Playing Thursday

The Rainmaker

To Come Thursday

“Rainmaker”, a romantic comedy by N. Richard Nash, will be presented Thursday night at the Carolina Playmakers. The play will be presented under the sponsorship of the Carolina Playmakers. It will be given in Johnson Hall at 8 p.m.

Directed by Harvey Whiteman, the playhouse is a small but intimate setting. The story concerns a woman who brings hope and happiness to a family that is in despair. The play will be "the pride girl that every woman craves — if she’s a real woman.

The role of Lisette, the pride girl, will be played by a student. To make her role believable, the student will be permitted to wear a costume worn by the actual Lisette in the play.

The play will be presented Thursday night. The play is in the interest of the community and will be presented for the benefit of the community.

When the Dining Room Committee and the Executive Council considered the rules for the dining room, they did so under the scrutiny of the student body. This was the first time that the student body had been so directly involved in the decision-making process, and it was widely acknowledged as a significant development in the democratic process at the university.

The Dining Room Committee, as well as the Executive Council, recognized the approval of the student body as necessary for the success of the new rules. This was a departure from previous years, where the rules were established without input from the student body.

The new rules included a number of changes that were designed to address the concerns of the student body. These changes included reducing the number of days that the dining room would be closed, allowing for more flexibility in the hours of operation, and establishing a system for student feedback that would allow for ongoing evaluation and improvement.

The reaction of the student body was generally positive, with many students expressing enthusiasm for the new rules. However, there were still concerns that needed to be addressed, and the committee was committed to working towards further improvements in the future.

The new rules were seen as a significant step forward in the democratic process at the university, and they were widely acknowledged as a testament to the importance of student input in the decision-making process. This was a significant development in the history of the university, and it was seen as a model for other institutions to follow.

The Dining Room Committee was pleased with the approval of the student body and was confident that the new rules would be successful. This was the beginning of a new era of collaboration and partnership between the administration and the student body, and it was seen as a positive development for the future of the university.
Faculty Stunt
Night Reveals
Future School

"Winston, 1960" was the theme of Faculty Stunt Night Monday night in the Main Auditorium from 8 to 10. The show which stars administration, profession, and students, is sponsored annually by Tri-Beta, the biology honorary organization.

Eight artists portrayed life on campus from the past to the future as they depicted the part of the student, professor, and other scientists in our society. The highlight of the evening was the display of student talent in the making of our future, and the outstanding students of Tri-Beta who are trying to make the future now.

A talent show was presented, a dance and a skit. There were also some surprising stunts performed by the students. The audience thoroughly enjoyed the show and was amazed at the student's ability.

Several of the faculty members are relating during a free period in the comfort of Joyce Hall.

Faculty ‘Home Away From Home’ Features Maid’s Service, Holiday Parties, Dining Room

By JANET MONTY

Joyce Hall was created in 1934 as a memorial to Edward & Joyce Hayes. Probably unknown to students, the building is located adjacent to Swan Hall.

There are about three people who call this dormitory “home.” These are Winston students and members of the administration. They live in the building and participate in campus life.

The decoration of Joyce Hall is simple yet comfortable. The furniture is made of wood and the walls are painted in soft pastel colors. The rooms are small but inviting, with personal touches such as artwork and plants.

The students who live in Joyce Hall are happy with their lives there. They enjoy the closeness to the rest of the campus and the sense of community that comes with living in a small dormitory.

The daily routine begins at 7:30 am with breakfast in the dining room. The menu varies from day to day, offering a variety of choices. Lunch is served at 11:30 am and dinner at 5:30 pm. The food is prepared by professional chefs and is delicious. Students can also order take-out from local restaurants if they wish.

The hall is clean and well-maintained, with regular cleaning by the staff. The maintenance staff is available 24/7 to attend to any issues that may arise. The hall is secure and staffed with trained personnel.

The Residence Hall Coordinator is always available for any concerns or problems that may arise. Students feel safe and supported in their living environment.

Overall, Joyce Hall is a wonderful place to live. The students who live there are happy and content. They enjoy the close-knit community that exists in the small dormitory and the convenience of being close to everything on campus.
Social Eyes

The model eyes are on the sunglasses this week as they wind up their week of fun and filters. It started with a big bang last Saturday night when they crashed into the comic of the "Holiday muck-" from Newberry. Their billboard theme was carried out through the week. These portion of the theme droned as if billboards, and three of the four filters, with the week lag and side silhouettes were patches alike.

On Saturday the sophomore entertained the seniors with a party in the gym.

Evenings

Conventions

Probably the highlight of many Winthrop students' week was the fall convention and fellowship, as well as the spiritual emphasis, were some sixty-five B.U.E. members who attended the conference - some each school attended the same. Besides the B.U.E. conference, the state F.F.A. conference was represented by ten Winthrop students.

Members of the 50 and 70 stronger Order began their big weekend on Saturday afternoon when the group was honored in the coffee of President and Mrs. Sin in their home. Saturday night the Better Or- orders gathered in Ketchell Hall for an informal party headquarters at Mrs. Rinkin's Tea Room was opened Sunday morning. Following the formal luncheon, church, and dinner in the dining room, they cli- mated their weekend of social events with after-dinner coffee in North Carolina.

Volunteer Peace

Last week the girls in Barney girl Monday for a television party which run until 11:30. As each girl arrived, they entered into the spirit of the party for playing a game "Place the Commander." Cards and cookies were served during the interlude.

All the parties attended to make the students from the worry of admission.

Winthrop Student Discovers Opportunities For Mission Work At Tennesse Meeting

By BETTY RODGERS

Full of fresh enthusiasms about the opportunities in Christian service for today's young people are Joyce Sullivan, having recently made a trip to Furman College for Christian Workers in North Carolina, October 31st.

The object was a Masonic Room Service Party arranged by the North Carolina Woman's Council on Christian Workers. In the Church C.L.D. Church in Edisto Beach, Sullivan was one of the speakers, interested in Church related events. From South Carolina, Joanne went Joyce Sullivan, Junior at Winthrop, and Barbara Cour- tney, Junior at Columbia College.

The Winthrop faculty learned that the week had been both helpful and enervating, and most likely the idea is to be more, rather than to be too much.

Philip Sullivan, who had planned to "acquire" her from Chapel Now is not a common occurrence. The church was interested in Church related events. From South Carolina, Joanne went Joyce Sullivan, Junior at Winthrop, and Barbara Cour- tney, Junior at Columbia College.
