Family Committees will be busy day the next ten days making final arrangements for Parent's Day. Last year the day was considered very successful. This year it should be even more so, especially if each freshman and senior "gets behind" her parents and adds her invitation to that of the committee.

In the past we have found it rather difficult to get personal items about faculty activities. This week we're starting a new faculty column. When a reporter comes to us in the future, let's add your modesty, and tell her that you made a speech at the Black Club, attended a Major Convention, or have had a piece of poetry published in the Good Magazine. We're interested in what you're doing. Won't you tell us about it?

Year Round April Showers Are Hooked Up On Campus

BY DOROTHY HAIR

April showers this year, though to their advantage, have come to Winthrop to add to its already overhanging lot. Does that sound definitely dark? Then consider that a crew of men is now working on the installation of the apparatus, and that when completed, the total amount expended will have been between $40,000 and $50,000. You guessed it—40 to 50 more April showers.

The kitchen and dining room have served it 10 years ago. Now and then the five residence halls, the library, and the administration building follow suit with these fire precautions that pull the insurance rate down to that of a modern fireproof building.

Students have eagerly debated the possibility of Winthrop's becoming a co-educational school, but still they sleep and giggle when they see one of those "sprinklers" men trailing down halls measuring everything in sight.

Soon a 20,000 gallon tank will grace back campus to hold a water reserve for the strategic moment. The pipes so much evidence are connected with that tank. Attached to the pipes are sprinklers that will give up to twenty showers simultaneously.

The students this year are engaged on the basis of a sport dress to keep their tempers and temperates fairly cool, or they'll have dampened spirits.

North dormitory was equipped during spring holidays, and the entire job will be finished in approximately three more months. Then perhaps Winthrop will be turned into a "Sportsman's Inn," because "April showers bring May flowers."

FRIDAY, APRIL 9, 1937

CONGRATULATIONS, U. S. C.

Winthrop sends its congratulations to a sister institution, the University of South Carolina, upon the inauguration of Dr. J. Rion McKissick as president.

Dr. McKissick, a former editor, and a well-known Southern educator, has proved his ability and popularity as a university president in the nine months he has been serving in that capacity since the retirement of Dr. L. T. Baker.

For Dr. McKissick and the University of South Carolina, Winthrop sincerely wishes a most successful future.

TO THE GRAND EASTERN DELEGATES!

Although you, the delegates to the first annual Grand Eastern Tournament, have been welcome and re-welcomed to our campus by the time, The Johnsonian takes this opportunity to say it again, in behalf of the student body: "We are glad you are here."

We have entertained and been entertained by conferences and tournaments on the campus often. We enjoy exchanging our views and ideas with students from other colleges and states.

So we say sincerely: to those who have been here before, "We're glad to have you back"; to those who are here for the first time, "We hope you like us well enough to visit us again."

NEW BUILDINGS FOR WINTHROP?

Last week the state Senate passed a $380,000 bill to construct a new auditorium and home economics building at Winthrop. As The Johnsonian goes to press, this bill has not been acted upon by the House of Representatives.

Winthrop has needed these buildings a long time. The state has a chance to provide them now for 55 per cent of their cost. The $380,000 is not the total cost of the building in question. The federal government will add $270,000 to this amount from WPA funds, making a total of $650,000 available for the two buildings.

The need for the auditorium is well-known. The present auditorium has a seating capacity of 1,850, while the enrollment at Winthrop is 1,850. The only reason the entire student body and faculty can attend the weekly assembly exercises at one time is that about 75 students in chapel choir are seated on the stage.

Besides the need for an auditorium for assembly, Winthrop needs more seating capacity and better facilities for the cultural entertainments. Last year at the Monte Carlo Ballet Russes, not only were visitors (some even from out of town) seated in chairs placed in the aisles, but many were turned away at the door. The same thing happened this year when the Vienna Choir Boys appeared.

The need for a home economics building is equally as great.

Winthrop is one of the outstanding teacher training schools in the South. It is the only state-supported school training home economics teachers and workers. Yet Winthrop's equipment is so poor that many of her graduates go into high schools of that state and find better-equipped laboratories.

We have listed only a few of the reasons Winthrop needs a new auditorium and home economics building. Space forbids elaborating on the subject.

Years ago Winthrop assumed her role as a leader in the field of education. She will have difficulty in maintaining this position if her facilities are out-moded and inadequate.

IN APPRECIATION

The staff of The Johnsonian wishes to take this opportunity to express its appreciation for the aid rendered by the alumnae in the distribution of the special edition of The Johnsonian. Four thousand two hundred and twenty-eight copies of this edition were sent to alumnae to be distributed to the senior high school girls of the state.

We are especially grateful to Miss Leila Russell, alumna executive secretary, for her help in getting this issue distributed.

The National Symphony Orchestra which will be called the National Symphony Orchestra. The additional title was suggested when the members of the orchestra so graciously offered to share their supper with several tables of girls in the new dining hall.

"But that is for you!" said a student when a member of the orchestra gave her the platter of chicken.

"Yes, but we have all been served," replied the food-sharer.

JUST LINES

Dear Mother,

It's early in the morning before anyone else in the dormitory has even thought of awakening. The only other things up are the birds chirping outside the window. I could be past new-about the spring, the trees, and the birds—but I'll refrain.

The only news about the place is that the new road is completed, and the sprinkler system is being installed.

Except for the new white shoes and a few lonely cases of flu, there aren't any visible signs of the spring holidays. The only ones affected at all are the teachers. They're in all prime shape. One sprang a ten on us the first day we got back. That's the one point in favor of abolishing holidays. They make the teachers too ready for anything.

Love, SALLY.

Superstitious Students

Cut Bananas Carefully

"It's written in the stars."

Well, not really, but it is hideous bananas. At least that's what most Winthrop students seem to think.

When bananas are served at breakfast, students carefully cut the end from their bananas and if there is a "Y", formed by the stem, she feels sure that she will receive a letter that day. If there is a perfect "O", there will be no letter.

Judging by the persistent efforts of so many students, it seems that bananas never lie.

Opportunities for Students of Psychology

BY DR. W. W. BOEKER

1. Psychology offers the best possible training for living the fullest life that is possible. It does this by contributing to a better understanding of self and others.

2. Psychology gives a knowledge of the laws of learning through the experimental technique. This holds true in every level of formal educational experience.

3. A thorough knowledge of psychology facilitates the learning of all the professions, such as teaching, commerce, engineering, law, medicine, etc. Psychology accomplishes this through its analysis of the profession into its elements, and through an exposition of the best methods of learning the specific subject matter at hand.

4. In the care of the young child, the techniques and principles of psychology enables parents, nurses, and teachers to understand the child better, and to administer to the mental and physical needs of the child.

5. Psychology, especially through the branch of social psychology, contributes to a betterment of the social order through an understanding of the psychological principles governing social relations.

6. Psychology offers a program for a better mental health of the individual. Such a program serves to check the trends that are being made at present by the nervous and the insomniacs.

7. Psychology contributes to a better understanding of such propaganda as that which plunged the United States into the World War, and makes possible such neutrality as many countries are preserving toward the present Spanish civil war. Propaganda loses much of its appeal when it is recognized as propaganda.

WINTHROP DAY BY DAY

Diary: Up and to church, save breakfast and the usual lovely spring weather. Discovering such a gloomy Sunday, decided "would be rather nice to make it the typical day of rest—spend all afternoon reading works of Thomas Hardy—at intervals between irrepressible naps and yawns."

Editorial Opinion: Incidentally, Thomas Hardy's manner of treating minute details in his "Far From the Madding Crowd" is terrible.

Post Paragraph: It seems impossible to retain from heartily condemning the sudden out-cry of "oh" and "ah" as the above begin on Saturday night. What is it—a more feminine impulse, pleasant shock, or over-enthusiasm? Regardless, it is annoying to the spectator's ear.

Information: Bill: According to latest magazine in doctors waiting room, business is now good and will better in 1937.

Brushed and Scrubbed Look: Fat Pat!

Personal nomination for most dignified manner of getting places—that of Jean MacLaren.

Look: Misses Margaret Blanton and Emily Scott.

Hapologie: Jane Cooper was once an orchestra leader at Wilmington, N. C., where she organized a band called "Horsey" Cooper and Her Mules—(Clever, what?)—Ruth Snelling, looking surprisingly like a Japanese, tells a her acquaintance that she is just that—and they immediately fall for it.

Thought: While Strutting: If Mr. Gore is as good at tennis as he is at violin, then Fred Perry had better look to his laurels!—The immortal will be automobile on back roads between Scranton and Main building of Agnes Irwin—Wonder if the time between Spring holidays and Commencement is really as long as it is?

Miss Edith Fraser Speaks In Assembly

Author of "Bay Leaves" Urges Students to "Maintain Their Heritage"

Miss Edith Fraser, graduate of Winthrop College in 1913 and author of the volume of poems, "Bay Leaves" (1928), addressed the Winthrop student body at Chapel Wednesday on "Maintaining Our Heritage."

Miss Fraser asserted that each individual has a heritage which should be guarded carefully. She stressed the value of observing nature and allowing thoughts of it to beauty codes of living.

"It is a healthy habit to look consciously for beauty each day. It draws us nearer to the highest thing," said Miss Fraser.

Miss Fraser stated that our heritage is the sum of the things we inherit, a friendship, a sense of spirituality, a knowledge of what unselfish love is, and joy derived from working.

In conclusion Miss Fraser read one of her recent poems.

College Gardener Advises Education Before Marriage

BY LOUISE FAYE

"Yes, Misses, I like all the Winthrop girls and teachers I've seen. If they come to me for flowers, I give them just as many as I can. I don't know any names, but I do know lots of faces."

Robert Buchanan, Winthrop's negro horticulturist, leaning against his bicycle in front of the Winthrop greenhouse, his kingdom for over twenty years, confided it was the first time in his life that he had been interviewed.

Mostly he talked about his job first. As a gardener, Robert is in charge of the hothouses and all of the pruning and cutting of campus shrubs. He calls himself the "horticultural man" and loves his work. He tells his story:

"Yes, I'd rather work with plants outdoors than anything else I know. And if I had to choose one plant I'd say azalea."

YES AT Winthrop

"When I first came to Winthrop twenty-three years ago next September, I was a dirtwater and had $4.50 a week. Then for two years I worked at the Winthrop Inn at the age of 15, he has been going regularly to Sunday school, morning service, and evening worship. As for education, he wants all of his children to go to high school; whether they go farther or not will be left to them."

Robert went on to say that his mother, three small children, and one grandchild were entirely dependent on him.

In describing his life before he started to work at Winthrop, he said that he was born on August 3, 1894. He was an only child and his mother did not make him go to school. However, when he grew older and realized how much he had missed, he started right in the first grade, despite the teasing of the other boys.

Mariette Kart

"I was in the fourth reader when I got married," he said. "That was on December 1, 1914, so you see if I hadn't got in touch with what I have now, I would have been a very educated man. You can say that my advice to U. S. Winthrop is 'Study.'

When asked about his ideals, he immediately smiled and said that he always tries to follow the Golden Rule.

"If there's anything I don't like more than anything else it's telling lies." Then quickly with a good-humored laugh, "But don't think I'm a George Washington myself."

At present Robert is chairman of the Board of Deacons of the Baptist Church. He is a member of the church at the age of 15, he has been going regularly to Sunday school, morning service, and evening worship. As for education, he wants all of his children to go to high school; whether they go farther or not will be left to them."

In answer to what he thought was the worst thing students did, he replied emphatically, "Well, sometimes they pick flowers from back campus without permission."
