MISS HAZEL KINSELLA TO CONDUCT INSTITUTE

Concert Pianist to Direct Course at Winthrop Summer School

Miss Hazel Gertrude Kinsella, concert pianist, author, and major teacher of piano at the University of Nebraska School of Music, will direct a piano teachers' institute of four weeks at Winthrop College Summer School. Miss Kinsella was designated last year as one of the twelve most distinguished women of her state. Because of her contributions to music education, she was chosen as one of the three Piano Consultants who should represent America at the 1931 Anglo-American Music Conference at Lausanne, Switzerland.

The Kinsella plan of conducting piano classes in the schools has attracted the attention of educators and school systems all over the world. Teachers personally trained and certified by Miss Kinsella for teaching piano in classes are in constant demand. To meet this special need, Miss Kinsella holds institutes each summer in widely separated localities.

Miss Kinsella's plan provides a four-year course of study for the young pianist, essential features of which include pianistic mastery of tone, style, pedaling, music-reading, transposition, and interpretation. Her manuals have written texts for her course and other books about music for children.

The Kinsella Plan is used in the Columbia and Greenville schools of South Carolina.

MRS. KINARD SPEAKS TO LITERARY SOCIETIES

"Gardens of South Carolina" Discussed at Meeting, Wade Hampton, Carry, Winthrop

Mrs. James P. Kinard discussed "The Gardens of South Carolina" at a joint meeting of the Wade Hampton, Winthrop, and Cary Literary Societies in Johnson Hall auditorium at 8:30 Monday, March 4. At the beginning of the evening, Bonnie Lee Hair, accompanied by Lillie Hopki, played a violin solo.

Mrs. Kinard began her remarks by saying that everyone likes to know the spots of beauty in her state. South Carolina people have more roots than the people of other states. Our state is small and homogeneous. It will never be wealthy, but it is lovely and livable. We have many things that are valuable, but which are very valuable.

Mrs. Kinard continued: "For blossom gardens in spots in the world the Middle Garden. For people who like the form and line, these gardens offer more appeal than Magnolia. She stated that one of the principal attractions of Middleton Gardens is the famous Middleton Oak, which is said to be between 500 and 700 years old. Mrs. Kinard concluded her talk with a description of Cypress Gardens, another picturesque spot in South Carolina. "These gardens," she said, "lie twenty miles north of Charleston. One approaches the gardens through a wide vista of fields. For people who like the form and line, these gardens offer more appeal than Magnolia. "STUDENT SOVEREIGN POWER"

"Self reverence, self knowledge, self control—These three alone lead life to sovereign power." The aim of the proposed amendments to our Student Government Constitution is to give us, the students of Winthrop College, sovereign power by granting us the right of self reverence, self knowledge, and self control.

We are granted vast potential powers through the Senate, which is to function as the legislative body. The Senate will meet four times a year to revise, make, or do away with rules of the Association. It is in this body that we can exert our greatest influence. If we wish, and deem it necessary, we can revise every rule in our present Constitution.

The committee, which drew up the proposed amendments, showed wisdom and foresight when it did not attempt to change the individual rules, but instead, it put an instrument into the hands of the students whereby they, themselves, could make the changes. If we act wisely, there is no reason why all legislative functions can not be exercised by the students.

Of course, with the privilege of legislation comes responsibility: One naturally follows the other. If we decide to take legislative power into our own hands, we must also accept judicial power. This power is to be invested in the judicial body which will correspond to our present student government board. Many of the minor offenses will be dealt with automatically by the House Presidents. The feeling of judicial responsibility should rest with each individual student.

We continuously clamor for more privileges. We are now given the instrument whereby we may give ourselves these privileges. But there is one thing that we must bear in mind: With privileges come responsibilities; we cannot have one without the other. Before we meet Tuesday to vote on the amendments, let us weigh the matter carefully and be prepared to express our opinions at the meeting of the association. After all, the action we take will affect not only us, but hundreds of students who are to follow us.

1935 commemorates the tercentenary of Secondary Education in America. When the Pilgrim Fathers founded the first Latin-Grammar School in Boston in the year 1635, they little dreamed that they were planting the seeds for the far-flung educational system that today covers our country. They little realized that the American system of public education was to become the most democratic in the world, offering advantages, as in no other country, to rich and poor alike.

Ever since the establishment and from the very beginning of secondary education, the great leaders and thinkers in the field have been experimenting with methods for improvement. Certainly our present system bears faint resemblance, if any, to the original. Perhaps now, as never before, educators are working over the problems of further improvement.

We have been interested several times of late to read of the adoption of comprehensive examinations by some of the largest universities and colleges in America. These examinations are given, according to the English method, at the end of four years, over the entire course the student has pursued. No matter what his marks have been as he went along, the rating which he receives at the end depends largely on the results of his final examination.

We have noticed, too, that curricula are undergoing extensive changes. At the University of Florida, the new plan involves the formation of a new school to be known as "The College of the University of Florida," through which all students will pass before admission into the colleges and professional schools of the Upper Division, or final two years of University Work. This preparatory curriculum will consist of a uniform two-year arrangement of studies designed to broaden the base of the students' education much more extensively than is possible at present.

One of the attendant developments of the new arrangement will be the complete separation of the Lower Division from the Upper Division. Comprehensive examinations will be conducted under the direction of a special board, entirely apart from the teaching staff. For those students who do not desire to take up the professional work in any of the colleges of the Upper Division, a certificate of graduation will be issued upon termination of their studies.

Progress is to be measured in terms of abilities, understandings, appreciations, and skills, instead of courses passed and credit hours accumulated. A special program of vocational guidance and information is to be instituted. The eight major objectives of the new plan are as follows: to acquire and maintain a maximum degree of physical and mental efficiency; to use effectively the tools of thought and speech; to share fully in the changing duties and responsibilities of citizenship; to understand the scientific method and to become familiar with the relationships among, and contributions of, the various sciences; to appreciate the best in religious and philosophical thought; to enjoy literature and the other arts and to grow in appreciation of aesthetic values; to choose wisely an occupation or a profession; to make intelligent use of leisure time.

We have progressed beyond the wildest hopes of the men of 1835 in our educational system in that we have come from the narrow confines of the Latin-Grammar School to the limitless possibilities and objectives of the 1935 Secondary School. The American Public School System in spite of many ups and downs has weathered every storm and stands today as an ever-changing, ever-advancing tribute to the wisdom and ingenuity of the American people.

"In the face of the problems of the future," he stated, "there is only one aid, only one remedy, only one way to teach the coming generation to steer its way. That is through universal education."

LITTLE THEATRE GROUP IN FIRST APPEARANCE

Ann Ware and Polly McNeill, Student Directors, Assist Mrs. Terry in Presentation

Three one-act plays, "My Talker," "Patchwork Quilt," and "Five Minutes From the Station," were presented by members of the Little Theatre before residents of Rock Hill, the faculty of Winthrop College, and Masquer members in the Johnson Hall Auditorium, Friday evening, February 28. Mr. Jack O'Neal, President of Little Theatre introduced the production, and a reception was held in the Johnson Hall parlors after their presentation.
Fourteen members of the Winthrop College Orchestra, directed by Mr. Emmet Gore, gave several musical selections between performances. Those selections included "The New Moon" by Rumburg, "Lobos France" by Kivler, and a solo played by Benny Lee Hair, "Hungarian Dance Number Five" by Brahms, "Love's Dream After the Bell" by Calbulk, "Wings and Motors March" by Severn, "One Night of Love," and "June in January."

The characters in the first production, "My Talker," by Alfred Capen, are: Pierre, a young man about town, played by Mr. John S. Goodman; Clemence, his maid, played by Miss Henriette Caldwell; and Marguerite, the wife of the actor, to whom Pierre owes a large bill. In the play Marguerite induces Pierre to pay his tailor bill by making love to him and then discloses her identity.
In the second play, "Patchwork Quilt" by Rachel Lyman Field, the characters are Mrs. Willis, an old woman who has just lost her estate, played by Mrs. E. I. Terry; Anne Wendell, her daughter, played by Mrs. J. O. Dunlap; Joe Wendell, her son-in-law, played by Mr. H. C. Clark; Betty Wendell, her granddaughter, played by Mrs. J. C. Coulson; Mollie, Mrs. Willis as a bride, played by Mrs. Harry Parkin; William, the groom, played by Mr. Harry Parkin; Mollie, Mrs. Willis as a young matron, played by Miss Lola Landauer; Emily, her daughter; played by Mrs. Dick Reed. In this play Mrs. Willis is broken-hearted because her daughter and son-in-law have taken away from her the belonging; that she loves most—her patchwork quilt and her carved chair. In the end, however, they defect themselves because, hidden in the patchwork quilt is the deed which they have been looking for, and which they must have to sell their mother's farm against her will.
In the third production, "Five Minutes From the Station" by Elaine Sterne Carrington, the characters are Bertman Adams, a young business man, played by Mr. Jack O'Neal; Carrie Adams, his wife, played by Mrs. John S. Goodman; and Mr. Mason, Bertman's employer, played by Mr. Edward Hardin. This play produces an amusing situation in which Bertman tricks Mr. Mason home to supper, much to Carrie's horror, and, despite the fact that she unwittingly burns the supper and gives Mr. Mason engine instead of gin, her husband gets a promotion even greater than the one he had asked for.

The committees for these productions were as follows: Stage Manager, Mr. J. W. Moore; Proprietor, Miss Margaret Gauthier and Mr. Charles Reese; Costumes, Miss Dinky Rambo and Mr. Bob Ward; Sweeper, Miss Lola Landauer and Mr. Charles Jordan; Make-up, Ann Ware and Polly McNeill; Lighting, Mr. Charles Robinson, Mr. W. T. Clawson, Mr. L. P. Culp, and Mrs. J. W. Moore; Entertainment, Mrs. M. M. Mauldin and Mrs. H. C. Clark.
Mrs. E. I. Terry assisted by Ann Ware and Polly McNeill directed the productions.

1. The larger the space, up to full page, the greater is the recall or recognition value of the advertisement.
2. The larger the advertising space, the greater is the value of one presentation of an advertisement.
