
May 2015

Tents

Colby Dockery

Follow this and additional works at: <https://digitalcommons.winthrop.edu/anthology>

Part of the Poetry Commons

Recommended Citation

Dockery, Colby (2015) "Tents," The Anthology. Vol. 2015, Article 14.

Available at: <https://digitalcommons.winthrop.edu/anthology/vol2015/iss1/14>

This Poetry is brought to you for free and open access by Digital Commons @ Winthrop University. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Anthology by an authorized editor of Digital Commons @ Winthrop University. For more information, please contact digitalcommons@mailbox.winthrop.edu.

Tents

Colby Dockery

We don our masks to hide our impish plot
and now are here, when before we were not.
Enter our striped tents of black and white—and turn thy day to Dionysian night.

We will swing through the air with endless grace and put a smile on dear Apollo's face.
Be not afraid of whom thou cannot see—they only want to laugh and play with thee.

We break the feeble limits of the mind
in these tents where Muses hath intertwined.
They will tell thy fortune and make thee smile—
and only occasionally beguile.

57

We have no doubt thou wish for us to stay lest thou dost leave and drive thyself astray.
So make a plea to Hecate's mindful ear—
and catch us all before we disappear.