TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 16.

On January first there will be a decided change in the management of the local county government. Three men were selected by the people in the August primary to attend to the affairs of the county and the News believes that the three men selected are competent to fill the places to which they have been elected. They are doubtless at this time looking around for a competent man for the office of county supervisor of roads and the News is frank to say that the matter of selecting this man is going to be the most important act of the new directors, will have to do. If they fail to select a competent man they are going to have trouble and the whole system is going to prove a rank failure. A competent man on this job will mean a saving of money to the county. The News trusts that the directors will be fortunate in securing a good man.

The News does not know what the city officials expect to do about the "H" street in the very of repair, but it is hoped that they will see their way clear to put this street in first-class condition.

At a recent meeting of the city council some of the able members of that body were in favor of making an appropriation of some several thousand dollars toward improvement of the school building street. After lengthy discussion the matter of spending money on the school building the gratification of The News. We do not offer criticism of those who favor spending some ten or more thousand dollars in improving the street, but The News does not see the need for such a heavy expenditure. It has been shown that the street can be put in good shape by "patching," it is so to speak, at a cost of less than fifteen hundred dollars. This is the plan approved by The News and the one which we hope to see go through.

Now, to those who wish to state that The News has set itself up as a Solomon in the matter of street paving, we wish to say here that we do not give a rip what you say. We do not see any cause for spending ten thousand dollars when fifteen hundred will do the work, and we do not propose to support something we do not believe should be done.

The matter of improving this street should receive attention before the street paving contractors leave Chester. If they will do the work at a reasonable figure, give them the job. If they won't, well let us come on and get some one else to do it.

Come on city fathers, get together on Wylie street and let's put it in shape.

A review of the advertising columns of newspapers from various sections of both North and South Carolina, shows that Chester merchants are offering their merchandise at as cheap as the cheapest. The Chester cotton market this year is the best in this section, which goes to prove that Chester is one of the best towns in the State. Sell your cotton in Chester and trade with Chester merchants. The advertising columns of The News will tell you where the bargains are being offered.

Some folks argue that the price of labor is not coming coming down. The City of Anderson has recently cut in labor's wages 75 cents a day. Don't that look like coming down?

The people had made up their minds for a change and they brought it about.

Conditions throughout the entire world have been changing fast for the past three or four months. Four months ago the people cared little for the value of a dollar. Today a man looks at a dollar twice before he turns it loose.

In the North and West the laboring man, who has been receiving high wages, is not only having his wages reduced but thousands are being thrown out of employment. In the South as yet, the laborer has not felt the pinch of unemployment and reduced wages, but the time is fast approaching.

For the past three or four years the laborer has had his wage. He demanded high wages and he got them. Jobs were plentiful and he did as he pleased. For a full day's pay he did less than a half day's work, but when the employer is going to demand a full day's pay for a full day's work, the slogan will be: "Speed up or get out." Take reduced wages or face layoffs and shutdowns.

We do not look for pre-war wages in the near future but wages are going to be reduced. In keeping with other things and a real day's work must be done if you are to stay on the job. The slightest inefficient and unloyal employe is headed for the scrap heap. Speed up or get out.

'GYPSY' SMITH IN GASTONIA.

The following is a paragraph from an editorial appearing in The Gastonia Daily Gazette, with reference to the revival meeting being held in Gastonia by Mr. Smith.

'Gypsy' Smith, Jr., has ripped the people of Gastonia mightily. At the revival Sunday afternoon at the First Presbyterian church to a magnificent audience of men that filled and crowded every square foot of space in that building, not who came from all over this and adjacent counties, we could not but note the contrast between that crowd and those that thronged to hear the frenzied political speeches of a few weeks ago. So Daniel, O'Jays and Cag Marrows had their crowd, but none of them measured up to the body of men; either in quantity or quality, that heard the evangelist Sully's address.

was in police court this morning on a $500 bond. Representative Garrett said after his appearance in court that the accident "was unprovoked and that the question of bond did not come to me until I was in the right and the 'bears' who arranged bond had gone home." "It then," he said, "was impossible to obtain bond."

When the case was called it was continued until November 22. Pending the outcome of the inquiry to Mrs. Kibrick, Garrett was released.

A newspaper man is supposed to keep up with things moving in this old world and every once and awhile some fellow comes along and asks the reporter for advice, which is something we find easy to give. Yesterday a Chester county farmer ran into the News reporter on the street and wanted to know about the outlook for a better price for cotton. He was told that no advice would be given. But, said the reporter, "if I was farming and owed any money I would sell enough cotton to pay my debts and then give my thoughts to holding what I had left. Cotton may go up and it may go cheaper, no one can tell, but if there is anything to put the price of cotton up during the next few weeks I fall to see it," said the reporter. The farmer stated that he felt the same way about it. "I have a few bales of cotton in the warehouse and I am going right now to see about selling that stuff," said Mr. Farmer, and away he went.

THE APOSTLE PAUL

Was a Self-Made Man and Had No "Pull."

Paul was a self-made man, writer, Rev. Thomas B. Greory. Like nearly all of the great ones, whose initiative has created civilization, Paul was from the ground floor up, the architect of his own fortune. There was nobody to say "Up-a-diddy," to him, nobody who "pull" he could look for a start.

Like most of the illustrious ones of the earth again, Paul was poor and was obliged from the start to ask himself the question, "How am I to make my daily bread?" and like our old friend Umar, Paul chose as the means of his livelihood the business of tent-making.

Tents were in great and steady demand in those days, and the good tent-maker was pretty sure of a living.

When not working at his trade Paul studied theology, to which line of thought he appears to have been unusually devoted; nor did it take him long to demonstrate in his conversations that within him was the making of one of the greatest theological doctors of all time.

Paul's brain will tell, and Paul had brains of the first order. In a very brief period, the tent-maker forged the front, becoming one of the most zealous defenders of the faith of Israel.

It was a time of mingled wisdom and fanaticism, of deep pedagogic love and bitter prejudice, and Paul was not slow in making it very uncomfortable for the Christians--the new sect that was beginning to claim so large a share of the world's attention.

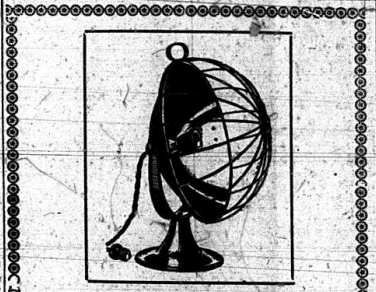

But we can never tell what a day may bring forth, especially in the field of religious polemics, and all at once, to the joy of the new faith and the devastating dismay of his old friends and co-workers, Paul turned Christian.

Into the cause of the new creed the tent-maker threw all of the fire and energy that had characterized him while a devotee of the old, and it is now well known to all students of that distant time that Paul was by all odds the greatest asset of the Christianity of the first and second centuries.

But the irony of history is something fearful to contemplate! Paul became the instrument of complete destruction of the faith that converted him. Jesus never for a moment thought of starting a new religion. The sole desire was to bring the religion of his fathers back to the complexity and trust of the prophets, but when Paul entered the arena he changed the "what" program. He substituted a theological system for the simple gospel of Jesus, with faith in God and love for each other as its sole requirements.

Furthermore, Paul introduced into the religion of Jesus which rested on love and good will, the terrible principle of persecution--a principle which Jesus never recognized--a principle which He turned from with all the strength of His gentle and rational soul.

No one doubts Paul's sincerity. He meant well. No soul of man since man have lived ever showed a grander spirit of self-sacrifice than was exhibited in the case of the "Apostle to the Gentiles," but originally Paul was a theologian, and never for a moment did the goal which ever have
