SLEEPING PREACHER DIES

Batesburg Negro Carries Mystery of Life to the Grave

he was preaching but none was awake when he died. He was awakened after his sermon was over. In his sermon Major told the hearers that he had died and preached, but in everyday life he would not say this. One of the strange facts about his preaching was in the words of a good friend, in fact, his English was well high perfect, whereas when awake he used the common cotton field negro.

Major Perry was the father of 17 children, 13 of whom survive him. All these children are hard working, honest people and most of them own their homes. When Sherman's army passed through the county and he was taken to the northward they forced Major to go with them. He escaped after several months and returned to his home near Elythe, Wood. And about 40 years ago he moved his family to the lower end of Saluda county on his 150-acre farm.

Major Perry was a member of the Methodist church, but was never known to make any public talks or take a very active part in the church. He was always polite to every one, especially to his "white folks." He knew absolutely nothing about the negro religion, and his friends are still hoping that he may yet be pardoned.

YORK NEWS CONGRESSMEN WORRIED OVER LOSSES FROM COTTON CROP

Items From The Yorkville Enquirer of More or Less Interest to Chester County People

A Bullocks Creek negro is said to be taking about 100 rabbits per week from Bullocks Creek township to the Georgia market, selling them at around 30 cents apiece. He catches some of the rabbits himself and buys others from hunters at 15 cents each and is doing a thriving business. There are many Bullocks Creek farmers who believe the rabbit is a most destructive pest and would be glad to see them cleaned up.

Mr. J. M. Stephenson, popular citizen of Union county North Carolina, died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. H. B. Polk in Charlotte, N. C., Friday night November 20th, 1925, at 10:30 o'clock. Mr. Stephenson had not been in good health for most two years on account of high blood pressure and bright's disease, his heart became impaired and hemorrhage followed, which was more than his weakened condition could stand. He sought help from different physicians but was never able to regain his health. He was called upon to endure affliction. He displayed wonderful patience in his suffering. This patience continued until the end as was testified by the loved ones when he died. His last testimony was that he did not fear death. He was only waiting for the heavenly call to come home to live in his heavenly Father's house in the manner that Jesus had prepared for him.

There were many beautiful floral offerings.

Mr. Stephenson was a good citizen, quiet, unassuming by nature, and a true neighbor. He and his devoted wife were members of the Presbyterian church near their home. He donated the lot on which the Presbyterian church near his home was built. They loved the church, and were held in loving esteem by all its membership. Mr. Stephenson for five years was a machinist. He resigned and then went out on S. A. L. R. as an engineer for several years. His last earthly work was farming in Union county, N. C. His children, grand children and great-grandchildren have suffered a great loss and the public a true and noble citizen. To the sorrowing ones we extend our deepest sympathy.

WHAT OTHER PAPERS SAY

SOUTH CAROLINA SCHOOLS
 A peculiar situation exists in South Carolina. A large appropriation is at hand for the schools, a larger number of teachers has been employed and the attendance of pupils has dropped off. The enrollment of children in the public schools is less by 100,000 than in 1925. This is a condition which, as stated in The Greenville News, is a situation which is being met in the Greenville schools. In 1920 the General Assembly adopted a compulsory attendance law. The year this law went into effect the enrollment of pupils increased 55,697 or 22.9 per cent, and of colored pupils 58,839 or 28.6 per cent. The percentage of average attendance increased from 64 in 1919 to 69 in 1920. The enrollment was the highest in the history of the State schools. In 1921 the General Assembly back-tracked of its compulsory attendance law. It actually nullified it, abolishing, among other things, the attendance officer feature. The attendance officer provision has been deleted. The enrollment has decreased by about 150,000, and attendance records have steadily declined, from 70.2 per cent in 1920 to 67.07 per cent in 1922-23, and to 63.49 in 1923-24. Never was the attendance story of cause and effect.

CRITICISMS AND CREATORS

No special talent is needed to criticize. It is the simplest thing on earth to be critical and tear apart that which someone has created.

But a creator is something a part of a critic is to create something to the world; to add to the stock of knowledge.

You may have a fixed rule for creating. You don't have to invent a new machine to create. You might create pleasure for someone by a machine for your better conditions in your community, a better home for your family, a more pleasant atmosphere for those who are poorer. Those who create are benefactors. Communities are made by those who never lose an opportunity to do a good deed and when no opportunity presents itself, they make one.

The critic is the adverse of him. He sees no good in anything, particularly if it comes from one of a not known anything of the merits of the case, but that does not matter. It is his nature to be critical and he is not happy unless he is criticizing something or somebody.

An habitual critic is a detriment to the community. He and his kind are a dead weight to carry.

SOY BEAN HUMAN FOOD

Whenever it is so arranged that farmers and planters can purchase soy beans of the best quality, they are going to get the most out of them. Soy beans are a most important food crop in the world. The dispatch reads: Experts of the Rockefeller Foundation in China who have been conducting systematic investigations on the subject have discovered that the soy bean, though it has been regarded entirely as an animal food and forage crop, is a perfect vegetable food for human consumption. In the experiments in this country it has been ascertained that soy bean milk can be produced, with the addition of a small amount of sodium chloride, answering all the purposes of cow's milk and at one-tenth of the cost of the latter. It is asserted, moreover, that this milk will furnish a clean source of supply, free from all danger of transmission of tuberculosis or other diseases which may be a menace to unsatisfactory cow's milk supply.

The investigations referred to are said to have demonstrated that the soy bean provides all the food constituents of milk, butter and beef and that it produces a bean milk containing the next few years. The soil and climate of the South are particularly well adapted to the raising of this bean.—Spartanburg Journal.
