It has been most clearly demonstrated that his farm is a great asset to the county and to the State. It has also been shown that crops planted on bar clover land have stood the by weather decidedly better than those on the concrete example right before our farmers it seems that they would all be going in strong, full bar clover.

The fact that the city of Chester has had considerable trouble in securing a sufficient supply of water for the past few weeks has no doubt familiarized the entire community with the fact that the water works plant is insufficient to care for the needs of the city, which have doubled in the past few years. With this fact in mind there will probably be very little trouble in getting the necessary appropriation for the improvement of the water works department.

From press dispatches it is evident that there is considerable discussion in the State Highway Department. With the composition of thirteen or fourteen men it is perfectly natural that there be considerable discussion. It is almost impossible to run any business smoothly when there are so many "heads."

There is much dissatisfaction throughout the entire State with the State Tax Commission. Every few days word comes from various sources of the dictatorial policy adopted by the commission. Many have said that the man government was never more autocratic than the South Carolina Tax Commission. This office is entirely too far removed from the people and the wisest course would be to have the head of the department responsible to the people. If the heads of the tax commission had to go before the people for their jobs they would be more considerate.

More than twenty-five per cent of the money appropriated by the South Carolina legislature toward paying salaries. This is evidence in itself that there are entirely too many office holders and assistants. We can never expect lower taxes until we inject some business principles into the government.

A buyer for one of the largest mercantile establishments in the United States has just returned from a buying trip to England, Belgium and Germany and says that he can buy merchandise much cheaper in Belgium and Germany than in England. When asked for the reason he stated that the people in Belgium and Germany had gone to work, while Englishmen were still fussing about hours and wages.

If the property owners on unpaved streets in Chester would pay for a concrete curb and the city would place gravel between the curb, it would be a wonderful help and would give streets equal to that of any town in the country. The only thing that keeps it from being done is that we just don't do it. That's all.

At Brighton, Barb, New York, recently a man came very near being drowned on account of his false teeth. A life lover noticed him sinking and pulled him ashore where it was found that his false teeth had slipped out and had gone down his throat. As soon as the teeth were removed he would be able to breathe. The false teeth were well worn and he would not have had them in had he had them in the first place.

France has never accepted the Anglo-Saxon dictum that a man who is proved guilty. There, upon generally, an accused person must prove his innocence. A few points in that an American people who find a valuable ring in a hotel. They did not turn it over to the manager. Instead they took it away with them. Instead, as they contended at their trial, to advertise their find in the papers. They were called upon in court to prove that they did not mean to keep the ring. As they held up to the moment of the ring, not made any effort to find the lost ring had made no report of the matter, they failed to prove their innocence. Under the French law the prosecutor did not have to prove their guilt.

Their sentence was, for the man, two years' penal servitude; for the woman, one year. It is a pity that a woman would be called injustice. Which only goes to show that viewpoint affects the degree of justice, as it does almost every other idea.

In account of the long connection throughout this section this year, it has been necessary for the Southern Power Company to curtail service as a consequence thereof the cotton mills, and many other industrial plants throughout the Piedmont section, have been idle a part of the time for the past several weeks. This has caused considerable financial loss to the power company, the manufacturing establishments and the workmen.

Now comes the announcement from Mr. J. B. Duke, of the power company, that a huge steam plant will be erected for the purpose of handling the entire shortage of water in the river. This announcement will be received with pleasure and by another illustration of the service which the Southern Power Company renders to the people of this section.

The Home Town Paper.
When the evening mail is over and the dishes put away, you sit you settle down to enjoy your paper with happy content.

When a peaceful feeling over you, you breathe in your face a fresh breeze.

When you scan the weekly paper from your front door.

It tells you of all about who's sick and who's come an' go.

Like to see the comin' vendue at the farm of Jabez Stowe.

The burnin' of the cider mill belongs to "High Brow."

Get a write-up in the paper from your 'ol home town.

There ain't an entertainment or a meetin' where they pray.

But when they are about to 'gin 'em livin' far away.

If the chicken-pox is ragin' or the mumps is goin' round,

I persuade it in the paper from my 'ol home town.

I read the mornin' papers and the evenin' papers, too.

An' I sometimes pick a novel up an' sort of skip it through;

But when I want some padding, which nowhere else is found,

I wrap up the little paper from my 'ol home town.

They say our good an' bad deeds are recorded up on high.

So that God can classify us when it comes our time to die.

of farming system that insures the cash returns each month is the cash returns that can be had from the farmer. What we need is less talk and more practice. Regular sales and regular pay. Try the new Plan, where live stock works along with the food and the food crop sustains the live stock and the farmer is able to use his time profitably twelve months in the year.

RUM AND NARCOTICS MAILED IN FALSE TEETH AND CANDIES

Attempts to Smuggle in Contraband From 'Abroad' Usually Fail, Despite Clever Ruses, as U. S. Agents Are Always on Guard.

Some of the persons who attempt to smuggle narcotics or liquor into this country through the mails might well qualify for "gag" men in the movies, they have been cut out.

That is what the customs officials and the postal inspectors are charged with preventing the importation of these articles; said is only the "dubs" and amateurs, according to them, who attempt to smuggle.

For the job of keeping the country clean of drugs and drink is being handled by the two branches of the Government service.

At the ports of entry, all packages in the foreign mails are examined. Sometimes it is by the customs officials, sometimes by postal inspectors.

Whenever finds illegal matter, the other agency is notified, and the evidence then is sent along to the Bureau of Internal Revenue for subsequent destruction.

The storehouses in Washington where contraband packages are kept before they are destroyed might delight the heart of any detective story writer or reader.

Here is a set of false teeth, drilled to hold opium. There is a box of candy, the inside of each piece filled with some narcotic.

There are few narcotics which have been tried by the smugglers, not all of whom are professional "dops" or liquor agents.

And some of the mails addressed home from Europe by quite respectable persons tell amazing tales.

There are, for example, seven entries in the book of seizure records under the name of a Chicago merchant traveling to Rome.

From France this lady sent seven boxes of chocolates, packed in a gaily colored box. The official had seen that particular kind of box before.

They opened it and found chocolates, with tiny draughts of rum, gin and wines in each bonbon.

Figures are sometimes detected in false bottles marked with the trade name of some well-known Parisian perfumer.

Smugglers also attempt to secrete narcotics and liquors in the heads of dolls, or in the "innards" of miniature statues, in salt and pepper.

Just as there is a fascination for the well-to-do who could afford to pay the customs tariff, in trying to get away with smuggling a piece of lace, so there is a fascination for the postal and customs officers concerning illegal mail.

The difference is that the Government agents usually win, as is witnessed by the strange stories of room of contraband articles in the capital.

WHAT PRICE PLEASURE!

If money is tight, awful light, in the Piedmont section now in general and in any one county in particular, can be explained by saying the cotton crop is short?

The cotton crop, short or not, has just begun to wear and aside from the psychological effect the size of the crop has no immediate bearing on money conditions.

Money has always been scarce in this part of the world in July and August. Time was when silver dollars were as scarce as hen's teeth in this section in midsummer.

In later years this condition has of its borders and out of the State, and both forever, approximately a million dollars every year, mostly for the pleasure of riding. Fifteen hundred dollars drained out of any one of these counties daily for gasoline is bound to make a dent in the money supply.

It does not make a particle of difference whether we say it or not, people are not going to change one whit. They will go to agree most of them, with what we say and then play on.

The reason money is tight, awful light, anywhere in the Piedmont section is that for five years each Piedmont county has sent out county has sent to Detroit and have only known where all else just about a million dollars each year.

Why do you wonder why money is tight and why do you blame it on a gaiter crop as yet unpicked? Fill 'er up. She'll hold ten gallons.

That or no dust we want to ride.

Quite a few of the local citizens have visited Lakeview since the rain of last Thursday afternoon to take a look at the lake. The rain filled the pond to a depth that has not been known in years. After some discussion Mr. Barron made a motion that the city build a brick station on the old lot.

The public building committee, of which Dr. Abel is the chairman, was ordered to go ahead with the erection of a stable which it is estimated will cost about $2,000.
