Senior Sarah Johnson has been elected as the new president of the Campus Demo party. The party's decision to implement a "switch-ism" policy is a significant shift from their previous stance. This policy aims to provide students with the freedom to switch their affiliation at any point, allowing for a more fluid and dynamic political landscape. This move is expected to foster greater engagement and representation within the student body.

Swede Discovers American Habits

By SARA JOHN WILDFRIST

Ella Hooker, a special student from Stockholm Sweden who wants to study to become an American citizen, has found a very different way of living in Winthrop than in her own country.

Ella said that she learned to speak Winthropese in college, but she now finds that she must learn the American ways of living. She has found that Americans are much more punctual and polite than Swedes.

She described the American way of doing things as follows:

"American habits are much more punctual than Swedish habits. For example, if an American is invited to dinner at 7:00, he will be there at exactly 7:00. In Sweden, it is not unusual for dinner guests to be twenty minutes late."

"Swedes are much more informal than Americans. Americans are much more likely to say 'please' and 'thank you.'"
