FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 29.

The development of brotherly affection in lodges and fraternities and other organizations is one of the finest aspects of our civilization. American life. Now if the same spirit can only come into the community as a whole, and establish interest in and care for the weakest and most struggling elements of people, our social problems will be largely solved.

There is too much tendency now to think only of their own comfort and prosperity and pay no attention to how others are getting along. Persons of wealth and good incomes will fret and complain because good servants are scarce and high priced, or because labor costs high and they get inefficient service. Their complaints are often perfectly justified, and they may be sozed by striking help.

But if they would compare their situation with that of many struggling people, they would realize that they have little to complain of. They should think of the man who has a family of children who has been unable to get regular work. Or they should contemplate the condition of the widow who has no one to support her. If they will go down into the poorer quarters of their own town, they will find plenty of people whose lot is infinitely worse than theirs.

These complainers have perhaps to give up some luxuries that they used to enjoy. But many of these people have too many luxuries, and it would do them no harm to cut down some features of their lavish living, and find more of their pleasure from association with the common run of people. The enjoyments that come from extravagant spending quickly disappear.

The world will be in a good deal of turmoil until this spirit of consideration and sympathy becomes more general and until people do their utmost to remove evils that cause suffering and distress.

In the opinion of Secretary of Labor Davis, who has just completed a survey of the work of his department during the last twelve months, the times are bright with promise to the American wage earner and to American industry alike. He believes that with two of the years three major strikes—those in the coal and the textile industries—settled the country is on the verge of prosperity.

More than 3,600,000 men who were idle a year ago have been put to work. Unemployment, according to analysis of the department's figures, is hardly greater at the present than during the normal periods of prosperity. There is always a floating population of approximately 1,000,000 wage earners out of employment.

Creo-pine Shingles Show a Smaller Upkeep Cost than any other form of Roofing

Wooden shingles when properly treated are the ideal roofing material.

By the high power hydraulic process of creosoting Creo-pine shingles the undiluted creosote oil thoroughly penetrates the pores of the wood. Moisture, rain, frost, or sun cannot cause decay or rot.

Nails driven into untreated shingles rust and wear loose causing leaks in the roof. Nails driven in Creo-pine shingles do not rust and hold firmly for many years.

Roofs of Creo-pine shingles have been in service for fifteen years with no upkeep whatever, and at the end of that time were in good condition.

Creo-pine shingles are very little, if any, higher than heart pine shingles and last much longer. They are cleaner to handle than dipped shingles and make a neat, attractive slate roof appearance.

Call on us and let us tell you all about the Creo-Pine Shingles.

employment. These figures do not include the striking railway employees, but apply only to wage earners who have been deprived of their work through no act of their own, or of a means of livelihood.

All the way to the department point to a coming scarcity of labor, both skilled and unskilled. How soon the country will experience a labor shortage depends upon several factors, labor department officials state, chief of which is the unsettled rural situation. When that is adjusted to good times, apparently, have a clear road ahead.

The task of putting 3,600,000 men back to work is being accomplished by American industries, the department's figures disclose, with a reduction of no more than 3 per cent in the rate of wages paid. In other words, the wage cut has averaged during the past twelve months less than 5 cents on the dollar. There has been no "wage panic" such as was feared a year ago.

REDUCE THE OVERHEAD.

There is a world of wisdom in the simple recipe for reduction of taxation in the two words "Cut expense." The trouble with almost every proposition for public improvement is not the actual cost of the project, but the extra cost for interest and upkeep that must be added when sometimes an additional outlay to make old things correspond with the new.

Another cause for high taxes is the expense of administration of public affairs. No successful private business is conducted with so great an overhead as is public service. Employing more help at higher wages than the private business, there are few official departments which do not give as efficient service. We hear the call for more machinery and more help, and higher salaries.

A paper in Boulder, Colorado, uses its cover page as an editorial on the subject, printing it in large type. It has recently elaborated on the theme of "Cut the Overhead" by illustrating public expense from its poor fund, an insignificant amount, but in which the cost of distribution was $2 for every dollar of relief extended. It also gave comparisons which indicated a very large percentage of waste in all public activities.

The lesson, however, seem hard for the people to learn. Even actual demonstration fails to last long in the public mind.

More than 30 years ago a party of enthusiasts determined to break up a political ring in a Northern Michigan county and succeeded in getting control of the principal offices. The budget was reduced to half its previous total, and every phase of government was cared for more efficiently. One would naturally expect such a record would be ap- preciated by the taxpayers, but it was not. True, the ring was broken and its members scattered over the country, but partisanship ruled the next election and since then the former offices have been rotating with little show of change, save at Father Time's hand.

When the ring was removed one occasionally, of course, taxation again has reached new records.

Taxes will never be reduced by adding to the machinery of government.—Dearborn Independent.

CHINESE PRAYED FOR RAIN AND IT CAME

Chicago, Sept. 26.—Ten thousand Christian Chinese troops and thousands of other Chinese, both Christian and non-Christian, gathered in Honan province in a monster open-air prayer meeting for rain, according to representatives of the Methodist Episcopal church, working in China.

Continued droughts during the spring and early summer in Honan province aroused fears among the Chinese people of a return of famine and the villages went on pilgrimages to the temple of the rain god in Yu Ho valley to pray for rain.

Major General Peng Yu Haiang, member of the Abery Methodist Episcopal church of Peking and commander of the Eleventh division of the Chinese army, sent out an invitation to all Christians to meet his troops in prayer for rain.

A grand review of the Eleventh division was held. The national anthem was sung, and an address was given by General Peng, who prayed that the sins of the Honan people be visited upon his head and the punishment of drought be lifted.

It happened that two hours after the meeting closed a heavy rain fell, missionaries report.

The production of more than 6,000,000 bales of cotton was prevented by the boll weevil last year.

MORE SANDHILL FRUIT IS DEVELOPMENT SLOGAN

Association Forming to Increase Peach Acreage; Plan Organization Meeting in October.

Hamel, Sept. 27.—Three thousand acres in peach trees will be set out in the sandhill territory lying between Hamel and Hamel this spring, or 1,000 more young trees than were set out in the whole sandhill territory from Santee to Camden, S. C., last year, according to estimates made by the chamber of commerce. Next month, development agents of the south, and southeast will meet here to organize the Sandhill Development Association, for the purpose of planting at least twice as much acreage in dewberries, strawberries, and raspberries as were cultivated last year in the sandhills.

Ucker, of Savannah, Ga., director of development of the Sandhill railroad, and former assistant secretary of the United States department of the interior. Jones of Norfolk, Va., general division of agriculture of the Federal board; N. M. McBride, assistant developing agent, from Florence, and representatives from every chamber of commerce and business organization between Santee and Camden, S. C.

WANT MAIL RECEPTALS.

Postmaster, T. M. Douglas has received the following communication from the Post-Office Department relative to the equipment of all dwellings with mail receptacle or door-slot: Postmaster Douglas begs to say that the Post-Office Department will cooperate of all patrons who receive mail at their dwellings, who have not provided mail receptacles or door-slots; to do so at the earliest date possible as it will be seen from the letter quoted that after a reasonable time mail will not be delivered to any dwelling not equipped with letter mail slot or receptacle.

"On account of the delays caused by door-slots, it is desired that mail carriers at dwelling houses where no door-slot or mail receptacle is provided, and the fact that a large majority of dwellings are thus equipped already, it seems timely, within a reasonable period, to require all who are to receive mail by street carriers at their dwellings to provide such accommodations, the expense of the same being small. Postmasters are therefore thus instructed."

"It is not the Department's desire, of course, that any shall be deprived of delivery by this requirement, but rather it is earnestly hoped that all will see the disadvantage of it and its advantage to themselves as well as to the carriers. But if it finally becomes necessary mail delivery will be discontinued where no door-slots (preferably) or mail receptacles, are provided."

"I wish you could know how much I am improved since taking the Cardui," writes Mrs. Nanette Brown, of Black Rock, Ark. "You wouldn't know me for the same week I used to be before I took it. At my ... I had to keep off my feet or I would fall. I couldn't do my housework, and just got where I'm one as well as best as living. Some of us feel my husband of Cardui. He got for me and I took three bottles before I stopped—then off and on for the last three years just as I saw a decided improvement after my first bottle. I used the three, but was able to do my work with ease, and now I am well for my family and for others. I am feeling fine, and strong and well."

Take Cardui! It may be just the medicine you need.

Every time a woman spends a dollar for goods made outside the Carolinas as a substitute for goods made within the state, she weakens just that much the possible advancement of her husband.

Only a relative small number of us have enough to live on without active daily labor. The balance of us work regularly, for upon our personal effort depends our monthly pay check or our semi-annual dividend.

A woman is not justifying her name of good house-keeper if she pays more money for a home-made article than she would have to pay for something made elsewhere. Nor will she be justified in buying an inferior article for the same money she would have to pay for a superior piece of goods made outside the Carolinas.

But a patriotic housewife's duty to her state is to know of her own knowledge that she can not buy a home-made article of the same value for the same money that she must pay for the foreign-made merchandise.

When the women of the Carolinas look their dealer straight in the eye over the counter and demand to be shown the home-made products, he may not have them, but if enough women join in this work, he will get them.

A dealer sells what his customers want. Some of them are committed by contract or agency or personal preference to certain widely known products and may be slow to change. But they will change quickly enough when they see that the buyers have become open marketers.

Ask your dealer to show you a garment, or a kitchen utensil, or an article of food, or equipment for the farm, that has the Carolinas brand on it. If he does not happen to have it, step around the corner and get a price from the other man.

If it is a good article and you buy it, the next time you call your regular dealer will have it in stock.

He is in business to please you and you both are in the business of making the Carolinas greater and more prosperous.

COTTON CONTINUES TO DETERIORATE

Despite Favorable Weather Conditions for Picking and Ginning of Staple.

Washington, Sept. 27.—While asserting that weather conditions were exceptionally favorable "to the picking and ginning of cotton in the last week," the weather bureau in its weekly crop review issued tonight reported "a steady deterioration in the condition of the crop in the northeastern section of the cotton belt. Persistent dry weather and the 'weevil' were recorded as the chief factors in the damage reported."

"Little if no rain occurred," the review added, "and there was abundant sunshine with moderate temperatures, which were exceptionally favorable for picking and ginning, and this work made unusually rapid progress. Picking was about three-fourths completed in the southern half of Texas and nearly half done in the northern part, and was much further advanced than usual for the season in Oklahoma."

"The bolls had nearly all opened in Arkansas and Louisiana. The staple was clean and in good condition in the latter state, but the fiber was generally short and the former because of dry weather.

"Harvest was well advanced in the East Gulf states, with bolls nearly all open to the northern limits of Georgia and mostly open in Southern North Carolina."

What is believed to be the largest camera in the world is owned by a scientist in Chicago. The camera body is 9 feet, 4 inches wide, 20 feet long, when fully extended, and 6 feet high. The lens cost $1,500 and is 12 inches in diameter. All moving parts run on roller bearings. The plate weights nearly 500 pounds when loaded and a derrick is used to put it into the camera. The plates are 8 feet long by 4 feet, 8 inches wide and weigh more than 200 pounds. A man enters the camera to focus the lens.

—to Help Your Hens Over the Moulting Season
Now is the time to prepare your hens for big egg production during the fall and winter months. Don't let them linger along from four to six months moulting. Get them through the moult QUICK, because a moulting hen is an expense instead of a producer. Every day counts and the feeding method you employ now determines the profits bidly will produce for you later on.

Try the FUL-O-PEP Way
The best known feeding method during the moulting season is half FUL-O-PEP DRY MASH and half FUL-O-PEP GROWING MASH. Keep it before your hens all the time and you will be greatly surprised how quickly they will finish moulting and be back on the nests, shelling out the eggs in large numbers.

FUL-O-PEP POULTRY FEEDS
Feeds poultry flocks to get results from poultry that at one time were considered impossible. FUL-O-PEP Growing Mash for growing birds enables you to produce big healthy, early laying pullets at less cost than any feed known. Keep FUL-O-PEP before your flocks all the time—don't stop feeding. It makes more eggs months old. Then feed FUL-O-PEP Dry Mash—the feed that makes more eggs later. FUL-O-PEP feeds have opened the door of opportunity to poultry flocks. FOOD AND BODY WARMTH.
By Bruce Ridgen, M. D.

The food that you nourishes you and keeps you warm. Your body is warmer than the air around you because of chemical processes going on following the eating of food, and what happens is very like the production of heat when a piece of wood or coal is burned.

It is the combination of the oxygen in the air and the carbon and hydrogen in the food that produces a sort of slow combustion in the body and the liberation of heat. You see it is practically the same process in both cases.

All this, simple enough as it seems to us, puzzled the minds of men until the discovery of oxygen by Priestley in 1771, and until the relation of this gas, which forms about 20 per cent of the air that we breathe, to the process of burning was demonstrated by Lavoisier during the French Revolution.

The value of food, therefore, depends largely upon the amount of heat it will produce when oxidized within the body. Scientists have worked out a system of measuring the value of different foods from this standpoint.

The unit of this system is called the calory meaning the amount of heat required to raise one kilogram of water (about two and one-quarter pints) one degree Centigrade (100 degrees on the Centigrade scale are the equivalent of 180 degrees on the Fahrenheit scale—thus the normal temperature of the body by the Fahrenheit scale would be about 98, while by the Centigrade scale it would be about 37.)

By means of an ingenious apparatus called the calorimeter it is possible to determine the number of calories produced by different varieties of food when burned. The amount of energy that a food is capable of liberating in the body is gauged by the number of calories it yields when burned; thus a pound of corned beef yields 1200 calories, while a pound of tomatoes yields only 100.

LORD, INCREASE OUR FAITH.

The world today needs faith possibly more than any other asset. A wave of criticism seems to have rolled over the earth. Confidence between man and man and between man and God has had a severe jolt. Too many are assuming the attitude expressed by Matthew Arnold: "The world, which lies about us so various, so beautiful, so new, both really and in our imaginations, is not ours, nor is it for our use; it is a world of pain; and we are here as on a darkling plain, swept by confused alarms of struggle and flight, where ignorant armies clash by night." Our faith in God needs increasing. To trust Him as our Father, to reverence Him as our Maker, this we must do if we would live. There is a sad tendency among the most cultured and intellectual to rule out of his world, to explain the panorama of life apart from Him, to magnify science and regard the universe as merely a fortuitous concourse of atoms; to live without God, and therefore without hope, in the world, and many of our intellectuals are boldly saying that there is no God, that man is only an animal, a step higher in the scale of being than the antelope ape, that death ends all for soul, as well as for body, and they live as animals of a higher order of intelligence. When there is no vision the people perish. A vision of God is essential to the spiritual life of any people. There can be no vision when the tides of faith are running low. Amid the turmoil and unrest and chaos of a world, passion-swept and war-torn, the only hope of our races is to have faith in God.

2. Many are losing faith in the Bible as the Word of God. They are doubting its divine origin, questioning the validity of certain parts, and calling in question the genuineness of its high claims. The higher critics and apostles of new thought are destroying the faith of the people while they pretend to bring light and scholarship. It is the most far-reaching, subtle and perilous attack ever made by the devil against the Word of God and the faith of men. He is indeed appearing as an angel of light. The world today is in a pitiful plight because so many have followed the leadership of blind guides, who emasculate the Bible in the name of learning and annihilate the faith of callow youth in the name of friendship.

No people can treat the Bible as the great universities, and some of the colleges are doing without paying a fearful price. The hope of the world lies in a return to a genuine faith in the Word of God and the sincere practice of its life-giving precepts. Truly "knowledge" perishes when it is not seasoned by grace. We have a bad case of the "swell head." We have made such vast progress that we have left the Bible far behind. It is not scientific enough for our day and generation. We are the people and wisdom shall die with us. There never was a time in the history of the world when true Christians were more imperatively needed, first to believe in the Bible as the Word of God and then to fight for the integrity of the Book. Our prayer should be, "Lord, increase our faith in Thy Word."

3. We need very much to increase our faith in the church. Everybody who thinks knows that we are living in a period of reaction and lowered ideals, and the church is not without fault. We know further that things would not be as bad as they are if the church were doing her part. But at this time it is well for us to remember that the church is God and no power or combination of powers can destroy this divine institution. The church is here to stay. Men may come, and men may go, but the church goes on to the end of time. The gates of hell shall not prevail against her. She is the Bride of Christ. He guards and cares for her. The world will never be saved except by and through the church. The world may mock and persecute and try to destroy the church, but the hope of the world is in the church.

"The enemies of the church will not get any where by knocking and persecuting her. Her friends see her faults and frankly call attention to them, but it is done in love and sorrow. Let her enemies beware. The church is a rock upon which men may stand and escape the perils of the wild waves, and the church is a rock against which her enemies may dash themselves to pieces. Let us have faith in the church of God. The church can do without us, but we cannot do without it. Take it out of the world and only phantom hopes and black night and wild-eyed despair and pandemonium will remain. Lord, increase our faith in the church of God."

Our mad and sad and bad world needs more of the faith of a little child. One night recently my little girl and her mother were reading about the poor woman who touched the hem of Christ's garment, and she said, "Mother, I wish Daddy could touch the hem of His garment and get well." There it is—the shadowless faith of a little child. Oh, how our poor mad and sad and bad world needs to touch the hem of His garment in simple faith and be healed of its grisous wound and cured of its deadly disease!

My little three year old girl, Caroline, recently coined a very useful word that graphically describes the state of things at the earth today. If any body accidentally disarranges her hair, she expresses her violent disapproval by exclaiming, "Hey-look. Edw you have mucked it up." You have mucked it all up! "The world is all mucked up and things will never get straight until the stock of the simple faith of men is increased. We have never properly estimated the value of that faith, the lack of faith, plays in the making of the breaking of an individual, a nation or a world government. The mightiest prayer we can make today is "Lord, increase our faith and the faith of all men everywhere."

FORD AND THE COAL HOGS.

Mr. Ford may be claiming a little too much credit for bringing the coal hogs to terms, nevertheless he has given a pretty good line on past conditions. He maintains that there has not been a shortage of coal, there having been enough above ground "to last the country a year, with economy," but the coal brokers had engineered a squeeze in an attempt to plunder the people. They could not have done so without the knowledge of an inactive Government at Washington, but the Government, according to Ford's view, was more than inactive. It is Ford's contention that as soon as he closed down his plants, "public sentiment began to concentrate on the local situation with the result that the Government control the Interstate Commerce Commission caused the ban that had been placed upon coal shipments to be removed." So great was the pressure thrown into the brokers that Ford says he got his coal at $2 a ton less than they paid for it. "I had bought it for even less if he had cared to jam them." It is a known fact that for two months past the cotton mills of the South had had repeated offers from coal brokers to furnish supplies in any quantity at certain figures, while appeals to the Government officials were in vain. The Government could do nothing in the execution of getting coal started to consumers. Mr. Ford shall prove the instrumentality through which the "hogged" supplies are released to the country, then he will rise a few notches in public estimation. —Charlotte Observer.

EDUCATION BROADENING.

Education is broadening and improving the public mind, regardless of hereditary or social conditions. A recent canvass of four of the typical cities of the country reveals the fact that out of 17,025 pupils, 29 per cent came from families where the father was a manual laborer, and only a small percentage more came from the families where the parent was a professional or business man. This canvass showed that there is a general desire among the manual workers' families for a better condition and skilled trades. The boys and girls are growing up with a desire to know something and to do something better; something easier and more beneficial to himself and to the country.

The manual laborer's son or daughter aspires for wide and professional knowledge, and many of them will later be acknowledged leaders in their callings. The son of the common laborer has no desire to go through life without a trade or profession. He knows what it means to live upon the wages of the man without a trade, and he is determined to improve his mind and train his fingers to do something in the mechanical, business or professional lines that will be more remunerative and open to him doors that are closed to the unfortunate man who neglected the opportunities of early life and is obliged to depend upon the wages of unskilled labor for the support of his family.

These young men and women will come to maturity prepared for something better. Some of them will be doctors, lawyers, preachers, teachers, scientists, politicians and mechanics. Some will be chemists, and others will be captains of industry. All will be prepared to live better lives because of the education they are getting.

Some may say that if all are educated there will be none to do the work that their fathers have done and which is being done by unskilled labor; but such will not be the case. Some of these same boys will produce inventions and mechanisms for the reduction of labor, and far less numbers will be required in the common labor class than there are to-day. This is an age of invention and of development, an age of improvement and advancement. Never in the history of the world has there been such progress as there is at the present time, and men and women of technical skill are needed in larger numbers than ever before, and the high schools and colleges will need to work over time to supply the demand for laborers of the higher class; the trade and professional class, and it is the duty of every parent to give his son and daughter every possible advantage. The present generation will not pass away before machinery of various kinds will be doing a large percentage of the manual labor that is now being performed by unskilled hands. Education broadens the mind, makes a better citizen and a better government and means better living conditions, better sanitation, better homes and a happier people.

The first known advertisement appearing in a Greco-Roman drinking cup, it is said, bears the inscription, "Made Emilion. Let the buyer remember."

A vote was recently taken on the wet and dry question among the inmates of the prisons in the United States. More than 133,000 voted dry and only 909 voted wet, which shows that even the lawbreaker is capable of right thinking and dreads the results of drink.
