- She is one of five finalists and needs votes to win at www.recyclemaniacs.org.

Prange's poster

ROCK HILL, S.C. — The 2012 presidential election is over, but the voting doesn't end there. Winthrop University graphic design student Heather Prange is up for national recognition with a poster she created for RecycleMania 2013.

Prange, of Rock Hill, is a finalist in the organization's poster competition and is just votes away from being the winner. Public voting began today, Nov. 8, and closes Thursday, Nov. 15.

Placed over a green background with repeated images of the recycling logo, Prange's poster uses numbers and images to coherently convey the details of RecycleMania's recycling competition, which lasts for eight weeks from Feb. 3-April 12. The graphic contains itself within the outline of a tree.

To vote for Prange's design, visit the website or go through the RecycleMania website at www.recyclemaniacs.org.

RecycleMania is a non-profit organization that promotes and encourages recycling by tapping school spirit. The number of participating schools has grown since 2001, from two schools to more than 600.
