ROCK HILL, SOUTH CAROLINA - Jeff Bellantoni, former vice president for academic affairs at Ringling College of Art and Design, was announced today as the new dean for Winthrop University's College of Visual and Performing Arts.

Bellantoni was chosen from a broad applicant pool that the search committee narrowed to three finalists. Each finalist interviewed on campus with faculty, staff, students, and administrators from across the university and met with Rock Hill community arts leaders.

Debra Boyd, provost and executive vice president for academic affairs, praised the work of the search committee. "I want to express my appreciation to the search committee members for the excellent work they did in bringing three well-qualified candidates to our campus," Boyd said.

She noted that Bellantoni's strategic leadership and administrative experience, his focus on creating supportive environments for students and faculty, and his successful entrepreneurial endeavors made him the right candidate for the deanship. "He impressed the campus and community members with his passion for and dedication to the arts as critical to the human experience, and I am certain that he will apply that passion, dedication, and skill to the arts at Winthrop," she said.

With a career spanning more than 25 years as an arts educator, designer, and author, Bellantoni most recently served as vice president for academic affairs at Ringling College of Art and Design in Sarasota, Florida. As the chief academic officer of the college, he held responsibility for all the academic affairs of the institution including academic departments and programs, as well as collaborative enterprises, communications and marketing, and continuing studies and lifelong learning. He led several key initiatives, including developing degree programs in creative writing and visual studies, helping secure a $3 million donation for a new Visual Arts Center, overseeing successful accreditation visits and creating a student innovation fund.

Bellantoni said it is an honor to be the next dean of the College of Visual and Performing Arts. "I look forward to working closely with its accomplished and dedicated faculty, shaping the next generation of creative leaders and promoting the arts as critical to our cultural and economic prosperity," he said. "Winthrop's reputation for providing an educational experience that blends liberal arts, professional programs, and civic engagement attracted me to this opportunity. I look forward to collaborating both across the university and regionally to establish new and exciting cross-disciplinary initiatives."
