If you must pity somebody,
don't pity yourself.

Some folks have more self respect than they are entitled to.

The things we don't know are the things that worry us the most.

People who hit the pace are the first to complain when it hits them.

If the weather is a bit unusual, you may recall that it is usually that way.

Books may be like friends, but as has been said, they never borrow any money.

Our foreign relations have bothered us as much as our forty-second cousins.

The business man who has an eye for business always has both eyes wide open.

Folks who use force are to be commended, only when they produce a smile.

The one who expects perfection in others is generally the most imperfect specimen.

Henry Ford says the motor car has mixed people up—and also policed them down.

This is the season to get your self all washed up before the long winter months set in.

They are still called hotel "accommodations" though the price may be ten dollars a day.

Most of us want the other fellow investigated because we believe him less honest than ourselves.

Many a man decides he is right and then weakens his faith by arguing the question with himself.

In many Italian villages bread is taken to the village bakery to be baked, for few homes have fires in them.

Talking without thinking does a tremendous amount of harm in this world. How much finer it would be if everybody took time to think before saying anything.

Very few people are judged by what we actually know of them, for a rule we know little of any one except our most intimate friends—only what we see on the surface.

But the natural thing to do is to judge others by what we hear of them, and we hear that which people have to say, regardless of whether they stopped first to weigh their words.

Unkind words are like weeds.
You may curb them temporarily, but they spring up again, because the seed has been sown and has taken root.

A misstatement may be corrected, but the suspicion it remains with many people. They conclude that "where there is smoke, there is always fire."

So the wisest course is to be cautious in discussing other people and their affairs. A little thinking before any talking is done, will save many headaches and make the world a happier place.

Peoples Bank Grows.
The News would call attention to the advertisement in this issue of the Peoples National Bank of Chester, which, on October 16th, was twenty years of age.

It will be noted that this bank has grown from a very small financial affair to a bank with more than three-fourths of a million dollars' assets in the course of twenty years.

All of the officers of this financial establishment are well-known to the people of Chester county and the President, Dr. G.
B. White; the Cashier, Mr. W. A.
Corkill, and the assistant Cashier, Mr. M. H. White, have all been connected with the bank since its establishment, and through their guidance must be credited the wonderful growth of the bank.

The News would also call attention to the statement in the advertisement showing the various amounts paid out. That the bank has meant much to the community can be readily seen when it is noted that the taxes paid by the bank amounts to more than one-third as much as the dividends received by the stockholders. The News would not at this time attempt to enter into a discussion as to the share of taxes paid by banks but we would say that when the taxes paid by any institution amounts to more than one-third of the dividends it appears rather exorbitant.

Your careful perusal of the advertisement is suggested.

Miss Klutz To Assist.

W. T. Buice Sells Home.
Mr. W. T. Buice, a former resident of Chester who has been making his home in Orlando, Florida, for several years has sold his home in that city for $75,000.
The following article is from a recent issue of the Orlando Morning Sentinel:

Orlando residential property is in strong demand, as evidenced by the sale of the W. T. Buice home, located on the corner of East Central Avenue and Occochee Street for the consideration of $75,000.

Mr. Buice, who is manager of the Jewell-Drew Company, state director yesterday that he sold his property to Ernest Tietke, of Ohio, handled by V. W. Estes, who purchased the property for an investment.

The property is considered a very valuable residential site, having a frontage of 288 feet on East Central Avenue and extending on Occochee Street for a depth of 188 feet. Mr. Buice not only sold his home and lot, but also the vacant lot adjoining.

He stated yesterday that he intends to build a modern residence of Spanish design on Cherokee Drive. The lot faces Lake Lake Cherokee and adjoins the property of Emil Metzinger and Walter C. Eastington.

Branch Hickey, vice-president of the St. Louis team in the National League, has never seen a Sunday ball league. All his reports stipulate that he need not report at the ball park on Sunday.

THE SOUL OF THE SCHOOL.

By Wickes Wamboldt

There is a much difference in the character of individual schools as there is in the character of individual people.

There are a number of colleges and preparatory schools in this country which have glittering reputations, but which are so wanting in the right sort of moral atmosphere that it would be far better to let a boy get along with what education he could obtain at home than to put him under the influence of such an institution.

One school will be high-minded, clean-spirited and will have definite ideals. Another school will be worldly-minded, lax in its principles and uncertain in its ideals.

The students attending the latter will come out of it better than when they went in.

There are pictures of two widely known schools—both stand high in national circles. The catalogues of both say about the same things of the moral training of the student. Outwardly one school is good at the other, but inwardly there is a marked difference.

The climax of the play is the Auditorium Friday night, October 23, at eight o'clock. This is the first of the fall and winter seasons of the Lyceum Course. Buy your ticket from one of the high school boys and girls this week.

Somewhat in uniform takes his card, and just when it seems that the uniformed attendant has abandoned his mission a second assistant secretary arrives with a summons into an adjoining room.

THE CLIMAX

The climax of the play is the Auditorium Friday night, October 23, at eight o'clock. This is the first of the fall and winter seasons of the Lyceum Course. Buy your ticket from one of the high school boys and girls this week.

The story of the play—often used on the same day in several Chautauques has eliminated the Sunday program, this year, while others announce a New Sunday schedule for 1924. Cause: increased Sunday sentiment in the Pietro companies, the girl singer.

Why Sixty Merchants Say "Good Lighting Pays"

Sixty merchants, who had installed good lighting, were asked this question—"What has better lighting done for you?" Their answers, reduced to simplest form, are given here:

1. Better lighting adds attractiveness and value to even the best of merchandise.
2. Better lighting shows the true value of merchandise, thus reducing the returned goods problem.
3. Better lighting creates an atmosphere of cheerfulness, which affects customers and clerks alike.
4. Better lighting instantly creates an impression of cleanliness, neatness and up-to-dateness upon even the least discriminating shoppers.
5. Better lighting overcomes competition by attracting trade from the poorly lighted stores.
6. Better lighting brings out the true color and texture of materials, thus eliminating errors in matching goods.
7. Better lighting pays for itself many times over through the increased sales and quicker sales produced by it, for well-lighted merchandise is always half sold.
8. Better lighting doubles the attraction and sales power of display windows.

No merchant whose store is not already adequately and properly lighted can afford to overlook the special offer which we are making for a limited time to our commercial customers. THE FLORIDA BUBBLE

Not a sentence or word would the Journal print derogatory of Florida as a state. It is a state of the forty-eight. Florida is a winter home for the delirious of other states that are able to afford them. Many have availed themselves of that fact, and they help to make of the state what it is.

There is not been in Florida that which will make of it an industrial state of note. Nor are the products of the soil there, regarding either quantity or quality, a producer of fruits common to tropical or semi-tropical. Its agricultural production is decidedly inferior to that of any other state engaged in it. Its products are well: their product is the equal of the best. In its field vegetables grow and ripen for the market long before the coming of such from the gardens and the farms farther north.

But in spite of the real advantage so abundantly found in Florida there is a fact hard to realize that the boom in real estate which has been witnessed down there in the past few months has not served to attract capital in large amounts, for permanent investment. It is in the nature of lottery tickets, in the sale of which prizes are offered, more of the purchasers getting blanks than those who draw prizes.

Buoyed with hope of quick and substantial gains, money may have been squandered, the owners of which were not in circumstances that they could well afford to waste. The Hot Springs (Ark.) people have been making some suggestions that are well worth reading in good remembering. Following the lines of the advertising given Florida through the newspapers, that paper says:

"Stories of fortunes being made here are not true. With human beings, stories lose nothing in the telling, but it is a rare occurrence to even hear a whisper of the money that has been and will be lost in Florida through land speculation by the uninitiated investor."

The Hot Springs paper adds: "The old saying that nothing succeeds by overdoing is exemplified in Florida's present unprejudiced boom; but real estate, like water, must find its level."

The school believes that fitting students to hold their own in the world's battle of wills is necessary, but it puts noble, many principles ahead of everything. The student gets a solid training in the decencies of life and in the things that make people better than themselves.

There is a pretty chance on the campus, and the school would go out of business before it would get into the habit of doing anything. Every 60 minutes, the chimes ring out from a classic tower. "Look through this hour be Thou my guide, that in Thy power I may abide."

There are numbered among the alumni what school some of the most successful men in the Nation. And yet at the alumni reunions the talk is not so much of the financial achievements of their fellows as of the character achievements of their fellows. The alumni of this school are jealous of the behavior of every one who is a student. It is their pride that no man of that school has ever been brought into disrepute by any of the different subjects that the students are going to cover, but it is more important to find out from some unprejudiced source just what sort of influence the institution is going to exert on the boy or girl you send there.

Except for the first seven years of his life there is no time in the career of the human being when he receives such lasting impressions as while he is away at school.

European Bankers Inaccessible

European bankers are far less accessible than those of America. They are hemmed in by more of fancy boys and secretaries than we are. They are dreamed of by the highest officers of any important corporation in the United States. Even American financiers of recognized prominence standing have trouble seeing bankers in England and in France, Germany, Italy and the other Continental countries. It is not discourtesy, it is curiosity. They want to see the officer if they can. Even then they must be patient with the routine before the interview.

To find the European banker is the first problem. In the main banking room, or in the downstairs floor of a two-story building, the clerks are reluctant about revealing the whereabouts of their superior.

When at last they are convinced that the American really has an appointment with an officer, they stairs to a dignified and impressively quiet suite where he holds his court with a new army of attendants.
