Featured Facts

Several teachers who have never before been known to the student body broke records the first semester.

In a recent check-up, it was found that, aside from the Student Government Association, the class organization, the Y. W. C. A., and the Athletic Department, to which all students belong, and the social clubs, to which a majority of the students belong, there is one club for every 52 girls at Winthrop.

New students and faculty members arriving for the second semester will probably see the campus at its worst. The view is one of bare trees, rain-drenched buildings, and mud.

It's hard to realize the gravity of the flood catastrophe by merely reading about it in the papers. Nothing is so effective for arousing enthusiasm as the radio's appeal from the flood area.

The amplifier in the dining room seems to be affording general satisfaction. Announcements can be made and heard with ease.

Winthrop is not the only college that is very much concerned at present with the large number of freshman failures. Other colleges in the state have the same problem to straighten out.

A number of students were heard to remark that they intend to study during the whole semester. Others agreed, but added that the first week after exams was no time to start.

Contracts For '38 Taylor Signed

As representatives of the junior class, Jean McLauren, class president; Elizabeth Orum, junior editor of The Taylor; and Rose Rudnick, assistant business manager, has signed a contract with the Charlotte Engraving Company and the Observer Printing House to do the engraving and printing of the 1938 Taylor.

The junior class was advised to sign the contract by Mr. Alexander Graham, burser of the college, Mary Ellis, editor of the 1937 Taylor, and Thelma McAlpine, business manager, in order to take advantage of the 5 per cent discount offered by both companies.

WINSLOW AND DANCERS APPEAR

Company Of Five To Give Program Here March First

ARTIST COURSE NUMBER

Group To Substitute For Ruth Page And Bentley Stone

Miriam Winslow and her Dancers have been engaged to appear here on March 1 as a substitute for Ruth Page and Bentley Stone, who were scheduled for a performance February 5 as a regular Artist Course number, but who are unable to fulfill their contract.

Miriam Winslow's company includes four dancers: Olive Converse, Mary Hughes, Jacqueline McGrath, and Nancy Miner, and a pianist, Mary Campbell.

This group of dancers appeared recently at a New York theater, along with the Joe Company, Truth School, and the Monte Carlo Ballet Russes, the latter of which appeared at Winthrop last March.

Miriam Winslow's dances have attracted particular attention since she appeared.

The Rev. Mrs. Taylor made this comment about her dance performances: "Her grace and the fresh appeal of her original dances made her favorite instantly, and she was recalled for hours and again."

YOUR HELP NEEDED

"Over 80,000 Made Homeless By Flood"—"Ohio River 79 Feet Deep"—"Pittsburgh's Golden Triangle Flooded"—"Cincinnati, Fire Follows Flood"—

Thus do the headlines scream out at us from the Ohio Valley where the flood continues to rage.

Daily we read these head-lines and the tragic stories that tell of the disastrous results of the high waters. Daily we comment on how bad the situation is, and how thankful we are that South Carolina has not endured a similar tragedy.

The Student Government Association is giving us a chance to aid those suffering from the flood. It has placed in each dormitory a box for contributions to the work of the Red Cross in relieving the stricken areas.

If you wish to help the Red Cross combat disease, hunger, cold, and homelessness, place your contribution in the dormitory box at once.

TOWARD INTELLIGENT VOTING

Within the next two months, students will again choose their leaders for another year.

Perhaps it seems a little early to be speaking of elections. But now is the time to consider the merits of these students likely to be leaders. Don't wait until election week or election day to determine the qualifications of your fellow students.

Begin now to analyze the students who will most probably be nominated for offices, or the students you would like to see in office. Decide whether or not they fulfill the requirements for your next leaders. Determine within the coming weeks whether they have initiative, dependability, adaptability, and perseverance. Do they do the work of their present offices to the best of their ability, or do they let it drag by in a slip-shod fashion?

Study carefully now the characteristics and habits of your fellow students, so that you may vote intelligently when the election comes.

TELL US WHY

Our parents stopped many years ago giving us orders that we were expected to obey without question. They explain why they wish a certain thing done and credit us with the intelligence to understand their point of view.

Why can't the same be true in the administration of college rules?

Too often the student who makes some request is met with a flat "No!" and nothing further by way of explanation. And the resentment the student naturally feels is entirely unnecessary.

Mutual understanding, not blind obedience, is necessary if the students are to advance with the administration.

WHAT ACTIVITIES?

To the question "Shall I participate in extra-curricular activities?" most college students answer "Yes". But "What extra-curricular activities?" is a question that is a major problem of many.

Some students join every club, society, and team they can enter in order to appear well-rounded. Consequently the majority of students of this type have so many interests that they can contribute little or nothing to any one activity.

On the other hand, there are students who limit themselves to one phase of campus life. They give much to the club to which they belong, but they thereby narrow their own point of view.

What questions, therefore, should we ask ourselves in trying to solve the problem of extra-curricular activities?

"Am I interested in this activity or am I joining just to be joining?" is probably the first thing to be considered. Other questions may well be: Does this activity interfere with the work—both curricular and extra-curricular—that I am now doing? Can I afford the dues? Can I make a contribution to the activity or shall I be just another piece of dead timber? Can this club give anything to me?

These are the questions we need to face. To wisely answer them means to find a satisfactory solution of the problem of "What extra-curricular activity?"

The Davidsonian calls the University of Michigan the ideal college because there all students who attend school dances are exempt from all classes from 2 P. M. the afternoon preceding till 1 A. M. the morning following such events.

Along with bidding the fond farewell to the aforementioned lady it seems quite appropriate to welcome the newcomer who will fill in, Miss Betty Clague, of Milwaukee, Wis., who has recently been studying at Teacher's College, Columbia University, and will be the addition to the P. E. staff. She will teach activity courses—gymnastics, archery, recreational sports—one theory course in Playground and coach basketball.

Hats off to Miss Clague! She seems to be an excellent teacher and always several excellent numbers. The pending question is: "Why not take some of the best and compile a book?" Such would take lots of hard work and money, but in the long run would be well worth the time and money. The banquet to Miss Walker—It's over.

"Exception from exams if a specified average was attained might be one solution to the problem. I feel sure that the teachers as well as the pupils would heartily approve of the complete elimination of exams in the sense that we now know them. Each instructor could have his own method of measuring a student."

Approximately 200 accounts have been carried in the bank during December. The total amount of $20,000 has been handled during the month. The average amount handled per month is approximately $2,000. A large per cent of the money does not belong to individual student accounts, but to accounts of faculty members and organizations. The average student account runs around $10.

The student bank is operated without profit. It has no capital, no surplus, pays no interest, and issues no monthly statement.

JUST LINES

Dear Mother,

To live up to my reputation of originality I think I'm not even mentioning how relieved I am that I turned out over or the new set I'm turning over.

Food and rain have been continual for the past three weeks. They've both begun to pall. All food, that is, except the imaginary breaded veal cutlets, down in tomato sauce, or a juicy streak all brown and sizzling, or maybe a tender piece of roast beef and some mashed potatoes—with no lumps. Then there is the oh, well, it's no use.

Oh, but about the report that you'll be getting soon. Just take one hasty glance at it and forget that I was ever the administrator of my class in high school. Or before still, when I was the president of the port! But since I've resolved to avoid trifles in this letter we'd avoid trifles, too.

The post office is still my favorite stamping ground (inside the post), but as I've dropped all my correspondence except two my mother has begun to pester dust. You see I've just read an editorial insisting that one of the main causes for college failures is puppy love. So from now on, I'm writing just to you and I'm expecting your answer to keep my box full.

Love, SALLY.

One Minute Interview

Helen Perrin, senior from Union, expresses her opinion on exams:

"What do you think of exams at Winthrop?"

"I think it's too bad that exams seem to miss their true purpose. Instead of being a kind of evaluation of a course, they have come to be something that all of us dread, and most of us fear for. We start off with a conglomeration of facts which we forget as soon as the exam is over."

"Exception from exams if a specified average was attained might be one solution to the problem. I feel sure that the teachers as well as the pupils would heartily approve of the complete elimination of exams in the sense that we now know them. Each instructor could have his own method of measuring a student."

Winthrop Out In The Wide Wide World

"Look at Winthrop! Don't you look cute?" Winthrop is up—up always does that when you look cute when we all got dressed up. She and Winthrop is cute."

"Oh look at that boy down at the end of the line! No, the one sitting next to him can't be him? He looks just like Frankenstein. He really is fascinating, he doesn't have a chin, but it wouldn't do him much good—look at his pop eyes. I've been watching him at least twenty minutes and he hasn't cracked a smile yet."

"Where is the boy selling Dope? Did you know that they charge ten cents for pop corn here? Winthrop just bought some. Look how funny the people look turning back from side to side so they can see."

"Look, doesn't Winthrop look cute!"

"Isn't he British—looking though? I always did love the British. I hope that he takes a little vacation. His white friends are tailored. They must have been brought in England. His fit better than any of the others, don't they?"

"Get that girl looks like an ad for something, doesn't she?"

"Yeah, for a soufflé-bomb."

"I see the Physical Ed teachers way up there on the top row. They certainly are dressed up. They look good, don't they?"

"If you had to marry one of them, which one would you choose? I think that all of them are married already, except Barnes—and he may be married too."

"Y'all, Frankenstein just smiled."

"Yeah, can't they play tennis? What form?"

"Come on—we're going back to school. I know all the time that Vines beat Perry. Perry is good, of course, but now I could see that Vines could win as soon as the match began."

Wheeler's Give Party For Class

Baby Marcus Wheeler, Dr. and Mrs. Paul M. Wheeler, and Grandmother Wheeler entertained members of Wheeler's poetry class with a party, recently, at their home on Oakland Avenue.

Seven exhibits were shown to the guests by Dr. Wheeler. Exhibits A, B, and C were Baby, Mother, and Grandmother Wheeler. Other exhibits consisted of a system of loud speakers installed in every room on the house through which Dr. Wheeler can talk or listen to the radio; the first Christmas tree ever to be decorated with lights; a Christmas tree with a special kind of lighting by which the lights can be made bright or dim; and a new radio-Victrola which furnished the music.

Mrs. Wheeler served fruit juice, cakes, candy, and nuts to the guests, who were Agnes Smiley, Ruby Latham, Caroline Hodges, Sara Bishop, and Lilia Sitten. Mary Louise Green was the only member of the class who was unable to attend the party.

Exams And Time And Tide Wait For No Man

Time and tide wait for no man, and neither do exams, so, at least, one Whitthrop freshman discovered.

Thinking that she had all day in which to study for her literary exam, she went to the front door, called to her mother to let her know she was home, and went to visit her friends. Meeting a second freshman hurrying to exams, the natural question was "What exam have you?"

The answer, "Literary science, of course. You are not going to take the exam? It is this morning you know?"

The freshman hadn't known, but the 8:35 bell was ringing. The exam wouldn't wait. Grabbing a blue book, the freshman rushed with her friend to the exam room.

Upchilsterer Repairs College Furniture

Have students who wonder down into main building seen the workshop that has been set up there?

Mr. Habel, the man of the shovelfaced, lumber-faced man who handles the hammer. He has been employed for the task of making the furniture in the dormitories more respectable.

When asked to estimate how many chairs he covered a day, Mr. Habel replied that it depended on the type of chair. It appears that the more comfortable the piece of furniture, the more stuffing it needs, and therefore the more difficult it is to cover.

In response to this anticipated future, the upholsterer has set his ingenuity, upholstering materials, evergreen, natal, sofa, hammer string, wire, and sometimes coat-hangers.

"Bat's" Cave To Be Destroyed

The search for beauty will cause the destruction of Whitthrop traditional "bat's cave" below the arch of the side library steps, announced C. A. McCall, college business manager.

This "cave" is to be cleared in with white stones to about 4 feet from the exterior. A stone fountain will be built in front of the archway. The terrace is to be graded down, and a flagstone walk will lead to the fountain. On either side of the fountain, shrubbery will be planted.

Salesmen From Coal to Crackers Accost Bursar

"Salesmen, representing everything from coal to crackers come to this office on an average of ten a day," said Mr. Alex Graham, bursar.

Mr. Graham said salesmen, but corn, chemicals, maltflour, cereals, arts courses, districtants, furniture books, radios, fertilizers, picture shows, and anything else used by the college are advertised by salesmen, each of whom Mr. Graham interviews in his "come again" manner; while his secretary, Mrs. Fawell (Miss Louise Peace) smilingly looks on over her typewriter.

"Students, too, must like to come to this office," commented the bursar.

Student bank and loan funds are operated and administered under the direction of the bursar. All student activities, budgets, allowances, and audits are managed through this office. "Funds are purchased by the bursar to chock-

After That Mr. Graham

There is an Alexander Graham Auditorium in Charlotte.

There is a Mr. Alexander Graham at Whitthrop.

Now what does this add up to? Here are the facts: now you do the figuring.

In answer to the question put before Mr. Graham:

"Are you the Alexander Graham that Alexander Graham Memorial was named after? Or was he a relative of yours?" Mr. Graham said:

"Well, I can say 'yes' to either one of those questions, but I do hope to be named after (pen)

that Mr. Graham."
