Senate Passes Open House Bill

by Sheila Nolan

The Senate met Wednesday, October 15 at 6 p.m., in Thelma Auditorium and passed both the Activities Fees Committee allocations and a bill to add another hour to the present open house policies offered in the Student Handbook.

An amendment by Senator Patricia Shala to make the new open house policy "Plan 3" in the Handbook was passed unanimously.

Rules and Regulations committee will meet Tuesday, October 14 at 6:30 p.m., in Thomson Recreation Room to write the bill.

Mike Moody, member of the Activities Fees Committee, was at Senate to speak for the committee.

Seniors Victorious At Classes Night

by Sheila Nolan

The senior class won the silver cup at Classes Night and the sophomore class placed second in the traditional event held Thursday, October 9 in Byrnes Auditorium.

Each class prepared songs, costumes, an entrance, a skit and music with the theme "The Spirit of . . .". The selection changed as each class entered the auditorium. The freshmen, dressed as green olives, entered to the tune of a Greek dance. The sophomore class entered to "The Overture from TOSCA", the juniors were dressed in red and gold. They used dry ice at each entrance door for an added effect. Entering to the theme from JAWS and the effects of a strobe light were the seniors, who wore orange costumes.

The freshman skit centered around the theme of "Spirit of Common Sense". Their background was a drawing of a penny, and their skit featured students talking trees. Some "trees" felt one should spend money while the others felt one shouldn't. The conclusion found the class agreeing that best characteristic one could have in life would be common sense.

The sophomore skit centered around the idea that man should respect and take care of his environment rather than concentrating on money, prestige, and power.

"The Spirit of the Cephalus" was the center of the junior's skit. They expressed the idea that the world too often makes one into a likeness of everything else. The junior felt that it was important to be different and to express one's own ideas no matter how unique they were. The skit used a fire extinguisher and a moving conveyor belt among its effects.

The seniors centered their skit around the theme "The Spirit of Scamming." The main character, Apollis, believed that there was a spirit in a tribute, represented by a diamond-shaped figure, that the people should worship. The people felt that by working together, they would all win. When the people realized this, the spirit came out of the tribute and told the group that they had found truth within themselves so they no longer needed the tribute. Strobe lights were used to produce special effects in the skit.

"We felt we needed this recommendation since premenstrual changes do occur, and we consider that students may have planned their schedules to meet their needs," said Senator Patricia Shala, chairman of the Academic Affairs Committee.

Holland Discusses Current Political Scene

by Barbara Barkley

Congressman Kenneth L. Holland spoke to the Political Science Club Tuesday evening in Thelma Auditorium. Holland talked about the political atmosphere prevailing in today's society. Negativism discourages totally qualified and dedicated people who are willing to serve the people from entering politics, Holland said.

The attraction to seek office is practically non-existent, because there is no leadership and the salaries are minimal, Holland added.

One problem of a Congressman is the charge to him to represent the attitudes and views of his constituents, and his own. Does a Congressman do what he feels is right for his district or the nation? In this sense "voting is either political or personal suicide," Holland said.

The re-election of a Congressman every two years makes the representative more responsible to his public, the congressman said.

The public sees a representative as something other than a human—a super-human and this exerts extraordinary pressure on the congressman to be nothing other than perfect.

More education about rape is needed to change the present attitudes toward both victims and perpetrator. The main educational thrust will come from women's groups, because Congress can not legislate a change in attitudes.

The main failure of Congress is the lack of communication between the leadership and the members, Holland said.
Dear Editor:

In response to a letter in THE JOHNSONIAN, a couple of weeks ago about the cafeteria, I would like to say that I totally disagree with it. I am, like everyone else, guilty of complaining about the food. I think everyone tends to do this because when we go to the cafeteria we have a time when we can let our frustrations out and we usually end up taking it out on the food. We've gotten so in the habit of the cafeteria that we don't realize that it isn't the best way to spend our time. I think that it's important to spend our time doing something else, like playing sports or participating in extracurricular activities. It's not fair, and it's not just, to complain about the food and not do anything about it. I think that one should try to find a way to make the best of the situation, even if it's not perfect. For example, I think that it would be great if the cafeteria had a variety of healthy options available, like salads and fresh fruits and vegetables. I also think that it would be great if the cafeteria had more vegetarian options available. It's not fair to only have meat options available, especially when there are so many people who are vegetarian or who have other dietary restrictions. I think that it's important to try to make the best of the situation, even if it's not perfect.
Getting Feminism Together

by Laura McGuire

"What is it like getting feminism together in the South?" I questioned the voice on the other end of the telephone line. Though somewhat muffled by the roughy three thousand miles of America which separated us, the voice had a smooth, almost hard directness about it, very unlike these drags I've become accustomed to hearing in Rock Hill. It was the voice of a Californian woman. After a few seconds of groping to find an answer to her somewhat loaded question, I commented, "There is some awareness here, but there's a need for more organized efforts." (I nominate myself for the undertaking of this year's work.)

I've been aware of this need for some time now. I have taken action on the situation and have seen that I have been keeping somewhat under my hat for a few weeks. Though there are loose ends yet remaining to be tied up, I'll throw caution to the winds. Though there are loose ends yet remaining to be tied up, I'm going to convene a NOW chapter in Rock Hill. The first meeting will be held in early November, hopefully on campus. During the mid-semester break, I plan to confer with the two speakers for the first meeting and set a definite date. The speakers will be Nancy Shekhey, the state NOW Coordinator, and Pat Calfair, a member of the NOW National Board. I desperately need some assistance in the form of a steering committee to help me get the first few meetings off the ground. Any interested people in the Winthrop-Rock Hill area are encouraged to get in touch with me at 323-2272. I have a Convenor Kit from National NOW which includes much organizational material and I would be glad to "educate" a small group of people to help form the chapter. I have spoken with the Southern Regional Coordinator, Jackie Frost, who lives in Charlotte. She is willing to encourage some Charlotte NOW members to attend our first meeting, so that we can become acquainted and perhaps do some things together in the future. I think this is a positive possibility, I encourage any and all people to join NOW—regardless of sex, race, age, religion, marital status, sexual preference, whatever.

More good news, I have received a registration scholarship to attend the National NOW Conference in Philadelphia on October 24 through 26. I am really looking forward to the conference, the theme of which will be "It's Our Revolution NOW." A number of workshops on different aspects of women's issues and the feminist movement will be held during the days, and the evenings will feature entertainment by women artists, such as poets, musicians, a comedy duo, and an actress, who have contributed to the development of a feminist culture. Elections for new officers will be held.

Also, during the same weekend, a day of women's studies workshops will be held at Central Piedmont Community College in Charlotte on October 25. For more information on this event contact Jan Milnaga in the Information Services Office. I hope some Winthrop people will get involved in this; it looks promising.

Even more news. October 29 has been declared National Women's Strike Day or Alice Doesn't. Conceived of and coordinated by some NOW members in California this is a day which Alice (Everybody) will use to alert the public to the worth in society by refusing to do housework, and so on. Since this Alice rarely ever does most of these things anyway, I decided that rather than having a strike at Winthrop we should convert Alice Doesn't into a Women's Awareness Day. I am now planning and putting together an information exhibit project for women's issues to be in Dinkins on October 29. Some members of WCCM have offered to fund this endeavor through the Campus Ministry. I'll have more on Alice Doesn't next week. Watch for it. Again, I need help on this, as we say in your end, you might have for a Women's Awareness Day. Please contact me if you're interested. I may need just an hour of your time, if you can spare. Help me get feminism together in the South.

English Profs Co-Author Text

By Ron Lane.

"This is the first book and first collaboration on a book for both of us," said Dr. Earl Wilcox, chairman of the English Dept., in reference to the FUNDAMENTALS OF FICTION text co-authored with fellow faculty member, Dr. David Rankin.

The book is now being used on a trial basis in English 102 courses at Winthrop. The text illustrates the elements of fiction found in short stories studied in literature courses. The book came out in late August. It has been reviewed by persons in the English field all over the U, S, and Wilcox said the text has received positive reaction from reviewers.

Rankin said he and Rankin started work on the book about three years ago. The two professors came to Winthrop six years ago and as Rankin put it, "And just fell together." At one time they shared the same office and held the mutual opinion that the textbooks they were using and those being marketed at the time were falling short of their desired effect.

"We actually just got together the material that seemed to work well," Rankin said. The Wilcox/Rankin text is, as Wilcox described it, "an integrated text." He said it was a synthesis of all the elements found in English literature. "It shows the student how the items relate to one another."

Rankin added, "We picked stories that we can go into and find the basic elements of fiction being used." He said the book builds from working with the short story to working with the short novel.

The book steers clear of the anthology approach so often found in other texts. FUNDAMENTALS takes a different approach in the study of the short story. "Ours has only five works of fiction," Wilcox said. He said it starts with elementary items or elements found in the short story and builds on those elements. "So often the texts contain only the short story and nothing else," he said.

"We made it less of an anthology and more of a teaching text," Rankin said. They started out using pairs of stories they felt would increase student feedback and the end result was a pair of stories reflecting similar ideas and one longer work. "We each chose one of the pairs and got together on the selection of the last story," Rankin said.

The text includes stories by D. H. Lawrence, John Steinbeck, Dylan Thomas, Graham Greene, and Stephen Crane. Wilcox pointed out that many students are not aware Dylan Thomas wrote prose. Rankin said they had considered using, "The Loneliness of the Long Distance Runner" but permission costs for publication were too high.

Both Rankin and Wilcox pointed out that their book actually encourages the use of other short stories. "It gives the teacher the option of choosing some of their own preferences as to short stories," Rankin said.

Wilcox cited the versatile nature of the text in his explanation of the book's appendix.

"We left 50 short stories not included in the book and we've worked up questions to be used in the discussion of these stories," he said. It described it as a companion text, to be used as an introduction in the study of the collections of short stories. Wilcox and Rankin both said that the 50 short stories listed in the appendix are as often read or appearing in anthologies.

"It was not strictly a money-making venture," Rankin said. "We felt, well, we can do a better book." He said work on the text was easier then either of them had anticipated. "We toyed around with the idea of doing a similar book with poetry," he said.

Terry Anderson, a graduate assistant in the English Dept., is teaching one of the sections using the Wilcox/Rankin book.

"Basically, I think they've focused on a lot of very good points," he said. "They have left out the unnecessary things you find in so many other books." He said it has very good sections on the critical points in fiction and a very good synopsis of the other short stories found listed in the appendix. He said it is one of four books used in the course and is referred to often in the study of the other books. "My students find it easy to understand," Anderson summed up with the remark, "It's just what the title says it is: FUNDAMENTAL."

Winthrop's Very First Teacher

by Cheryl Carnes

Professors are abundant at Winthrop—scarch the halls of Kinard, browse through Dacus or even duck in at Across the Street. Found one, didn’t you? It almost seems silly to imagine a time when there was only one teacher at Winthrop, but there was such a time.

The first teacher associated with the Winthrop Teacher Training College in Columbia was Miss Hall Leonard of Rochester, Mass. Miss Leonard, a native of Scotland, had been a teacher for over seven years at the Bridgewater Female Academy. Then Dr. D. B. Johnson, while visiting the financier of the college, Mr. Robert C. Winthrop, met Miss Leonard and asked her to help him begin his school for teachers.

Of their visits, Miss Leonard said: “After a second visit from him, a sudden impulse led me to make an oral agreement. Whenupon Mr. Johnson started for South Carolina and a few weeks later I followed him to what seemed to me to be at that time an unknown faraway country.”

However, this faraway country of S. C., soon became home for Miss Leonard, who helped Dr. Johnson make his teacher training school a success. Beginning with a class of nineteen girls, she watched each class expand through the years. Miss Leonard bore the title of principal, at the start, and had a salary of $800.00 dollars a year for her efforts.

Miss Leonard taught for two years after the institution moved to Rock Hill. While in Rock Hill, she worked her way up to Vice-President.

In September of 1894, she had to leave the campus and return home to Rochester due to family illness. In spite of this, she remained in touch with the Institution through the years.

On November 19, 1921, Miss Leonard died; but the “Eye of professors” had left behind her zeal for the education of women.

Next week, a look at student life in the early 1900’s.

Colbert Discusses The N.T.E.

by Connie Oetz

Dr. James Colbert, professor of Education and head of the National Teacher Examination program at Winthrop, recently explained the procedures involved in taking the N. T. E.

Colbert began by recommending that students take the test during their last semester in college. After the test, students must wait six weeks for the scores to come in.

Colbert stressed the importance of taking the test before a job offer comes along. "No certificate will be issued until the State Education Department has the N. T. E. score," he said. Students wishing to take the test on February 21, 1975 are asked to register by January 29, 1975; and those wishing to take the test on July 17, 1976 are asked to register by June 24, 1976. Colbert said that applications could be picked up at the Office of Guidance, Testing and Placement or in his office, 123 Winthers.

The fee for one examination, either the Common Examination or the Area Examination, is $11.00 and the late fee is $16.00. The fee for the Common Examination and one Area Examination is $22.00 and the late fee is $27.00.

"There seems currently to be uncertainty as to the wisdom in requiring that the N. T. E. be taken and also how the test score should be used," Colbert said. "The State Education Department in Columbia is engaged in extensive evaluation studies to determine how the test is to be used in the future."

Those Ridiculous Winthrop Rules, Even In 19??

In 1905, two Winthrop seniors were accused of erasing a girl’s name in a textbook and claiming it as their own. Owing to the fact that they were seniors, they were allowed to finish out the term; however, they were not allowed to return to Winthrop for their final semester. In 1910, two seniors were discovered smoking on campus. Although it was only two months till graduation, the girls were expelled from school.

And to top all things, in 1933 a town student was expelled for cutting classes to attend the Camden Horser races, although she had her parents’ permission. The administration reminded her that parents were not officials of the school and could not permit her to cut class.

Well, Winthrop, it seems that you’ve come along way (or have you considering it’s 1975?)

by marsha macev

It's quite an unsettling story. A good-natured, mild-mannered teacher and His cloistered band of followers entertain us with parables and joyful songs. Then suddenly, one of His number betrays Him for no apparent reason and the hero is executed in the prime of His life. A comedy? A musical comedy? Well, it does end on a hopeful note. The original story comes, as everybody probably knows, from the book of Matthew.

This telling, called GODSPELL, is written and produced by students at Carnegie-Mellon University and it eventually found its way to Off-Broadway. It has been filmed and is quite popular with college theatre groups since it is simply produced and all's encouragement is a better word improvement.

In fact, I called Chris Reynolds, the director of Winthrop's production of GODSPELL, before beginning this review to ask how much was added to the work by the company. He assured me it was performed as written, but the personal qualities of the characters so fitted those of the actors, I found this hard to believe. That's the whole idea, according to Chris, to infuse the personalities of the character and text.

I believe GODSPELL is the best Winthrop Theatre production I've ever seen. TWELFTH NIGHT has moved into second place. It featured Theatre regulars Steve White, Phyllis Paden, Jim Baze, Donna (Woolridge) Dove, and Dee Malone. Also appearing were Letitia Davis, Chris Flynn, Bill Boatwright, Jo Nesbitt, and Gayle Goodin. The audience, which was the best I've ever seen at a W, C. Theatre play, was more than receptive. In fact, it was the first time anyone remembers stamping of feet and a standing ovation (Friday night).

Dr. Reynolds said the company has been asked to do the play again, as people were turned away. No certain plans have been made, but when I hear anything definite, I'll let you know. It's well worth seeing--or seeing again. The play ran smoothly, the actors played smoothly off one another, the audience was responsive. There were beautiful performances, by all and especially by Steve White as Jesus, and Phyllis Paden as Judas. It was interesting to see a female Judas. And as always, that madman Jim Baze had 'em rolling. Now there are so many ways to say it was good and I'm running out of ways. It was, though.

Coach Canada said overall it was Winthrop's best performance this season, "It was our best offensive performance of the season and our passing and team play was much better than in previous matches." Cascadia cited improved defense by Frankie Griffin and an outstanding defensive effort by Denny Stutzman, Winthrop's leading scorer in Winthrop's performance.

Organizations

Dr. C. F. Staff, president of Winthrop College, national honor society, announced that the organization's first meeting was changed from October 13 to Thursday, October 22 at 7:30 a.m. in 209 Thurmond.

Officers will be elected for the coming year.

Five new members were "tagged" by Senior Order, the highest non-academic honorary organization on campus. Thursday, October 9, in Byrnes Auditorium, said Kathy All, Senior Order chairman.

Inducted were Mary Rebecca Braxton, Frances Wilson, Mary Jo, Alice Landry, Elizabeth Hawley, and Wanda Diana Smith.

Sports

A strong Rock Hill Soccer Club held on late in the game to defeat Winthrop College, 2-0, Wednesday, October 13 at Municipal Stadium in Rock Hill, said Dr. James Call, coach of the Winthrop squad.

Richard Stutts scored the first RSHC goal, and a goal by Dan Vaught soon afterwards gave the Rock Hill squad a 2-0 lead.

Near the end of the first half, Winthrop's Richard Chock among converted a perfect cross from Illinois Roush to bring the score to 2-1. Stutts scored again for RSHC with ten seconds left in the half when the Winthrop defense suffered a foul.

Winthrop came back early in the second half. A penalty shot by Haywood brought the score to 2-2, then a 10-yard shot by Roush tied the score.

Rock Hill again took the lead on a goal by Carl Woschnick but a 55-yard goal by Roush evened the game at 3-2, then a 10-yard shot by Roush made the score 4-2.

Winthrop recorded 27 shots on goal for the contest while RSHC had 32 attempts.

An important aspect in compliance, Dr. Reynolds said, is "the capacity notion of the educational aspect of the policies and practices of an educational institution." That evaluation is already underway at Winthrop, although the government has not provided guidelines as to how it should be conducted.

Ms. Breckfield and Dr. Reynolds provided participants at the conference with need-to-know tools to use in beginning the self-evaluation. The participants were also urged to set up internal grievance procedures for students and employees. The Office of Civil Rights requires such procedures and will take them into consideration if a complaint is filed.

Therefore, according to Dr. Reynolds, each institution is required to have a Title IX coordinator to initiate the self-evaluation. The co-ordinator will also see that plans are made to eliminate discriminatory practices and will route complaints through the grievance mechanisms.

Dr. Reynolds feels she will be greatly aided in her capacity as an educational consultant for Winthrop College by the work she and Ms. Breckfield have done concerning the conference.

The Rock Hill Little Theatre will present the play, "Harvey," at the Rock Hill Little Theatre at 8:00 p.m. on October 25 at the Rock Hill Nature Museum.

Taller staff members will be taking reservations for yearbooks again during the week of October 20-24 in Thomson Cafeteria and Dinkins Student Center, Blair Ransing, Taller business manager, said.

Ms. Ramsing urged each student who did not reserve their Taller earlier to do so now. There will be a $2.00 reservation fee.

Dinkins Activities Committee will be sponsoring three "special" nights at Dinkins Student Center in honor of Halloween, according to Polly Todd, DAC chairman.

Horror movies will be shown Wednesday night (Oct. 20), Halloween Happening is scheduled for Thursday night (Oct. 21), and a dance will be held Friday night (Oct. 22). Each night's activities will begin around 8:00 p.m. on the main floor of Dinkins Student Center, Todd said.

Todd added that "Across the Street" will be open during those nights.

"In the interest of safety, it has become necessary for the Security department to begin enforcing the illegal parking violations by towing away vehicles," according to Bob Williams, chief of security.

"The Security department is requesting that each member of the Winthrop family park as instructed, and advise their guests to park correctly. We appreciate the cooperation of all faculty, staff, students and their guests."

The number of cars registered this year on campus are as follows: Day Students-1,414; Resident Students-780; Faculty/ Staff-1,009.

Departments

Members of the physical education department will attend the Southern Association for Physical Education of College Women Conference in Orlando, Florida on October 22-25, said Dr. Ford, department head.

Those who will attend are Mrs. Judith Rea, Mr. Joanne Lunt, Mrs. Ann Brown, Miss Minieberts Robb, and Dr. Mary Ford. Bob, Griffin, and Ford will attend a meeting of the executive board.

Griffin will serve as chairman of a session on athletics.

Dr. John A. Freeman, chairman of the Blinnexy Department, will be in Houston, Texas Oct. 19-21 for the 1975 Limits to Growth conference.

The meeting, the first of 5 biennial conventions, will bring an international group of industrialists, economists, and scientists together.

Lectures and discussions on man nearing natural limitations to expansion will be heard.

Dr. Freeman said he will attend sessions on food limitations, agricultural problems, educational responses to global crises, and community re-design possibilities.

Six members of Winthrop's Teacher Corps Program attended a "Changing Strategies Conference" in Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 8, 9, 10, according to Dr. B.G. Campbell, director of the Teacher Corps at Winthrop.

Dr. Jack B. Boger, Dr. Mary T. Littlejohn and Dr. B.G. Campbell represented Winthrop College at the conference.

Co-ordinator of the social work program, Mr. Martin Hope, and students in the department attended the annual meeting of South Carolina Welfare Forum at South Carolina State College last Wednesday, October 8, 1975.

Dr. Jack Weaver, associate professor of English, attended the British Symposium, held October 10-12 at Appalachian State University.

The Symposium covered British literature as well as History. Dr. Weaver has been invited by Sheldon Hatfi of Appalachian to monitor a program of studies on Irish literature for next year's symposium.

Dr. Gordon Ross, associate professor of English, will attend a symposium on Shakespeare's Romances to be held October 16-18 in Atlanta, Georgia.

Dr. Jack Weaver, associate professor of English, has written an article entitled "George Moore, A. E., and AVATARS" that has been accepted for publication by the ENGLISH LITERATURE AND TRANSITIONS Journal.

Dr. William Herring, associate professor of management in his first year at Winthrop, said the department of business administration will offer a student internship program in the spring semester.

Senior management majors who are considered to be above average in ability and education, said Herring, will receive first priority in filling the internships, but the remaining internships will be filled by qualifying junior management majors.

The Political Science Club began selling chances Oct. 14 to win Coors beer at the Halloween Happening on Oct. 30 at 19 p.m., said Liz Owen president.

Tickets are available from any member of the club for $1 each, they will also be sold at the club booth at the Halloween/Happening prior to the drawing, said Owen.

First prize will be one case of Coors; second prize, two six packs; and third prizes of one six pack, Owen said.

You do not have to be present to win. The South Carolina tax has been paid on the beer and whoever receives the prizes must not re-sell them, Owen said.

Proceeds will go to the Political Science Club's bicentennial project, Owen said.

The Orientation Program for student teachers for second block (October 24-December 12) will be on Thursday, October 21, 1975 at 8:00 o'clock in Tillman Auditorium.
