Dean Kate Glenn Hardin wins the banner this week for knowing her Winthrop girls. Instead of giving out an exploit statement concerning the girls before holidays, she posted a cryptic message referring readers to page 22 of the bulletin.

Most readers ignored the suggestion, believing it a gentle hint on uniform. Before the day was almost over, girls in the school capitulated to the demands of her curiosity and avidly looked up the reference, only to find it was a rule about permissible absences.

More about Dr. John B. Hart. He told a group that he was more than a little surprised to find that our judgments of each other are often different so greatly.

Unless we are talking courses that require it, we are all too apt to let current events go by unnoticed.

However, we should strive to remember that there are some very important things occurring every day in every part of the world.

The weekly news review magazine or sections of the Sunday papers are both interesting and concise in their summaries. For to students, the "Reader's Digest" for November has a good symposium on the war in China in case you have neglected it. Plan your time so that you can manage to keep up with the world!

There are 1,400 students at Winthrop and one guess is that at least 1,400 are courteous and courteous thought at all times and in all places; however, the few who are inconsiderate stand out like sore thumbs.

There was one and only one young lady who filed her name at an Artistic corner, but one was too many!

There are only a few who do not stand during chapel for the hymn and prayer but this lack of respect of these few is a reflection on every other member of the student body.

There are only a few girls who show a lack of both dignity and consideration when having parties, but this small handful can easily give the rest of us an unwelcome reputation.

We are willing to let so small a group lower the standards and the appearance of Winthrop?

No Johnstonian Next Week! Because the editors and business managers of The Johnstonian will be attending the South Carolina College Press association meeting at Coler the latter part of next week, there will be no paper October 28.

The best news will come out Legislature Day, November 3, and will be distributed to campus visitors as well as to the regular subscribers.

Federation Completes List of Pledges of Winthrop Social Clubs

Thirteen Additional Clubs Announce New Members

The names of pledges of the social clubs which were not complete in time to make last week's Johnstonian have been submitted to the Federation. This completes the list of new members of Winthrop's 22 social clubs.

One Winthrop's name was omitted from the Lambda Kappa's pledge in last week's write-up.

Beta Womansaker, Evelyn Langford, Margaret Moore, and Dot Crosby's names were given under Lambda Omega Kappa. They are pledges of Lambda Omicron Theta Phi.

The names of the remaining clubs and the students pledging follow: Gamma Kappa: Margaret Roberts, Helen Harman, Gene Fielder, Vernette Ott, Betty Hux, Sumter McWaters, Florence Barber.

Phi Sigma Delta: Catherine McManis, Aggie Rigby, Marie Bethers, Elizabeth Boyd.

College Farmers Grow Office Corn

Several ears of corn are now occupying a window sill in Professor Thomas W. Mott's office. In a few days there will be corn in President Phelps' office, too! Why this sudden "corn-craze"?

Both men have farms in Missouri. Dr. Phelps' farm is in Howard county—Mr. Mott's in Carroll. To settle a dispute over which county raises the best corn samples from both will be compared.

Choose sides and root for your chosen candidate will be announced later.

SPORTS DAYS PLANNED FOR NOVEMBER 13

Invitations Sent To Girls' Colleges In South Carolina

Margie McCreary, athletic association president, has announced plans for a college "sports day" to take place November 13.

Invitations to send students for the occasion have been issued to the following colleges: Clemson, Carolina, O. W. C., Columbia college, Ocker, Lander, Limestone, Anderson, Juniper college, Newberry, Greenville, and The College of Charleston.

"If you have good friends or 'just friends' at any of these colleges, send them a post card and invite them to come stay with you over sports week."

Margie urged in chapel, "because there's going to be real fun at Winthrop's sports day."

Kelly To Go To N. Y.

Registrar To Attend Educational Conference

John O. Kelly, registrar, will attend the sixth annual educational conference in New York City on October 28 and 29.

On October 28, he will meet with a small group of directors of state and regional testing programs. They will hold an all-day conference under the auspices of the committee on measurements and standards of the American Council on Education.

At Winthrop one method of handling student opinion was through a "heretics" bulletin board, as reported by those who were present.

Miss Lea asked as well as answered questions she inquired into student publications, expression of student opinion—and "parlor dates" at Winthrop.

S. C. General Assembly Invited to Winthrop for Legislature Day, Nov. 3

GOVERNOR JOHN H. JOHNSON

Plans for Legislature Day on November 3, have been practically completed, announces Dr. J. P. Kinard, chairman of the Legislature Day committee.

All members of the General Assembly, and their wives; all members of the state executive, legislative, and judicial branches; and all outside either of these classifications, and their wives, have been extended invitations by President Phelps to be guests.

Campus literature will be handed to the guests when they register at a desk in the lobby of the main building. Rousing student officers will be on hand to greet the visitors in touch with any persons on the campus who want to see, before the assembly program in main auditorium at 12 o'clock.

Legislature Day on November 3, could almost be called "Students' Day."

The committee in charge of planning the day has given Winthrop's 1,470 girls a large part in connection with the celebration.

In the first place a class of business English students wrote two letters to every legislator and other invited guests.

Then, student officers will be on hand as guests arrive to put them in connection with any persons they may want to see. Student marshals will usher in the legislators. The One class of students will sing as part of the program. Students will invite the legislators to their tables in the dining room, where students will be hostesses. A student orchestra will play during the meal.

Proctors and marshals, two other student groups, will assist President Phelps in the campus tour that follows the meal.

But then, it must be recalled, the whole thing was planned originally (1) to make the lawmakers better acquainted with their State College for Women, (2) to make the lawmakers better acquainted with the girls in their State, and (3) to make the lawmakers better acquainted with the girls in their State.

The committee headed by Dr. Kinard is making Legislature Day a day for, about, and by Winthrop students.

The program in the main auditorium includes addresses by state officials and a musical program directed by Dr. W. B. Roberts. Invitations to speak at this time have been extended to Governor Johnson.

Students Miss Supper; Duke Psychologist Almost Misses Bus

Charles Edward Stuart, small, dark-haired assistant to Dr. A. B. Rhine, kept twelve Winthrop girls enthralled by tests and discussions of R. E. P. extra sensory perceptions that they even missed supper.

Literally, those who came to see that they even plan to form an organization to make experiments on the Winthrop campus.

Mr. Stuart discussed subjects from T. S. Eliot, of whom, much to his amazement, the twelve Winthrop girls knew nothing; paintings; and especially the portrait of Baby Stuart for whom he was named; hypnosis; and even attempted to hypnotize one student, but without success; and then pulp magazines and mystery books.

He could always pull any story or experience with a new amazing one. In a discussion as to whether "identical twins" appeared in the history, reared in environments of equal culture, and compared after fifteen years would be on the same mental and character level, Mr. Stuart popped up with, "That question interests me immensely, because you see, I am an identical twin!"

Mr. Stuart's viewpoint or "philosophy" of education was to get from students, not listening to others who were more educated than you—that, he said, is more important than mere learning from books.

The uniforms of the students also interested Mr. Stuart—how each girl achieves personality and individuality.

Mining his first bus, Mr. Stuart stayed on to explain to the girls the psychological explanation for that feeling of having been in a strange place before and two people's speaking at the same time or speaking the same words at the same time.

Excited to the door of Johnson hall by eight well-faithful and interested listeners Mr. Stuart dashed out to keep from missing the last bus to Charleston.

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 28, 1937

The Johnsonian wants to merit a reputation for accuracy, thoroughness, and fairness in covering the Winthrop campus. Will you kindly call our attention to any failure to measure up in these three requirements of good journalism?

ACT YOUR AGE IN CHAPEL

So we are young ladies now! Well, one might not suspect it if he judged us by our conduct in chapel.

After all, we go to chapel only once a week and remain for not more than 45 minutes. In view of the fact that we may manage to conduct ourselves admirably in most of our classes all day long for six days a week, it would seem that we could act our ages just this once.

But no—we reserve that seemingly precious time for a last minute cramming for a pop test we're expecting fifth or sixth period. Or we must write a letter to mother for this particular letter just has to go off on the 2 o'clock mail.

Of course, we haven't had time to read in class that very place to read it at leisure. We are not satisfied to merely read it ourselves, but it is absolutely necessary for the friend sitting on the row behind to know about everything in the letter. The resulting whispered conversation, together with the others in process throughout the auditorium, not only prevents those wanting to hear the program from doing so, but to the speaker it sounds like the buzzing of so many bees.

Do we ever sit still? Imagine the speaker's reaction when he looks out upon a sea of 1,469 squirming girls in blue.

Of course we may be exaggerating the situation somewhat. We really don't mean to accuse the entire student body of the misdemeanors of a few. But if we all tried conscientiously to listen to the programs, it would not only be the courteous thing to do, but we would enjoy chapel infinitely more. Our chapel programs are usually excellent, so let's try to improve our conduct, and be ladies.

NEEDED: SHOCK ABSORBERS IN THE DINING ROOM

"I wouldn't talk so loud in the dining room if everybody else didn't," recently commented a bull-sessioner to a group of her friends discussing noise in the dining room.

And she continued, "But I have to talk about my normal speaking voice to make myself heard by others at the table."

At each table in the dining room not presided over by an officer of the college, there are one or more seniors. These seniors, when they sign up for the table, assume the responsibility of maintaining order at the table.

Speaking in a slightly louder than usual voice isn't generally considered a disorderliness. But when 1,469 girls in one hall speak even in a normal voice, the wear and tear on the nervous systems of those in the hall has been abnormally increased.

And for some reason—either excitement or the desire to make an impression—when visitors are being entertained in the dining room, the noise from students' tables is louder than usual.

If we all were to lower our voices, both in pitch and volume, we would not only bear better, but our nervous systems would have more power to absorb other shocks encountered in "college life."

PHILOSOPHY AT WINTHROP

"Who are we? Where are we? What did we come from? Where are we going?" These four Voltairean questions and similar ones may form the subject of second semester philosophy sessions. If a much-discussed course in philosophy is added to the curricula. Such a course would prove a benefit to students interested in both practical self-development and cultural growth, and would indicate a great step forward in the broadening of Winthrop's curricula.

Through the study of philosophy we can get a survey of the great thought of the world from the days of Plato and Socrates, through the early days of Christianity, down to the present. If we understand the thought of a country throughout its history, we are better able to understand its people, their attitudes, and their actions. As a background for the study of morals, politics, history, religion, and literature, philosophy is invaluable.

It deals with the larger meanings behind all human relationships, giving focus and purpose to our thought and action. Everyone has a philosophy of life, for although it is usually unexpressed and often unknown to us, our personal philosophy is one way of doing things, of looking at life, of our acceptance of our viewpoints, strengthen us in our thought, and help us to develop a working philosophy which will endure and be of value to us throughout our lives, in a course which no institution of higher learning should ever leave out of its curriculum.

JUST LINES

Dearest George,

Why haven't you written? I can't understand it, but I want you to know I wouldn't marry you now if you were the last boy on earth.

Furthermore, the only reason I ever considered it is because I was homesick. I've not become any more, I don't even feel like a freshman now.

Everybody says I look like a sophomore at least.

Really, George, I can understand why mother said I was too young to go with you steadily last summer.

Now that I can look back I see that I was a mere child. How I'm so much older—usually, I mean.

You see, it's this way. Before I came off to school I was just fooling around, never having a serious thought. Why last summer all I thought about was dances and dates and you. Now I've found that everything must have a Purpose in Life.

We've been hearing all about the things you must eat, and your Purpose for the future, and really serious things like that on all our chapel programs and in classes and everywhere. I haven't just decided on my Purpose yet. I may decide to be a trained nurse (the case we have a war), but maybe I'll be an actress—I've joined Maquers, you know.

I hate to hurt you by telling you I can't dance any more. I decided it would be kinder to tell you at once rather than to wait till you call even more than you do now.

By the way, I saw Tom last weekend. He said you are having fairly up for Homecoming. Well, I want you to know that I'm really glad. After all, now that we've broken up I think you should go with other girls to help you get over it. Really, just the right one. She's a cute little thing even if she is kindie silly. I guess I shouldn't be so harsh in my comments of her because after all she isn't so mature—just a senior in high school.

I've got to stop writing now and study my French lesson. You are, if I decide to be a singer, I'll have to know several languages.

Goodbye, George, dear. I want you to know I'll always remember you as a very dear friend.

Sincerely,
JUDY.

Manicures and facials are not out of the class of the more elaborate beauties.

Such signs as "Slow—Under Construction" and "Road Closed" give evidence of a thriving building campaign.

Candy shops are almost as numerous as beauty shops. The two tend to produce opposite effects and so keep one another in business. But dog stands generally operate only one night per week and do a good deal of advertising beforehand. Demand is almost always greater than supply.

You see, it's this way. Before I came off to school I was just fooling around, never having a serious thought. Why last summer all I thought about was dances and dates and you. Now I've found that everything must have a Purpose in Life.

We've been hearing all about the things you must eat, and your Purpose for the future, and really serious things like that on all our chapel programs and in classes and everywhere. I haven't just decided on my Purpose yet. I may decide to be a trained nurse (the case we have a war), but maybe I'll be an actress—I've joined Maquers, you know.

I hate to hurt you by telling you I can't dance any more. I decided it would be kinder to tell you at once rather than to wait till you call even more than you do now.

By the way, I saw Tom last weekend. He said you are having fairly up for Homecoming. Well, I want you to know that I'm really glad. After all, now that we've broken up I think you should go with other girls to help you get over it. Really, just the right one. She's a cute little thing even if she is kindie silly. I guess I shouldn't be so harsh in my comments of her because after all she isn't so mature—just a senior in high school.

I've got to stop writing now and study my French lesson. You are, if I decide to be a singer, I'll have to know several languages.

Goodbye, George, dear. I want you to know I'll always remember you as a very dear friend.

Sincerely,
JUDY.

WINTHROP DAY BY DAY

Dearest George,

Why haven't you written? I can't understand it, but I want you to know I wouldn't marry you now if you were the last boy on earth.

Furthermore, the only reason I ever considered it is because I was homesick. I've not become any more, I don't even feel like a freshman now.

Everybody says I look like a sophomore at least.

Really, George, I can understand why mother said I was too young to go with you steadily last summer.

Now that I can look back I see that I was a mere child. How I'm so much older—usually, I mean.

You see, it's this way. Before I came off to school I was just fooling around, never having a serious thought. Why last summer all I thought about was dances and dates and you. Now I've found that everything must have a Purpose in Life.

We've been hearing all about the things you must eat, and your Purpose for the future, and really serious things like that on all our chapel programs and in classes and everywhere. Twelve Music Students Take Part In Recital

Twelve Winthrop college music students were presented in the second weekly recital of the year Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock in music hall auditorium.

The following students participated in the recital: Virginia Purcell of Salisbury, Carolyn Miller of Pomaria, Dorothy Reed of Rock Hill, Margaret Thompson of Rock Hill, Sarah Lee Hughes of Spartanburg.

Guests of Greenville, Frances Elliott of Chester, Rose Wilcox of Marion, Margaret Pant of Anderson, Mary Miller Heath of Chester, Caroline Parham of Laite, and Mary Garner of Union.

Graystone Lodge Scene Of Faculty Stage

Dr. G. O. Wadsworth entertained the men of the faculty at a stag Thursday evening at Graystone Lodge, the country place of the Wadsworths.

As the guests arrived they gathered in the large living room, made particularly cozy with a blazing log fire, and played bingo and sang song songs.

Dinner followed with an informal serving directed by Mrs. Wadsworth. The plates consisted of chicken, rice and gravy, English peas, cold sliced bread with cheese dressing, rolls and coffee.

Attending the stag which was held in honor of Dr. Wadsworth's birthday were: Charles Houston, Dr. E. M. Jernett, Brenda Steiner, Ray A. Furr, E. L. Terry, J. W. McCallin Jr., Frank Greene, Dr. W. O. Kellie, P. E. Harrison, Dr. W. R. Rogers, R. E. Blakeley, Dr. J. P. Kinard, W. T. Claxton, E. W. Noel, O. M. Mitchell, Dr. W. E. Port Jr., J. O. Kelly, J. P. Thompson, Dr. P. M. Wheeler, W. B. Nichols, and Lloyd Bender.

Sophomores In North Entertained At Party

The sophomores staying in North dormitory were entertained Thursday afternoon at an informal party given from 4 until 6 o'clock.

The guests played games, performed stunts and sang songs to gether.

Ice cream and cake were served during the afternoon.

Lilly Rogers and Catherine Jones, members of the social committee of North, were joint hostesses.

"HOBBY SHOW"

Of course the members of the Rock Hill Kiwanis Club invite all of those associated with Winthrop to attend the Hobby Show to be held between 3 and 9 P. M., next Thursday, October 28th, in the basement of St. John's M. E. Church.

From all indications this is going to be a real event, one that everyone should not fail to attend. The Kiwanians want Winthrop folks to join in with them in this movement through their attendance, which, needless to say, Dr. Paul Wheeler of Winthrop's faculty, chairman, and members of the Kiwanis Committee will appreciate.

The "Old Reliable," the Fifth Congressional District's "Rock of Gibraltar," is always glad to use its advertising space for the Johnsonian and for other sources for all worthy movements sponsored by the civic and other good organizations of this community.

New Physician Once Called "Slow-Poke"

The only girl to finish in the medical class of 85 students at the University of Louisville, Dr. Mary Virginia Vogt comes this year as the physician for almost 1500 Winthrop students. She likes the students who she says, have not yet tried playing sick during hard classes as well as she likes being in the South again.

After getting her pre-med and medical courses at the university, Dr. Vogt was interned at the Women's hospital in Philadelphia, where she was associated with the assistant to Dr. Chevrolet Jackson, famous for his tracheotomy, and Dr. Marie Pomard, surgeon, who has been with the Women's hospital for 30 years.

She says that the people up there like "slow-poke" because of her slow and southern movements. "They are so sluggish up north," she states. "Of course the climate has something to do with it, but really, for me there is no place but the South to live."

And Dr. Vogt plans to continue living south of the Mason and Dixon line, even when she's "graduated" from Winthrop. She intends later to do private practice in the field of gynecology.

Dr. Vogt says, however, that she knew she wanted to come to Winthrop from the moment she talked

Winthrop Freshman Wins Blue Lincoln Zephyr

A Winthrop freshman, Room 31, Brascoe dormitory, won a blue Lincoln Zephyr, October 16, at 8:45.

With this startling information, your reporter was all in a dither. She could just as well have been announcing Winthrop's campus and could even visualize her self seated beside the fortunate owner.

She dashed over to the home of Winthrop's freshmen during quiet hour and with the proper permission hung herself up the stairs and into Room 31, interrupting an earnest student who was poring over the composition of an English theme.

"Did you win an automobile?" your reporter shouted.

"Yes," was the calm reply. "Then, for goodness sake, tell me about it!" And your nose was bound, overjoyed with curiosity, sank into the other chair.

One year ago, on the night of October 13, Beth Dingeman, a Port Murray Virginian, attended an automobile show at Newport News.

She was not at all interested, she said, and went to please her enthusiastic companions.

They entered the automobile show just in time to draw a ticket from the box. Miss Dingeman pushed into the crowd of ticket-holders to avail the outcome. A man reached into the box and called out number 17271.

Getting no response, he wrote the numbers on the blackboard. Miss Dingeman, impatient to go, glanced at her ticket—17271. Surprised into dumbness, she could only punch her friend and show him the ticket. He called out the numbers, and now Miss Dingeman owns a 1936 powder-blue Lincoln Zephyr.

She almost didn't come to Winthrop because she hated to leave it at home. For you who are interested, "Lincoln" is locked safely in the Dingeman garage.

Hugo Black In Supreme Court Is Debated At T. S.

"Resolved that Hugo Black is rightfully seated on the Supreme Court" was the query for debate at the Parents Activity league meeting October 15.

The statement was upheld by the government led by Marvin Paris and opposed by the opposition led by Arthur Tharall and Herbert Black. The back benches headed by Harry Strong expressed sentiment on defense for both sides.

The government won the decision by a close vote. The opposition will be replaced by the back benches at the next meeting.

The club decided to debate the United States policy in the Sino-Japanese war at the next meeting.
