SENIORS MAKE TRIP TO WASHINGTON, D. C.

Spend Week-End at National Capital and See Places of Interest

Seniors took their annual trip to Washington the past week-end, from Friday, April 28 until Monday, April 30. They were accompanied by Dr. James P. Knarr, Mrs. Kate O. Hardin, and Mr. Alexander Graham. They left Friday morning at 8:30 on the special bus obtained for the trip.

They went by way of Durham, N. C., where they visited Duke; they also went through Richmond, Va., and other places of interest.

Saturday morning the tour of Washington began with a visit to the Mint, the Washington Monument, and the Lincoln Memorial. At the White House they caught a glimpse of Mrs. Roosevelt as she was leaving. They also visited the Congressional Library and the Capitol. In the afternoon, the visitors went to Mt. Vernon, and other historical sites around Alexandria; they returned by way of Lee's mansion and Arlington, where they visited the National Soldiers' Home. The remainder of the day was passed in riding through many important streets of Washington, including Massachusetts Avenue, where some of the foreign ambassadors live.

Sunday morning the group visited Annapolis, Md., where they saw a dress parade at the Naval Academy.

That afternoon, after the return to Washington, they visited the Smithsonian Institute and the National Museum. They left the city at 6 o'clock and arrived back at the college about 7 o'clock Monday morning.

ANNE MOSS WINS NATIONAL AWARD

Grace Johnson Wins Honorable Mention in Same Essay Contest

Anne Moss, Senior, was awarded first place in an essay contest conducted by Beta Pi Theta. National French fraternity, according to a recent announcement. Anne's subject was "The Possibilities of Allied Democracy in France." The entire paper was written in French. Grace Johnson, Junior, received honorable mention in this contest.

D'Arcy Reeves, 33, and Elizabeth Wiggins, 34, received first and second places respectively, in a poetry contest also conducted by Beta Pi Theta. These poems were submitted two years ago, but as there was no poetry contest then, they were held over until this year.

Because of financial conditions, the original essay reward, the scholarship to Broadwood College, which was intended to which Anne would have been entitled, has been replaced by the award of a Beta Pi Theta ring, which she will receive. D'Arcy Reeves will receive a scholarship to the summer school at Broadwood.

TERPSICHOOREAN DANCE HELD LAST SATURDAY

Elizabeth Bunch is Crowned Queen at Annual Affair in Johnson Hall

Terpsichorean German Club gave its annual dance Saturday evening, April 27, in Johnson Hall, from 9:30 until 12 o'clock. "Mickey" Speights played the piano and Miss Iva Burt, accompanied by Fred Entertainmentist Jim Hollis sang three numbers: "When a Crow Toots Old to Dream," "Soldate," and "Star-dust." She was accompanied by Mickey Speights. A quartet, composed of Mary Flaigsworth, Virginia Workman, Julia Warren, and Eva Paul, accompanied by Anne Louise Henneker, rendered two Bovey songs.

Shortly before midnight, Elizabeth Bunch, acclaimed Queen of the German, was presented with a box of initial stationery.

Throughout the evening punch, sandwiches, and crackers were served.

MR. GRAHAM TO SPEAK
Mr. Alexander H. Graham, Bazaar, will give a talk over regular WPT in connection with the reunion program of the Winthrop Gazette, Sunday, May 5.

Dr. Phelps Addresses Anderson Graduates

Dr. and Mrs. Shenton Phelps and Mrs. Lella Russell attended a reception given by the Anderson Chapter of Winthrop Daughters, honoring the 1935 graduates of Anderson High School, their mothers, and the Sophomore class of Anderson College, at the J. C. Johnson Hotel on April 13.

During the reception Dr. Phelps gave a talk concerning Winthrop College in which he spoke of the Nursery League, the L. R. C., the Debaters' League, and the F. R. E. A. plan.

CHORAL SOCIETY GIVES MUSICAL SELECTION

Presents Mendelssohn's "Elijah" Sunday Night at Vespers

Winthrop College Choral Society will present "Elijah," an oratorio by Felix Mendelssohn, Sunday evening, May 5, at 8 o'clock in main auditorium. The choral society—composed of the Winthrop Choral Club, the Rock Hill Choral Club, the boys' club of Winthrop Training School, and the boys' club of Rock Hill High School—will be assisted by Miss Constance Wardle, soprano; Mrs. Herman McCain, contralto; Mr. Arthur Kraft, tenor; of Chicago, Illinois; and Mr. Frank Taylor, bass, of Chicago, Illinois. Miss Jeanette Roth, organist, and Mrs. C. K. Christy, pianist, will be the accompanists.

The oratorio depicts the contest on Mount Carmel between the numerous prophets of Baal, and the one prophet of God—Elijah. The story in song begins with Elijah's declaration that there will be no more rain or dew in Israel but according to his word. From there, the oratorio deals with the drought-stricken people; the flight of Elijah from Israel; his sojourn by the brook Cherith; his meeting the widow of Zarephath; and then the climax—the calling of the fire from heaven. Because of Elijah's victory on the mount, the people, with one accord, turn from the idol back to God. The oratorio proceeds to its close with the hymns of joy and praise which the people sing to their restored God.

LITERARY SOCIETIES WAKE UP

Literary Societies are waking up; they are reorganizing. We hope that the reorganization will put an end to the marking-time that they have done the last few years and begin a process of going forward with other campus activities.

For a few years, however, the societies seemed to have lost the life and the influence which was formerly theirs. This loss was regrettable not only because of the peculiar service which the societies should have rendered, but also because of the honor which it was the privilege of the societies to confer.

With reorganization, however, interest is reviving. Tradition is not enough to keep an institution progressing; but tradition is an honorable thing. The Literary Societies are moving forward again under new force.

SOCKS AGAIN

Again we must bring up the topic of short socks. We are glad to be able to wear them; we all know that; but do we show it? When a privilege is granted, appreciation is generally shown for it.

But are we doing that? Judging by the numbers of "short-socked" students down town every day, we are not. Let's remember that a privilege was granted to us that we appreciated it, and that we can easily show our appreciation.

WHAT DO YOU READ?

Someone once said that he pitied the man who had never read a book. We would agree with him, for such a man is in a deplorable state. He has missed some of the greatest treasures possible to attain—the golden thoughts of the ages stored in their vaults.

We would point out to you a man more to be pitied than any other. That man is the one who never reads a book or any literature worth reading. That man is the one who yields so often to the revels of licentious composition, that he becomes entangled as a fly in a spider's web.

The man in the gutter is always to be pitied and even sometimes despised for his frivolous immoerateness and invertebrateness. But how much more despicable and pitiable is the man whose mind is reveling in the gutter. The man may be picked up from its low place, but the mind is a hard thing to reach and even harder is the soul found there.

The apples of Eden are luscious and alluring but how sick and diseased they can make one when tasted too often.—The Blue Stocking.

"COLLEGE RHYTHM"

Can college rhythm be the regular routine of eating, sleeping, and going to classes? Can it be the continuous moving of our feet as we trip lightly in the dances that we enjoy? Is it found in the collegiate walk that so many students feel their duty to exhibit? Or, is it found in the harmonious silence that so often falls over a group of students when a fellow student is in trouble?

Things We Could Do Without. Students who rush precipitously up to the teachers' desk inquiring aridly, "Oh, thank you, you got my assignment as a term paper in this course?"

STUDENT OPINION

Question: Considering the fact that the present system of quiet hour is not satisfactory, how could we build up a satisfactory system of extended light cut?

Mary Hart Dargan—Large numbers of our student body agree in condemning the regulation which requires that lights must be out by 10:30. If we wish to abolish this rule, it is only reasonable that we should propose a better plan to take its place.

Evelyn Rhodes—My sympathy goes out to those who've had to sleep even at 10:30, and who haven't been cramped, annoyed, and harassed by being allowed the satisfaction of completing what they are doing because of the 10:30 bell.

Pearl Carter—For a student body as large as this, I propose a plan that each girl be in her room and absolutely quiet by ten-thirty and then cut her light off whenever she has finished her work.

Helen Ferrin—An extended light cut system would be rather difficult to work out. If each girl were allowed so many late lights a month, it would mean too much record-keeping and trouble.

Miscellaneous Opinions. Ruth Bettes—It is a well-known fact that the present system of quiet hour is not satisfactory, but there is the question: What is to be done about it? It is both unnecessary and inadvisable to revert to the old plan of closed study hour.

Next Week's Question—If you approve of uniforms, what changes would you suggest for next year? If you do not approve of them, why? Reply to box 204 by a 10:30 deadline.

NOTICE! All members of the Federation of Social Clubs who have not done so will please pay their dues of $1.00 for the Federation page. Clubs who have not paid will be ineligible to hold office in the Federation next year.

Diary Of A Maid In Uniform

April 27: Arrive in Art Room this morning feeling all inspired. Am sure my muse is at last cooperating. Seeing how the Fires of Omicron are burning within me, I wish to confound to see for the World, sure strikes I soon finish the portrait. With modest pride I present the Masterpieces for Miss Dunn's approval.

April 28: Am in a religious play tonight. A long white man's costume is necessary and the only long white thing available is a sheet. Greatly fear I will be mistaken for an animated bale of cotton. Still I valiantly wind a couple of sheets about my midriff—of course it took some time to determine just where that was!

I labor hard to improve my loquacious appearance. I pin and pin, and tuck and tuck; but strangely when I finish I look as if I were arrayed in—Sleeves entangled in a stray strap, I manage to discard it nonchalantly. Can only hope the audience thinks it natural and normal for nuns to go about shedding sheets.

April 29: Neighbors hold a public meeting and recruit is received from the room. All agree its present state is pathetic. Action is delayed a bit as no one will volunteer or be coerced into sweeping the floor. Finally have to pay a maid a dollar to do it. Takes her two hours to finish this gargantuan task.

It is more a reclaiming of lost, stolen, and borrowed goods than a cleaning up. As each article is rescued from the depths of the closet or from behind the radiator, some neighbor steps forth to claim it. Place looks as if a swarm of locusts has been by. Glimmer is reached when one friend finds a pair of her shoes—once hanging on a doorknob and now in the ceiling light.

April 30: Spend whole study period trying to attain a Spanish Look. Follow recipe for making eye lashes stand up. Cake with powder and vaseline and brush dilutely for half an hour. When I view the result in the mirror, I find that instead of the expected ravishing effect, I only manage to look like a puppy with sore eyes.

QUIRKS

Twenty-Three and Skidoo. The composition of the number twenty-three with the slang word "skidoo" (imperative mood of the verb to skidoo—i. e., to vanquish) has been variously explained.

Theatrical authorities claim the phrase for themselves. An actor, it is said, who had fallen out of favor with the manager, would be given 18 parts to memorize in five weeks (18 plus 5 equal 23) or be dropped from the cast list.

In horse-racing circles, however, a rival claim is put forward. The phrase is said to have originated from the number of horses entered at a certain suburban race in New York. The number of entries had been limited to twenty-two, but on this occasion twenty-three were sent to the post, whereupon the clerk had ordered out of the field. Club men, again, explain that the chariot-race, the last item on the program, is usually No. 23. During the performance the canvas-woman will be around and sleep, but when this race was in progress they were annoyed by the boss canvas-man so that they might get ready for work as soon as the race was over.

FACULTY OPINION

Hesperion M. Jarrell—Whether the idea is to have a sort of debate (Student versus Faculty), or to demonstrate the fact that the faculty really does have opinions now and then—whatever the motive is, I have been asked for one: Faculty Opinion. Naturally I am myself would like better to have this opinion about it; I answer myself that I'll say my say about what has been rather conspicuous around here of late: bare legs.

Now, I take it, bare legs on the Winthrop Campus are a sign, not only of spring, but of something more. It is about this "something more" that I wish to "opinionize." As I see the problem, a woman's college must take one of two opposite courses: Faculty Opinion. Naturally I am myself would like better to have this opinion about it; I answer myself that I'll say my say about what has been rather conspicuous around here of late: bare legs.

If the college accepts full responsibility for its students, administration has a serious and difficult task to perform. On the one hand, detailed regulations, designed to hold students to a reasonable standard of conduct, must be formulated and enforced. On the other hand, these regulations must not be so inflexible as to necessitate the necessity of interfering with the students' pursuit of happiness. If the regulations are too lax, the standard of conduct of some of the students will be lowered to a point harmful both to the college and to the student themselves. If, on the other hand, the college makes its laws too light, the resulting discontent and rebelliousness of spirit will work more harm, perhaps, to both college and students than would a lowered standard of conduct.

To achieve a perfect mean between these two extremes would require superhuman tact and wisdom. And even though such a mean were once achieved, its virtue would be only temporary; changing conditions in the life outside the college would necessitate change within. The administration, then, can only seek to add those regulations required to meet new needs and, what is equally important, to eliminate those that are both irksome and no longer necessary.

This is where bare legs come in. Ten years ago, when we have seemed somewhat objectionable; today they seem to me not in the least so. The "something more" that they are a sign of is the evidence they give that the administration is consistently seeking to hold to an acceptable mean.

BLUE SPECTATOR

We hear most exciting versions of the Washington trip. Betty Coggin has been "spreading the news" around the campus and very liberally to such a certain dignified Senor. (She threatens annihilation if her name appears) . . . Dr. G. C. Naudin volunteers to call out the reserve officers for those whose dates for Junior-Senior are unable to come. Glimmer is also keeping some news very, very tight.

Wilson Johnson has been crocheting tiny garments—tut tut! . . . We understand that the girls in North who indulge in anklets are suffering from coolness. . . . While strolling through the woods, my fairer sister was almost overcome by an arachnid of plastering. . . . "Noodle" Loundes sends timely graduating gifts. Ask Edith La Roche.

Chloroform is compromising on her Junior-Senior dress—not red, but rose. Whereas Hattie Mae becomes the lady in black. They have also devised a cooperative plan of color scheming for corsages. . . . Helen Clark promises The Tattler for the first week in May. . . . Evelyn Rhodes is flaunting a most cherubic corsage these days. . . . And have you seen "Bancroft's" diamond? Mrs. Ivy says "I sleep like a log." But ask Harriet Finley if it felt to have one sleep on her. . . . "Toivelle" Woods says "I've never even had a cigarette in my mouth." . . . Mary Louisa has a new pair of spectacles that she wears on all occasions. . . . Mary Finley was recently mistaken for a Senor. And Senors are supposed to be dignified. . . . "Dimple" Thomas received a card from one of The Otisdel department addressed "Dimple," Rock Hill, S. C. On the back was the following statement: "If your post office is as good as your debating, you'll get this." . . . Lucille Cooe says she hopes to go to Charleston when school's out and see the express in bloom. . . . The Freshman who awoke thrilly in the middle of the night, and, being rather sleepy, just drank the water out of the flowers. . . . Maggie insists that he found "The Lost Chord" at the music concert last week. . . . "Meth is going 'stuck-up' these days. Somebody's chawing gum on all the keyholes. Four Miss Anderson
