SGA will sponsor a Muscular Dystrophy Day Saturday, April 3 beginning at 2 p.m.. announced Margaret Williamson, president.

"Ten of fifteen clubs and organizations on campus have already agreed to participate in the carnival and we expect more," Williamson said.

Organizations will set up booths wherever they desire on campus. There will be small donation charges at the booths with all proceeds going to the Muscular Dystrophy Fund.

Some of the clubs which have already announced their participation are the Art Club, Tri Beta, Winhecon, the Social Work Club, Alpha Lambda Delta, and Dinkins Programming Board.

The dance theater will also present a show at the carnival, according to Williamson.

"We’d like to have a large turnout of faculty, staff, students and the community for Muscular Dystrophy Day," Williamson said.

If the event proves to be successful, it will become a regularly scheduled event on the Winthrop calendar.

Coleman To Show Work Of Independent Filmmakers

When Tennessean Mary Jane Coleman first held a festival of the work of independent filmmakers, she took a name from the creek which runs through her farm, and the Sinking Creek Film Celebration was born. Ms. Coleman brings a collection of films from the last five Celebrations to Winthrop College on Thursday, March 18.

Dr. Coleman, in the mid-sixties on her farm near Greenville, Tennessee, the Sinking Creek Film Celebration has since moved to Vanderbilt University in Nashville. It has become the largest conference/festival in the South, and each June displays work of independent film.

The Sinking Creek event has gained national prominence and has attracted noted film celebrities. A painter and member of the Tennessee Arts Commission, Coleman was selected films from the Celebration to introduce independent filmmaking to communities, schools and universities throughout the South.

Admission is free for the Rock Hill Auditorium. The showing is part of the continuing Independent American Filmmakers series sponsored by Joyces Center for Continuing Education at Winthrop, the Greenville County Museum of Art, the Columbia Art Museum and the South Carolina Arts Commission.

Men's Golf 'Healthy And Growing'

by Teresa Matthews

The Winthrop Men's Golf Team is now in its second year of existence and according to Coach David Gower, the men's golf program is healthy and growing.

Dr. Gower feels that in order for any college to become outstanding in any sport, it is necessary to "go the scholarship route."

However, according to Gower, with the quality of golf that is played in the area of high schools and with the expected increase in male enrollment, there is no reason why Winthrop can not have a continually good team and from time to time have really exceptional golfers representing the school.

Gower's personal goal is to have a high-quality program without scholarships. By high quality, he refers to the opportunity to travel, participate in tournaments and "play good teams on good courses."

This year Winthrop is a member of the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics (NAIA). This has temporarily limited the number of persons eligible to play golf at Winthrop because of the NAIA regulations on eligibility. Membership in the NAIA, however, is expected to strengthen the program in the long run by permitting the golf team to participate in tournaments and attracting prospective golfers interested in gaining state and national recognitions.

Dr. Gower is interested in getting in touch with any student who would like to try out for the team. He is a little concerned that there may be students who could help the golf team, but who are afraid to try out. Dr. Gower will be glad to discuss eligibility rules with anyone interested in golf and participation is available to those interested in joining the team next year.

Dinkins Programming Board will sponsor an INFORMAL INTERVIEW tonight, March 22, at 8 p.m. in Dinkins Auditorium.

DINKINS BOARD

by Sheila Nolan

The Programming Board will sponsor a trip to the Columbus Zoo this Saturday, March 27. Students interested can still sign up in the Director's office. Details concerning the trip may be obtained from the same office.

Mar. 23-27 is Movie Week, according to Sandra Pidde. Dinkins vice president.

Films will be shown in Tillman Auditorium at 7:30 p.m. Admission will be 50 cents for students and $1 for the public. Movies to be shown are: FRENZY, March 23; REBECCA, March 24; and NORTH BY NORTHWEST, March 25.

Friday, March 26, a free movie, THE STEFFORD WIVES, will be shown in Tillman and another free movie, HORSEFEATHERS, will be shown at 11 p.m. March 27 in Dinkins Auditorium, following Junior follies.
Imagine you are a student at Winthrop during 1895. You are registering for classes and see the course “Physical Culture.” Now, would that be in the music department or in the art department? Guess again. Physical Culture was the name of the Physical Education Department when it first began on this campus.

Physical Culture was a part of the Normal Department which sought to give students a liberal education as well as a certain amount of instructional theory to prepare them to teach.

Every student was required to take at least one course in the physical culture program unless excused due to health by the college physician. Indoor and outdoor exercises were required in each course. Students would begin with free standing exercises and advanced to the use of apparatus as they gained more skill.

Pupils enrolled in the classes were required to wear special physical culture suits. These suits were quite different from the “greens” at Winthrop today. They consisted of tops and not pants, with colors varying from black to green throughout the history of the department. At first many girls were apprehensive about enrolling in the physical culture classes. One girl allegedly told the college physician that her female body could be harmed through such strenuous exercises. But the courses still survived despite female whim.

In the beginning, the gymnasium was located in the basement of Tillman. Although the space was limited, classes were held during two periods per week in which students received instruction in physical culture.

Later a swimming pool was built directly under the present porch of the administration building. Although it provided a place for the girls to swim, no formal instruction in swimming was offered.

The first director of the department was Miss Ada Wolfe, a graduate of the Boston Normal School of Gymnastics. Miss Wolfe was well qualified to head the department since her alma mater was one of the best institutes of it’s kind in the country.

During the early 1900’s, the department added bowling, basketball, tennis and golf to the curriculum. Hiking and bicycling clubs became important across the campus.

In 1904, the department saw the addition of a 6-hole golf course on campus. However, due to improper care, the course was not very useful.

In 1910 another change occurred. This time in name. The physical culture department was separated from the normal department and became the Physical Education Department.

The first P. E. major was established in 1918. The major included 8 theory courses, practice teaching, and three courses in science and hygiene. Only an A.B. degree was offered in the beginning. The first four majors graduated in 1920.

As the physical education department expanded, there developed a need for a new gymnasium. In 1915 Peabody Gym was completed. There was ample space for gymnastics and other indoor sports provided by the new building. Features included a pool, a locker room with 1,500 lockers, and 60 shower stalls. The department saw the need to prepare students for new challenges in physical education.

In 1945, the department expanded to include curriculum preparation for physical therapists, remedial physical education and camp programming. At the same time, a B.S. degree became available to students.

During the sixties, field hockey, soccer, speedball, tumbling, volleyball, badminton, and dancing expanded the curriculum. This allowed P. E. majors to be placed together for activity courses during their freshman-sophomore years.

In 1962, a nine-hole golf course was donated to the college with adjacent driving range. New tennis courts appeared on campus, and the department acquired the use of Withers Gym.

Intercollegiate competitive sports programs were added in 1969. This included competition in basketball, volleyball, hockey and tennis.

Today the Physical Education Department seeks to serve the Winthrop Community by preparing teachers for all levels, by helping students acquire skills to enable them to keep a certain amount of fitness throughout life and to prepare students for physical therapy and camping programs. The department has expanded in the years since co-education, and now includes sports for males and females. The addition of a new pool is Peabody will help expand the aquatics program.

Yet, the physical education department has a rich heritage at Winthrop, but the future looks bright. We may see it growing to include a coliseum, mascots and big game weekends.

Arabs, Israelis Join in Condemning Sexism

TJ/editorials

March 22, 1976

Arab and Israeli women have taken a great step forward in the worldwide struggle for the alleviation of sexual repression. At the International Tribunal on Crimes Against Women, a five-day conference held in Brussels, Belgium, female delegates from four Arab countries and Israel placed in an unprecedented joint statement condemning sexist practices and policies within their own homelands. It is believed to be the first time that an international forum has witnessed Arab and Israeli criticism of their own, rather than each other's, societies.

"We understand that our oppression is by men and not by opposing nationalities," said the joint statement. "The dialogue between Arab and Jewish women that has begun at this tribunal shall continue within the framework of international feminism, " it continued.

This development contrasts greatly with the 1975 International Conference in Mexico City, where Arab women joined in condemning Israel and Zionism, and walked out when Leah Rabin, the wife of Israel's prime minister, rose to speak. The delegates seemed little concerned with the women's issues. At the Tribunal, however, it appeared that the time had come for women to address themselves to these issues which directly and uniquely affect the members of our sex.

Israeli delegate Johanna Warn claimed that equality of the sexes is a myth in her country and pointed out that seventy percent of the women are housewives. Women employed outside the home earn an average forty-three percent less than men in wages and work only at jobs accepted as 'Women's work.' Furthermore, the Knesset (parliament) is only eight percent female and local government is practically all-male. She also charged that Israeli authorities pressure women to have more children and to act as men's servants.

The complaints of the Arab delegates centered on acts of violence carried out by men against women of the Arab nations. The delegate from Yemen denounced "honor crimes," or situations in which a woman held to be guilty of dishonoring her family by inappropriate sexual behavior is stoned to death by male members of the family. This cruel custom has survived for at least seven centuries. They're dowered in the desert and married about fourteen years. They've given away calendars and desecrated papers and torn their identity cards. But that's not the most serious - what do you give a servant, and already is a radical devaluation of women's work. Further, the Tribunal has made a much more significant contribution to international feminism. Perhaps the fact that IWY itself was sponsored by the UN, a male-dominated body, while the Tribunal was more of a women-initiated effort, from which men were banned and male journalists were restricted to the opening session and a daily briefing, has something to do with this. As long as we are defined and confounded by male standards, women can hope for little progress in our struggle. To be the most effective, something done for women should be done by women.

I just started pounding out another obitum on how we all waste our time on our spring vacations and all that kind of jive when I decided that I really don't much care that I wasted all that time. Original Drifters
The Original Drifters were first organized in Sumter, South Carolina in the year 1955, and have been going strong ever since. For example, in 1975 they worked 311 days - probably more working days than 50% of the entertainment groups in the United States. The Original Drifters consist of Albert Fortson, Bass Singer; George Walliser, Baritone; Benny Anderson, 2nd Tenor; Mose Odum, 1st Tenor. All of the men sing lead from time to time, but most of the lead singing is done by Benny Anderson who is also the leader of the group.

Albert Fortson has been with the Original Drifters the longest period of time, having started with the group in 1955 - Anderson and Walliser joined the group in 1955 - Mose Odum started in 1956. Benny Odum started in 1968 - The Drifters have appeared throughout the 50 States, Europe, Mexico and Canada. Last year they appeared in 24 States, Canada and Mexico. They truly deserve their name "Drifters".

In the year 1975 alone they have appeared in 17 States and have performed on the stage with such artists as Valton Wilson, O’Neal and the Gang, Roy Orbison, Frankie Valli and the Four Seasons, Redd Thomas, Carly James and the Sendelles, Cliff/Lee, Counters, Team and many others.

The Drifters sing mostly what is referred to as "Beach Music": On Broadway, Sand in My Shoes, Saturday Night at the Movies, Under the Boardwalk, etc. But in their set they sing contemporary songs or Top 40 tunes and others of the New Era.

The Drifters show therefore appeals to a wide audience from 18 to 80. If you will.
