Wins "Story" Contest

Elizabeth Hall, Barnard Senior, is the winner of the National College Short Story Contest held by the magazine "Story" in which 224 universities and colleges representing every state, participated. Miss Hall's manuscript which was awarded the first prize of one hundred dollars is called "Two Words Are a Story" and appears in the November issue of "Story."

Miss Hall is twenty-one years old and a native New Yorker. Before attending Barnard she studied at Shore Road Academy and Swarthmore. She worked for one year as an advertising copy writer in a department store basement, an experience which she says "was probably more educational than any formal training."

She describes her favorite occupations as "swimming, cooking and receiving large checks from editors which seldom happens to me."

Winthrop was represented in the contest with a story by Caroline Crum, and one by Ann Ware.

DR. SYDNEY HALL SPEAKS IN CHAPEL

Noted Educator Outlines Program of Curriculum in Virginia

Dr. Sydney Hall, State Superintendent of Public Instruction in Virginia, spoke in the Chapel Program in Virginia at chapel, Thursday, November 14, at 12:30.

Dr. Hall pointed out that instruction has become more important in the school program and must take precedence over the building, equipment, and transportation facilities. This improved instruction, he declared, demanded better prepared teachers. Dr. Hall explained how, in Virginia, an attempt was being made to select the prospective teachers. This selective process begins in high school and continues through the college. Instead of teaching subject matter in compartmentalized segmented form, the college professors are working out a definite plan of relationship between phases of knowledge. Teachers who learn facts in relationship to life will then go out and teach facts in their relationship to life," he stated.

In conclusion Dr. Hall pointed out the attempt being made in Virginia to further the selective process and to counterbalance the artificial atmosphere of the training school. The student teacher is being the best training under the best conditions at the practice schools on the campus. The department of education is not to give preference to the district teacher over her work in the training school. The teacher before receiving her certificate must serve a year's apprenticeship in the schools of the state.

His Wife and Son Assist in Third Artist Course of the Year

IS UNIVERSITY PROFESSOR

Audiences Acclaim Him as One of Best Entertainers in His Line

Paul Fleming, magician and educator, will offer "An Evening of Magic" as one of numbers in the series of Artist Course entertainments in Winthrop College Auditorium, Saturday, November 16, at 8 o'clock.

Mr. Fleming has been acclaimed by his numerous audiences throughout the United States as one of the best and most finished entertainers in his field. His programs are executed with the assistance of his wife and son.

Mr. Fleming, whose real name is Paul Fleming Oconnell, is Professor of Economics at the University of Pennsylvania in winter and a traveling magician at other times. He received his A. B. at Swarthmore and his Ph. D. at Pennsylvania. His wide diversity of interests is attested to by his membership in Phi Beta Kappa (scholarship), Delta Sigma Rho (public speaking), and Phi Omnia Mu (social sciences).

Among the books Mr. Fleming has written are "Collective Bargaining by the 'Present-Day Labor Relations,'" "Fundamentals of Economics," "An Economics Question Book," and "Contemporary Economic Problems."

Mr. Fleming had engagements with the "Hot Circuit" in France, at the White House, and in private schools, before coming to Winthrop.

Typical of the comments evoked by his performance is the following, printed in "The Daily Progress" of Charlottesville, Virginia, after his appearance at the University of Virginia:

"The phenomenal tricks of magic, and Mr. Fleming's clever line of talk, kept the audience alternately ruck with laughter and hushed with awe. No one was clever enough to detect the slightest fraud, and there was not a dull moment from the appearance of the phantom horse-chiefs at the start to the bewildering change of character in the Hindu Gong performance at the close."

THANKSGIVING HOLIDAYS—PRO AND CON

It is a custom at Winthrop to have only one day holiday at Thanksgiving. At numerous other colleges and at most high schools there is quite a different custom: that of four days of Thanksgiving holidays. The question is: Which custom is the most well worth following?

On the left hand there are many arguments. Some of these are: Thanksgiving is so near Christmas that it would seem feasible to have two "prolonged" holidays so close together; our routine of work would be upset by an interruption of four days; we may catch cold.

On the right hand, too, there are many arguments. Thanksgiving is a day of universal family rejoicing, but, as it is set now, the holiday time is so limited that not half of the student body will have time to get even a satisfactory glimpse of their families before flying back to classes. Also, we believe that the faculty would honestly appreciate a little holiday in which to gather their wits after the strain of "six-weeks-testing." The students certainly need relaxation after mid-semester; and, perhaps largest of all, the students certainly want it.

We believe that the right hand outweighs the left. We would be much more thankful at Thanksgiving with four whole days to be thankful in.

THE N. Y. A. AND EDUCATION

The purpose of the National Youth Administration as founded by President Roosevelt is to give financial aid to young people on relief. This aid is given either in the form of scholarships to enable needy young people to re-enter or continue school, or as wages in return for public employment. We are most interested in the educational side of the N. Y. A.

From a speech recently made by Mr. Aubrey W. Williams, Executive Director of the N. Y. A., we learn that under those financial aids we have thus far succeeded in keeping in high schools and colleges approximately three hundred thousand persons. Nearly 2,500 of these are seeking master's degrees, and 1,600 are studying for their doctor's. This aid may not cost over $30.00 a month, and in most instances it is $25.00. Each student receiving this aid is employed on some socially desirable project or research work under the supervision of the faculty. The undergraduates, of whom there are from 100,500 in nearly 1,600 colleges and universities receiving aid from N. Y. A., also work for their money on or off the campus. The rest of the students are high school students and these receive only $8 a month.

Aiding young people in acquiring education is a recognition of its importance as a prerequisite of earning an everyday living. The uneducated person has not half the chance for advancement and success that the educated person has. But, in order that educated humanity be better fitted to meet the world, education itself should be better fitted to modern progress. It should be modernized.

We know that our school system is not big enough. We also know very decidedly that our school system has not broken down its old and irrelevant body of learning and substituted for it the relevant facts of the new world, a world which twenty years ago was never dreamed of. Most of our literature, our history, our mathematics, and our economy is based on the belief that poverty is inevitable, and that war is uncontrollable.

We are inclined to believe, like Mr. Williams, that education will not meet the needs of life until we reach the place where the services of industrial workers are always in demand, and the poor can be as warm in winter as wool and fuel can make them.

RED CROSS ON THE CAMPUS

The college student who pins on the Red Cross membership button in this year's annual membership Roll Call links himself with an organization he remembers at home or sees in projects of relief and rehabilitation throughout the country.

After graduation he will find that there are many calls for college trained young people in all phases of the work of the American Red Cross. If the graduate likes excitement he can find it in Red Cross disaster and emergency operations anywhere. Last year there were 128 disasters—floods, fires, tornadoes, shipwrecks, epidemics of disease, hurricanes, and storms. The man whose mind and body are geared to the quick thinking and effective action of the gridiron or diamond is invaluable in disasters of these types. The quarterback who works with the coach to develop the football plays that will be used this year will be a valuable member of the civic group which meets in advance of possible disasters to map the community action which would be taken in an emergency.

A program of health and safety education supplements the Red Cross services of relief and rehabilitation, and volunteers can find work here that will be valuable to the community and of great benefit to their own careers.

Courses of instruction are given in first aid and life saving, and with the nationwide interest centered in programs now under way which are planned to cut down the high total of fatalities through accidents on the highways, in industry, and in homes. graduates who volunteer in these fields will find ample opportunity to use their trained brains and hands.

Instruction in home hygiene and care of the sick goes along with the bedside nursing in the Red Cross public health nursing program, and college trained young women will find a special field of activity here, as well as in many other projects developed because of the needs of the last few years.

Case work offers opportunities for those inclined in social service, and braille transcribing, volunteer work in the Chapter office or in Roll Call headquarters, the production of garments and surgical dressings, motor corps and canteen service, offer further opportunities for young people who want something worth while to do in the months that follow graduation.

Membership in the Red Cross keeps the student in touch with the world-wide activities of that organization and may be the key which will open a wide door of opportunity for service in the future.

The Roll Call period begins on Armistice Day and continues through Thanksgiving. The Red Cross calls on those who will be its future leaders to join the organization now and begin to prepare for the work of the coming year.
