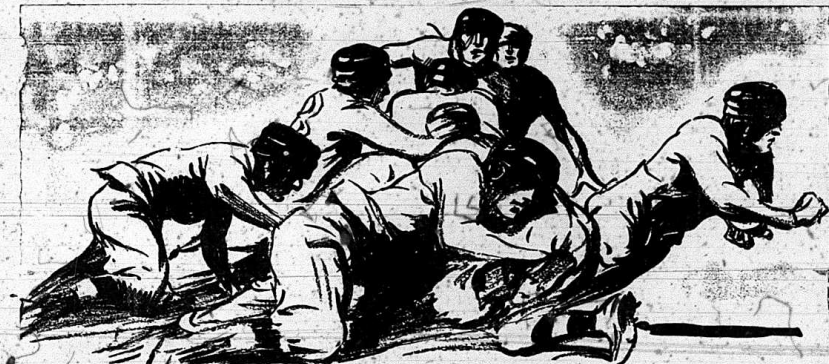

The Japanese Parliament is modelled externally upon that of Great Britain, but its spirit is entirely different. In Japan, debates in Parliament are pleasant occasions where men of second rank are permitted to display themselves. The leader of a party may not even have a seat in the chamber.
