

April 2014

Bronze Soldier

Connor Renfroe

Follow this and additional works at: <https://digitalcommons.winthrop.edu/anthology>

Part of the Poetry Commons

Recommended Citation

Renfroe, Connor (2014) "Bronze Soldier," The Anthology. Vol. 2014, Article 4.
Available at: <https://digitalcommons.winthrop.edu/anthology/vol2014/iss1/4>

This Poetry is brought to you for free and open access by Digital Commons @ Winthrop University. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Anthology by an authorized editor of Digital Commons @ Winthrop University. For more information, please contact digitalcommons@mailbox.winthrop.edu.

Bronze Soldier | Connor Renfroe

I was born at the end of my parents' silver age.
The copper and tin were melded together,
Pressed into a slab.
They cut me from a sheet and
Handed me off to schools to mold me,
To churches to fold me,
Hammer and form me
Into a totem.
My aesthetic changed to suit my owners;
But when the war began
I was tossed into the pot,
Melted down and reformed
As a sword, a shield, a plate on the breast.
And when I had seen the end of that purpose,
They saw fit to press me down
And electroplate me to the shoes
Of the iron generation.

Metro | Dylan Bannister
VHS still, digital imaging