CAMPUS FIGURES DIG AT EQUESTRIENNE SCIENCE

Bishop, Wardlaw, and Peace Learn "Horse Sense" From Book

"Although learning to ride a horse isn't quite as thrilling (unless you have an extremely imaginative mind) when the knowledge is obtained from a book while one is comfortably snuggled in the depths of an arm chair, nevertheless it is much safer and less painful."

This spoke Miss Esra Wardlaw in an interview on the relative merits and demerits of learning to ride horseback from a book and from a horse.

She will discuss to a certain western university, caught without a term paper one day, matched one from his fraternity's files, typed it, and handed it in. It came back with an "A" on it and a note asking the student to see the professor.

"Did you think that paper was worth an 'A'?" queried the professor.

The student, thinking to charm the former with a display of modesty admitted he had expected a "B."

"Well, it's worth an 'A', see?" said the professor. "When I wrote it it is years ago. I got a 'C' I'm glad to see that it has at last received its due recognition."—Rollins Sandspur.

At one of our eastern colleges recently the professor was unable to stop for class so he placed a sign on his door which read as follows:

"Professor _____ will be unable to meet his classes today. Some colleagues are giving a chance to display his sense of humor, after reading the notice, essendo the letter 'O' from in front of 'lasses'. The professor, not taking the laughter, whisked around, walked back, looked at the sign, and then called to a classmate by the name of 'L' in 'lasses' and walked away.—E. Masonian.

A Wellesley girl who is a "city abashed about expiring her ions, woolen underwear before her elevated-looking roommate at Dartmouth house-party, began a harsh explanation.

"You see," she said, as she pulled off her ski suit, "these are my father's. I don't usually wear them. 'Oh, that's fine,'" said her companion, pulling off her outer garments, and showing an equally long pair of gray woollens. "These are my grandfather's."—Wellesley College News.

CAMPUSIN' AROUND

Magisterio... A cigarette fiend at Loyola University derived into higher mathematics the other day to find how much it cost him to smoke. He made the startling discovery that he could enjoy forty-five more dates a year if he would abstain from smoking. According to this statistician, the average student on the Loyola campus smokes about 19 packages a week (his own or his friends') which amount to about 520 packs a year. A cost of $93.60. Now figure how much his dates cost him.—The Davidsonian.

This Collegiate World

(By Associated Colleges Press)

Two excellent pieces of journalism got into the college press this week. One was an interview by Samuel Mintz, University of Wisconsin, with the late Harry Long and the other was an accidental interview with a boy just off a chain gang, by a reporter for the Princeton paper.

Mintz's story gave an idea of Long's tremendous building, hectic, overworking energy.

Excerpt: A door flew open, Healy's head popped out. A "come on in boy!" went rumbling down the hall.

"I'm a college student." I got as far as "I know all about colleges. I run one."

"What do you think should be taught in colleges?"

"Arithmetic. That's all. Plain and simple arithmetic. You've got to show the boys that there's something wrong in nine hundred and ninety-nine haws being fed on one portion of haw feed and one haw being fed on nine hundred and ninety-nine portions of haw feed."

"What you've got to do boy is read." He jumped out of his chair, almost overturning his desk. He rumbled a very pretty secretary out of the way. He gave you some real literature. Ever hear about the Sharn the Wealthy Idea?"

Suddenly he left me. He ran into an adjoining room. I turned to go. "Where are you going?" Mr. Long was back.

Harvard Youth Gives Comments On Fashions

When the News broadcast to the world a few of Wellesley's pet pieces in regard to men and their clothes, a prompt reply from one of the magazine's sex embodied some invaluable tips for the girl who wants to be popular. From one who has had "real life" experience" at Wellesley. The writer of the letter, who signs himself D. Bancroft, who lives in Wellesley Hills, and who is entrenched at Harvard, speaks as follows:

"Our attention has recently been called to an interesting and instructive article appearing in the current issue of the Wellesley College News under the heading 'Down With Sloppy, Unimaginative Clothes.' It is most regrettable that the information here published cannot be made more readily available to the subjects analyzed. We shall certainly try to conform to the specifications you so judiciously set."

"We apologize for the brown-jacket-gray-trouser combination to which you express such aversion. It appears that this form of dress has been copied by Harvard men from their British cousins at Oxford and Cambridge. We believe that other college men (in particular those at Amherst) are somewhat more original. Corduroy pants are, however, garments of such indubitable virtue that one wonders how a girl can be so fastidious as to veto them. We assume that your reference to dorkies and cadbury pants in the same phrase is simply a form of rhetoric, for we doubt that even an Amherst man would associate these two articles as closely as you imply."

"Further rebuttal of your article seems futile but we must compliment you on your description of the type of girl in whom Mr. Averag C. Man is most interested. We concur that the ideal date is somewhat frivolous and not too bright. Smart college women seem to realize this, the wisdom never admit undue intelligence by word or act.

"We would invite your consideration of an article appearing in The Ladies Home Journal for January, 1934, entitled 'Loopy Husbands.' (Please don't inquire how we happened to discover it.) Gallant points noted in the ideal women include clean hair, moderate and discreet use of perfume, and eyebrows which are well shaped, but not too thick to be a hindrance. Fine and good carriage are most important points; the debilitate slouch, so popular a year or two ago, is depressing to the point of protrophy. Men's pet aversion include crooked stockings, shoes and slippers alike. To the latter, one might respectfully add scariet firm gernal polish. Only about one girl in twenty has hands meriting the amount of attention which bright red nails involve. Far more objectionable than the distasteful fingernail is the vermilion toenail. It is out of season just now but our present platitude plea arises from summertime's outrageous abuses."

"The evening dress with train is a barbarous relic of a bygone day. Nothing is more irritating than to attempt to distract a girl's attention from this encumbrance by dancing with her. The sophisticated apparently believe that they are sufficiently accomplished to manage both the man and the train at the same time, but we venture to urge that gowns of this type be confined to weddings, receptions, and in general to occasions on which the embellish-d object need only stand and be observed."

"Furthermore, the pocket of a dinner coat is 8 1/2 inches wide, and 7 inches deep. The pocket of a dress coat is 6 1/4 inches wide and 4 inches deep. In buying evening bags, it is too much to request that these dimensions be taken into consideration? We do not object to carrying on a large scale demands at the very least a knapsack. Knapsacks are so reinforced that heavy loads do not distort their personality."

"A word about tardiness: Our personal experience gives Wellesley a bouquet in this respect. The fifth girl usually takes twenty-five minutes to impress her date with the amount of effort involved in achieving it. Yasar and Mt. Holyoke women obtain the same or better results in fifteen to twenty minutes. But in particular instances, Wellesley girls have been known to present a facilities appearance in less than five minutes, including the time taken by the maid to summon the defendant."—Wellesley College News.

"SPEAKS TO MUSIC CLUB Professor Walter B. Roberts addressed the Junior Music Club, which met at the home of Bertha Mae Rogers, Saturday, February 15, on the subject of 'National Personages as Musicians.'"

He closed Helen, He'll enused; He isn't Helen, Helen said, —Cold and Black.

Gym-Cracks

Spring is just around the corner it seems—and so are the basketball games. One more week, then the tournament! Practice while you may—Mr. Dan McLeod, field representative of the American Red Cross, has been giving exhibitors' lessons in life saving all this week. Those who attended the Red Cross Institute at Brevard last summer will remember him. Ray for Miss Bradford, Dr. Scott, Dr. Russell, and Miss Cragwell! They have taken up the "gentle art" of bowling.

The tennis club will get under way very soon. Watch the bulletin boards. Everybody is still talking about our big event of last week-end. Didn't you think the members of the U. S. F. H. touring team were swell? They gave lots of pointers on technique and strategy—and it was thrilling to play with them!

Such domestic allures our visitors! Did you know that they spent some of their spare time embroidering emblems for their tunics? What, eh? The weather was just right regarding the predicted blizzard. And were you glad... Sunshine was the answer to many prayers! The northwinters said that S. C. lived up to their expectations—except they found no palm trees!

The tea Saturday afternoon was quite a success—inasmuch to Mrs. Watson and Mrs. McCling—Evelyn Rhodes and Nell Carter... And did you ever expect to see the day when we would go to a tea in North parlor in gym clothes?

"Shall we or shall we not have a swimming meet?" is the question of the hour. There's more interest in shown it will be impossible to have it... and how could we do without one? Back up your class—come out to practice—BE IN THE SWIM!

DR. MAGGINIS WILL SPEAK Professor Willis D. Magginis will speak to the Abbeville County Education Association on Thursday, February 25, and to the Saluda County Education Association on Tuesday, February 25.

Costes—Mr. Smith, how far were you from the correct answer? Smith—Three seats, sir. —The Old Cold and Black
