Mrs. Strom Thurmond:

Saving The Chimes

BY C.L. HAYES

Mrs. Strom Thurmond met Winthrop students, observed two Family and Child Development classes, and participated in a diabetes workshop during her campus visit November 2.

SGA vice-president Dale Dove was able to meet Mrs. Thurmond and explain the “Save the Chimes” fund drive, Mrs. Thurmond immediately offered to make a donation for the fund drive.

While talking to Dale about the chimes Mrs. Thurmond made the following statements:

“That’s really great. I’m so glad to see the students involved in preservation. It’s very commen­ table. I hope it (the $10,000 donation from her and her husband) will help get com ­ pany support."

Members of a Family Development class under Dr. Joyce Veale, Assistant Professor of Family and Child Development, made a presentation on various crises that can occur in family relationships while Mrs. Thurmond visited. Mrs. Thurmond actively supports diabetic and disabled programs.

In a comment to the class concerning the material presented Mrs. Thurmond said,

“The greatest challenge or participation is to listen to their children. In the handicapped situation the family often experiences much more richness in life and their children feel more valued.” Mrs. Thurmond has been married to Sen.
Thurmond nine years and is the mother of four children, the oldest of whom is six.

Mrs. Thurmond declined to comment of ERA and abortion issues due to their controversial nature and her husband’s involvement in such decisions.

Every year on February 12th, Mrs. Thurmond said that she would vote for the woman rather than the man. Mrs. Thurmond is presently planning to run re-election although the official announcement will come later. When asked about the controversy of the election, Mrs. Thurmond said that her husband never takes an election for granted and he feels the people should vote for the man rather than the party.

As Mrs. Thurmond ran to another appointment she commented that she met her husband at a square dance and he still runs circles around her and his staff.

Plum Hollow Returns

If bluegrass or country rock your type of music? Do you enjoy listening to a good band, in a packed room, with people standing on chairs and tables, (at least sometimes)?

Or do you like to just drink been, to listen to good music, and do a little h-i-r m wing? If you do, then downstairs Dinkins will be your place to be tomorrow, Wednesday, and Thursday.

Plum Hollow will be playing at ATS those nights. And, judging from last year’s crowd, and the rave reviews, you’d better get there only to get a seat.

A lot of people obviously like Plum Hollow, because they’ve been asked to repeat their three-night stand again this year.

They’ve been at Winthrop
since this year, at the freshmen picnic. When they play in Charlotte, a lot of Rock Hillians and Winthropians go to see them. So, if you enjoy a GOOD time, then come out this year on one of three nights, or if you’re a real fan, all three nights.

If you haven't taken "Environmenal Man" up here at W.C. you should. You might learn something. However, that's not the point...

I took the course recently. One idea, which I think should remain imprinted in my mind forever. Hopefully, it will affect us all.

One day, the prof. asked two questions. The first was about visibility and the second was about the cleanliness of the ocean.

The prof. informed us that the majority of the WIndthrop population desires and needs in an effort to serve the students, faculty, and staff of Winthrop more completely. TJ says that all members of the Winthrop community answer the following questions. Your response WILL make a better student newspaper.

TJ asks about the visibility, and the cleanliness of the ocean. As the prof. pointed out, the majority of the WIndthrop population desires and needs an effort to serve the students, faculty, and staff of Winthrop more completely.

Well, I see from the daily papers these past few months that the axe grinders are back in business once more, sharpening the blades of the friendly executioners, making haste for the fresh crop of bloodthirsty offenders who've been conveniently immobilized for the express purpose of muzzling it to our Judeo-Christian sense of moral outrage can be duly satisfied. Isn't it reassuring to know that in a land beset by larceny, rape, murder, theft, and all that, there are some ever-present coterie of self-appointed guardians in which can make such profound judgements as who shall live and who shall die, saving the rest of us from the ugly task.

Never mind that these smug, moral exemplars fly in the face of biblical precept, that they are so fond of quoting and do judge lest they be judged and DO cast the first stone and DO kill in the name of God, justice and effective penology. Never mind that statistically only 70% of those executed over the years and on death row presently are non-white (you might point out that these minorities, they do love to kill each other). Never mind that statistically only 70% of those executed over the years and on death row presently are non-white (you might point out that these minorities, they do love to kill each other). Never mind that statistically only 70% of those executed over the years and on death row presently are non-white (you might point out that these minorities, they do love to kill each other).

It is statistically supportive (F.B.I. and National Bureau of Crime Statistics figures) that about 85% of all murders are committed by persons under the age of fourteen. I remember remembering with delight (I'm too old to do that) that in one specific plan during the course of much of this remembrance (STRANGE delight) of a more recent plan, men could care less about the law since they are not rational creatures (I think they would have caught it in the first place), drunks who are pissed-off in the extreme at some loved one (the preponderance of homicides are in emotional, lethal and incapable of weighing alternatives and consequences, professional hit men are paid to take chances (and are seldom caught), the sighted, unscrupulous, amoralist calculates and rights his chances until he finds (like a pro) the best way to do the job without getting caught. In the final analysis, the perfect murder is one where all the crime is finally committed, the potential killer is the threat of a life behind bars? None of us here can say for sure whether your answer would find him both helpless and contemplative. Why do we think the threat of death would work? I'm not asking who the potential killer is, I'm asking who the potential killer is and I'm asking who the potential killer is. None of us here can say for sure whether your answer would find him both helpless and contemplative.

There is a cure for this (that's right, that's me). Actually, there are two cures, but one isn't really a cure, it's more like an avoidance reaction--or lack of reaction. First, you can quit saying hello, in which case, you will lose your timing for 'hellos', only to have the 'hellos' return to you as you're walking to class and YOU WILL BE the ones who will suffer from this rejection. The second solution is to loosen up your lips a little and learn how to let yourself go. By the way... This is not a personal appeal for a hello. It is a hint that you do not have to go through with every little thing about saying, "Hi." It whets your appetite for a little more a little more; it teaches you to enjoy the 'hello' to someone who hasn't even read this article, and I believe money, that eventually that same hello will pan from them, through several other sets of masks, and end up being given to me anyway. Not only will you have given a much needed 'hello' to someone--you will probably also have given them a smile. 'Hello's been been proven to lead to smiles--and smiles, well, they lead to a pleasant future.

To those of you who have been following the adventures of Phineas--he'll be back. Mean--well, they lead to a pleasant future. Say hello in there....

Running Up: VC
(CPS) - Vitamin C has been acknowledged to cure everything, but are doctors going too far when they include heroin addiction? Dr. Alfred F. Libby, who pioneered the theory of orthomolecular medicine (the use of vitamins to cure disease) thinks not. Libby claims he has used vitamin therapy on addicts at his Califf clinic and has had complete success.

Libby's most startling claim is that the addict can't get high after receiving a massive dose of the vitamin. Vitamin C detoxifies the heroin. The appetite returns in a few days and a feeling of well being as well. Addicts report few of the discomforts of withdrawal or methadone accompanying the vitamin cure.

Another voice in favor of the vitamin cure is Dr. Linus Pauling, two time Noble Price Winner. "I'd perhaps be a little cautious in saying that large quantities of sodium ascorbate can detoxify heroin immediately, but I think there's no doubt that very large doses of vitamin C will relieve addiction."

Living Together: Not All Moonlight and Roses

BY HELEN CORDES

(CPS) - In 1968, a Barnard College sociologist publicly stated that she was living with a man she wasn't married to. She probably wished she hadn't said "last." She was nearly expelled.

Today an announcement of "living together" would scarcely cause a ripple on any campus. Unmarried student couples make up a large percentage of the nation's nearly one million cohabiting couples, and few colleges still retain rules forbidding "living in sin."

But whereas your college may not care if you're married, to some it will make a lot of difference. You may not be able to rent or buy a house as easily as married couples. Your joint auto, homeowners' or renters' insurance may be higher. In case of a split-up, state property rights laws don't cover the unmarried couple.

On top of that, you might be a criminal. Although every state enforces laws forbidding cohabitation (shading a residence and having sexual relations with a person of the opposite sex), in 20 states and could carry a fine as high as $500 and a year in jail, as in Wisconsin.

In some states, all sexual activity, gay or straight, between consenting adults is legal. In other states, where cohabitation laws have been repealed, sodomy and adultery laws can still affect unmarried couples. There are then convictions under all these statutes in the last five years.

Most likely, though, no one will arrest you for not having a marriage certificate. But you can get into a lot of extra hassles and planning in such areas as Renting a house or apartment. Not so long ago, two names on the mailbox meant automatic eviction. Now evictions are more the exception than the rule, although there are few cases specifically forbidding it. City ordinances forbidding discrimination seem to getting voted down as soon as they are introduced (remember Dade County) so there may be no official channels to pursue in event of discrimination - but not court action.

Buying a house. Banks often refuse to allow unmarrieds to combine their incomes when making a credit application for the purchase of a house, judging their relationship to be too unstable. You might have to sign the loan in one person's name, and sign a separate contract as a joint purchaser. Check with every bank on the wording.

Getting insured. Some companies writing auto, homeowners' and renters' insurance automatically get unmarried couples into a higher risk category. You'll have to shop around for companies.

bers in the case of a problem, Schneider said.

Riff-Raff-t On The Nantahala

Special To The Johnsonian
By Paul Varga

We were scarped and sometimes bowled under by trees, We were knocked into the ice-cold river by a “hy-" dieutis" (whatever that is). We splashed by freezing cold, somehow wet,都 killed us. We were doused and drenched until our waders were hoarse. For three solid hours we paddled, paddled... and sneaked into a little rest every now and then. Three to five of us were grouped together in different floating modules that easily filled up with water and soon had taken on names such as “the Andrea Doria" and "the Titanic." At the end of our exploits we were sore, exhausted and asserted at least getting a cold, probably pneumonia.

But, oh did we have a good time. Better said - we loved it. Whittier rafting is a fabulous experience. It involves you, some choice friends and nature. And is not that part of what it's all about.

How to convince Mom and Dad to buy you a pre-paid Trailways ticket home

Check boxes, clip out, mail to parents.

Dear Mom and Dad,

Things are swell here at college except, of course, the food, which is so bad that I’m down to 91 lbs. living on salted water. A sending samples to the biology lab. I’m hoping you’ll buy me a prepaid Trailways ticket home to get a decent meal.

Dad, next time we get together, I want to tell you about my part-time job how I suddenly realized what a truly wise and magnanimous fellow you are where I left your car last New Year’s Eve. thanks for making this trip possible with a prepaid Trailways ticket.

I also need some advice on. a personal matter my backhand where one can hire decent servants these days how to separate you from a few bucks for a prepaid Trailways ticket.

Got to sign off now and go to class. I pick the ticket up here to the Trailways station to see if anyone sent me a prepaid ticket to get out of here for the weekend.

Love,

P.S. Just go to the Trailways station and pay for my ticket, tell them who it’s for and where I am. I pick the ticket up here when I go to catch the bus.

Creamer, Feemster Lead
Eagles Past USC-A

BY DAVE BURRAGE

The WC Eagles men's varsity basketball team entertained USC-Alabama in a scrimmage game here Tuesday, November 1st and booked impressive following three twenty minute quarters. WC outscored the visitors 61-45 and 87-54 in the first two quarters and the two teams tied 20-20 in the third quarter.

Leading the way for the Eagles were 6'10 Donnie Creamer and former York star Carl Feemster with 24 and 18 points, respectively. Gerald MacAfee and Doug Schmeckl added 12 points apiece and Dave Hampton had 10. Jim Gibson led all -bounders with 10, while Ronnie Creamer, Brit Hudson, and Hamton each had 8.

The Eagles play tonight in the "Save the Chimes" benefit game. Game time is 7 p.m. at the Rock Hill High School Gym. Lunches are $1 for WC students and $2 for non-students.

Volleyball Match Nets $75 For Chimes

BY DAVE BURRAGE

Playing before the largest home crowd of the season, the WC women's volleyball team split two matches with College of Charleston and Appalachian in Peabody Gym, Tuesday, November 8. Concessions sold at the games totalled approximately $75, which will go to the "Save the Chimes" fund.

The College of Charleston began the evening downing Appalachian, 15-4, 15-9. Appalachian played well, but the front line of COC constantly found holes in their opponents' defense and, using an awesome front line, spiked shots almost impossible to return.

The last student turnout cheered the Eagles as they entered the gym prior to the WC-COC game. Game One was a continuation of COC's complete domination of their opponents as WC lost 15-3. WC coach, Miss Linda Warren, felt the Eagles were not mentally ready in their first game with COC. However, behind the play of Judy Kirkpatrick and the rest of the crowd, the Eagles came alive in Game Two (which proved to be the best game of the night). In that game the Eagles connected a half dozen times for a 6-0 lead before COC, seeing stan (mainly Kirkpatrick and Williams), could gain their composure. COC, displaying ability and luck, came back to tie the score at 7-7, and when COC went ahead at 8-7, the Eagles called time.

Following the time out, COC moved out to a 13-10 lead. Sensing defeat, the Eagles would have been appropriate for the occasion (to restore order, that is). Game Three saw COC jump to a 20-9 lead. Later it became 20-10 in favor of COC. WC called time. Following this, COC scored off 4 more points to win the game (15-7) and the match.

The evening's final match was a grudge match vs. Appalachian. In Game One the Eagles jumped out to a 7-0 lead before Appalachian could post a point. The Appies scored 4 times, then the Eagles swung together another 7 points, making it 14-4 for WC. Both teams scored once more to make the final score 15-5.

Game Two began as a repeat of Game One with WC going out to leads of 4-0, 6-2, and 9-6. At this point however, Appal- lachian rallied to an 11-9 lead, and then to 13-9. The final score, in favor of Appalachian, was 15-10.

The Eagles won Game Three, 15-7, after leading 6-0, 9-2, and 11-4. Following the final game, Miss Warren said, "I was proud of the way some of the people coming off the bench played."

Small Business Workshop Presented

The School of Business Administration and Joynes Center will present a Small Business Workshop from November 8 through 9, from 9:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. at Joynes Center for people who have been in business for a short time, those who intend to go into business, and those interested in the possibility but unsure of how to proceed, according to Gay Randolph, Coordinator of Continuing Education Programs in the School of Business. "The program will define the most common problems encountered by small business people and will make suggestions on successful management," Randolph said.

The purpose of the workshop is to provide the basic considerations of starting or operating a small business with emphasis on business opportunities, merchandising, sales promotion, market research, financing, taxation, business entity and record keeping.

"We will have many experienced individuals to serve as our faculty for the workshop," Miss Randolph said.

In addition to instruction, the program will include a full range of excellent handout material and open question opportunities, according to Miss Randolph.

The fee is $50 which includes the seminar, coffee breaks, lunches, and handout material.

For further information contact Miss Gay Randolph or Dr. William H. Herring, coordinators of the workshop.

Dr. Rosso Conducts Workshop

Dr. Louis J. Rosso, Chairman of the Department of Communications, conducted a two-day workshop on a speech and communications program October 20 and 21 in Lansing, Michigan.

Dr. Rosso presented a curriculum he has designed entitled "Articulation and Language," Learning the ALL Program. The program contains materials and methods for children and the parents and teachers of children between the ages of 3 and 7 with speech, language, and hearing impairments.

The workshop was conducted for speech clinicians from the Infant Program for the Visually Impaired, a program for pre-school blind children, and the Ingham Intermediate School system in Michigan.

"The workshop resulted in the Ingham District deciding to use my curriculum in their program," Dr. Rosso said. "The Infant Program for the Visually Impaired will adapt the curriculum and training data for its use with blind children."

Publications Board Holds Meeting

The Board of Student Publications met to examine publication guidelines Wednesday, October 19 at 4:00 p.m. in Kibler 306, according to Dr. Bintlvid Vaulat, Chairman. "Each year the Board examines the guidelines to see if anyone wants to make suggestions for change," Dr. Vaulat said.

The previous question was raised about whether the present method of selecting editors is the most desirable method.

Presently prospective editors fill out an application which the Board reviews before the candidate is interviewed. After the interview the names of candidates who meet the qualifications are submitted to the SGA election committee and the editor is elected by the student body.

"So far the Board has taken no position on the matter," Dr. Vaulat said. "We will be discussing the matter in the future."

Members of the Board of Student Publications are Dr. Bintlvid Vaulat, Professor of History and Chairman of the Board of Student Publications; Robert Britsow, Professor of English and advisor to THE JOHNSONIAN; Dr. Houston Craighead, Associate Professor of Philosophy; and Roy Mylan, Associate Professor of Communications.

The Placement and Career Planning Office, on the first floor of Bancroft, offers seniors and graduate students the opportunity to interview many employers on campus, according to Frank Joseph, career counselor.

Many businesses, school districts and government agencies send recruiters to campus to talk with interested students. Joseph said, "All students must fill out a Placement Office form before they can interview on campus." According to Joseph, "We and Carol Gilmer, clerk in the Placement Office, can help students fill out forms."

The Johnsonian publishes a list of employers coming to campus, Joseph said, "but interested students should also check the bulletin boards outside of the Placement Office for updates."

Joseph offered some tips on interviewing, in which he said students should first research the employers they plan to interview and this can be done through the Career Planning Library.

In interviewing, Joseph said, "show how you portray yourself or your resume as important as what you have to present. Dress appropriately, don't ask for water, for men or dress for women. Don't wear a lot of jewelry or perfume, shoes polished, nails clean, etc."

Joseph said the employers are looking for self-confidence and that nothing conveys a lack of this more than a limp handshake, shaky voice, restless hands, or loathing eye.

"Relax, but don't slouch," Joseph stressed. "Be enthusiastic. Job offers are often lost because of seeming indifference. You have to sell yourself."

Joseph said students should sit up straight and follow recruiter's leads. "Some questions recruiters like to ask are, "Why are you here? Tell me about yourself. What can I do for you?" What is your strongest suit?"

The interview is for the student to "find out about the employers too," Joseph said, "so ask questions about training programs, responsibilities, etc., but don't ask about salary, retirement benefits and vacations in the first interview."

Joseph said the student should know what the next step in the hiring process is and whether the employer will call or write, or if he expects to see you.

YOUR GUIDE TO INTERVIEWING and the COLLEGE PLACEMENT ANNUAL 1978 are available free in the Placement and Career Planning Office and someone is always willing to help, according to Joseph.

When Congress endorsed the Equal Rights Amendment (ERA) in 1972, it seemed a sure thing. Within two years, 35 states had ratified it. Both Ford and Carter had signed it. Then the pace slowed to a standstill. Now time is running out.

The 27th amendment must be ratified by 38 states by the deadline, March 23, 1979. Presently the ratification of the ERA is three states short. Fifteen states, including both Carolinas, hold the fate of the ERA.

The proposed 27th amendment states that "equality of rights under the law shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or any state on account of sex." The amendment originated to clear sex-discrimination from our laws. Certain state, keeping women from jury duty, denying widows property-tax exemptions, and refusing pregnant women disability payments are just some of the social injustices that live on the books.

ERA critics argue that the 14th amendment, and allowing individual states to reform their own laws will bring about the same results as the ERA. Unfortunately, the 14th amendment only prohibits race, not sex, discrimination. Also, state legislatures may reform old laws, unless pressured to. The ERA, therefore, according to feminist groups, is a legitimately needed proposal.

The amendments hottest controversy has been over its implications. Although it will not become effective until two years after its adoption, what the amendment will and won't advocate is a constant controversy.

According to Congress the ERA will outlaw:

* sex discrimination in public schools
* sex discrimination in public employment
* denial of social security and other benefits to families of employed women
* requirements that married women use their husband's surname, in regard to voting and vehicle registration
* all sex-based legalities of ownership, support and obligation

Contrary to popular misconceptions, the ERA will not require:

* coed bathrooms, showers, locker rooms or dormitories
* a constitutional right to privacy

* the draft of women; presently there is no draft * churches, private clubs, etc., to stop their sex-discriminatory practices; the ERA does not apply to private persons, groups or organizations
* a change in the legal status of abortion; the ERA has no effect on it
* the end of all support and alimony payments, the breadwinner

Voice of Equality

If you believe that women and men should be treated as equals under the law.

If you believe that sex-role stereotyping must end.

If you believe that your daughters and sons, sisters and brothers should have the same opportunity to develop and aspire.

If you believe that all human beings are entitled to make their own decisions free from government direction or the way males and females should behave.

...then elect your representative to your state house and_sfes YES for the Equal Rights Amendment.

- reprinted from Ms. Magazine Jan. 77

The proposed amendment underwent a public vote in 1977. The question was asked of the public was: "Do you approve the ERA?" The votes from 15 states were as follows:

* 722,740Approved
* 298,229Disapprove

The winner is still required to support the dependent spouse/all family payments and child maintenance. Also the legalization of homosexual marriages, the ERA has no effect on it. All housewives to go out and work; the ERA will benefit the role of the housewife and househusband. To squelch anti-ERA sentiment, two states have served as testing grounds. Both New Mexico and Pennsylvania have state ERA's, and have confirmed all their laws to an equality basis. In neither of the states the inevitabilities of the ERA opponents feared, happened. Yet fact plays a back role in the ERA debate. Equalitarianism is the main sway with the strong voice of fundamentalist churches aiding the anti-ERA cause. North Carolina was an example of it: when the bill was defeated, March, mainly due to emotion-arousing leaflets mailed to 80,000 of the state's voters. The recent powerful opposition has also hit the once pro-ERA states. Three states now have voted to reverse their ERA approval votes. Their right to do so is being questioned. Meanwhile, each of the remaining 15 states yet to ratify, has rejected the amendment at least once in one or both of their houses. Most will revote at their next legislative session.

The ERA's future looks bleak. ERA proponents are fighting that fate with an effective weapon—their vote. By voting for only pro-ERA legislators to their state houses, the chance of ERA passage in their state is greatly enhanced. ERA proponents are also petitioning Congress and the Supreme Court in hopes of an extension on the amendment's deadline. For now the ERA remains in limbo. Three states short of ratification, and only a year and a half to go until the deadline, the fate of the possible 27th amendment lies in question. A question that 15 states have to answer quickly.

Delta Zeta--A Special Service

Members of Delta Zeta Sorority gave a Halloween Party for deaf children from Independence Elementary School on October 7 in Dinwiddie, according to Janice Rogers, chairperson for the Philanthropy Committee.

Rogers said that the children jumped rope and threw frisbees outside. "Drop the Handkerchief and Pin the Nose on the Witch" were games played while cookies and cupcakes were being served.

Rogers said, "It is really very service oriented." Delta Zeta's fulfill this service by tutoring deaf children at independence school in Leslie. "Four others and myself go every week to tutor," Rogers said. "Lynn Fletcher, Lauri Dieke, Joy Herlocker, Diane Carpenter, and myself have volunteered to go to the school," Rogers said the everyone in the sorority participates for the class. They have helped by constructing learning aids, and planning parties. "We had a Philanthropy Party early in October and made lettered vowel blocks and counting boxes. We also made a lot of favors for the kids during the holidays," Rogers said.

She said that there are nine children in the class. Ages range from four to thirteen years of age. All are in the same class but work at different levels. Cindy Hart, a graduate of Ball State University, teaches the class. Dell Matthews is her aide. "The younger children are taught math basics and language, while the older ones have regular classes," Hart said.

No special training was necessary for DZ members before they began tutoring. Hart said, "We have an oral program. Once everyone gets to know each other, the program works well." "We mostly help the younger ones with their speech," Rogers said. "We get them to pay attention to us while we form our words."

Rogers said that speech is encouraged. "These children don't need sign language as much because most have suffered a hearing loss; they are not completely deaf," Rogers said.

Delta Zeta members would like to do more for the deaf children at Independence School. Rogers said, "We have talked about taking them on picnics in the spring, or perhaps taking them ice-skating or bowling."

"There are so many ages, the classroom almost needs to be one-to-one," said Dell Matthews, aide. "These gifts are a big help to us."

Halloween Happening Happens

BY RAY FEASTER

Halloween Happening, sponsored by the Dinwiddie Program Board under the direction of Tom Webb, Director of the Dinwiddie Program Board and Dan Voshell, Chairman of Halloween Happening Committee, was an overall success according to Webb. Webb said that some twenty-seven clubs and organizations participated in the Halloween Happening event. A grand prize of $500.00 was given away to the club or organization with the best display booth. This year's winner in the Halloween Happening was the Council of Exceptional Children with the booth display of "Pitch the Penny." Kappa Delta Pi, winner of the Bake Sale, was chosen by a 3 judge panel consisting of a dentist, a Rock Hill private citizen, and a Winthrop College faculty member. The C.E.C. members raised to help retarded children.

Attendance at Halloween Happening was in the area of some 3,000 people or more, who came to view the different booths and talent shows. Opinions from those who attended Halloween Happening felt that it was something good for the school. Wendy Bouchillon, a 4th grader from Mt. Gallant Elementary School in Rock Hill said, "There was a lot of different things to do." Lowonderful Gaymon, a junior here at Winthrop University, said, "I think that it is the greatest." Susie McClellan of Sigma Gamma Nu of Winthrop College said, "I think it's a great way of getting people involved."

Mr. Webb indicated that the overall participation among the different clubs and organizations was up greatly from that of previous years. Webb also said that he has nothing but thanks to all the different people of the Dinwiddie Program Board who was actually responsible for organizing and setting up of the different booths and displays.

“OH GOD”:
A Shining Light

BY RON LAYNE

He looks kind of naked without his guitar. In the early moments of the film, you keep expecting him to break into the chorus of “Rocky Mountain High.” He never does. It’s been reported John Denver as a supermarket assistant manager.

Very few people have ever given him much credit for having a sense of humor, but that’s the way he is portrayed by the veteran actor that Reiner and Weintraub have chosen for the part.

It’s a must see and George Burns as, can it really be? GOD! It’s John Denver and George Burns in “OH GOD!”

The Jerry Weintraub organization takes to the silver screen with the very able helping hand of Carl Reiner, and the result is one of the funniest films to surface in many years.

It is quite probable that this film could not have been made as recently as six years ago. Films like “Jesus Christ Superstar” and “Godspell” put Jesus in a different perspective and received quite a bit of religious criticism. Jesus was one thing—but GOD! Who would dare attempt to depict the heavenly host as anything except an eye on the top of a pyramid?

Carl Reiner,

Long recognized for his comic genius (i.e. “The Russians Are Coming, The Russians Are Coming”), Reiner has dared to do a sound and mortal for the role of GOD. Ah, but what a mortal. His selection of George Burns was reinforcement of the label—genius.

George Burns is comic. John Denver’s worthwhile (though somewhat released) conspiracy to awaken the world to the fact that God still exists, and that the world CAN be saved, seems to be what it wants to be.

Jerry’s John Denver in the role of Jerry, the honest, hard working supermarket assistant manager that has paid off. Denver—long recognized for his wholesomeness—makes a pretty big splash in his first attempt at getting his feet wet as an actor. After the initial shock of seeing him, barreled, and offering his first lines in the film the viewer can sit back and watch the actor move the film along for his initial confrontation—with God.

In a letter to the paper’s editor, Reiner, who was at the presentation, said that Burns and Oen. devised the name of the film, Jerry, Denver, playing the character, was introduced. Denver’s role was that of a funny farce, caught everyone unawares. The one-liners were Jim Bazemore, playing the part.

Jerry’s reluctance to believe forces God’s hand, until he matriculates at the University of an old timer who looks like he just stepped off the good ship St. Louis. From that time on, God sendsJerry out to get him some media exposure—a move that brings the supermarket manager public embarrassment, loss of a job, unemployment—and closer to his maker.

Reiner’s ability to play on the idea of God as a flesh-and-blood earth walker to produce comic effect never grows tiresome and, at times, hysterically funny. The one-liners delivered by Burns and Denver are classics, sure to be repeated by everyone who happens to see the film, and reading toward “good humor,” in such a way as to insure offensive-free “holy humor.”

Burns at the shining light in the film and Denver proving his versatility at a performer, it would seem impossible that Reiner’s contribution would be given more attention, but such is not the case. Carl Reiner must be given credit for showing a marked degree of taste as he broached a subject that could have stepped on the toes of every conceivable organized religion. He has managed to deftly avoid the pitfalls of bad judgment in the face of an abundance of laughs without bruising the religious consciousness of the general population.

To deal with the finer elements of the humor offered in “OH GOD!” is to rain away some of the rapid fire one-liners the film serves up. It is sufficient to say that, if you’re looking for an evening of laughter, applause and keen insights into human relations with their attendant moral, you’re in for a treat. With God Almighty. It’s a lord of a night.

To Err Is Human...

BY SU TAYLOR

“I knew it was Shakespeare but I didn’t expect it to be that funny. It was a great surprise.”

That was just one of the many comments by playwrights after attending Shakespeare’s COMEDY OF ERRORS, October 27-29 in Johnson Auditorium.

The show was a big success, with a record advance sell-out and overflow for Thursday’s opening night performance. The following night show were also played to solid audiences. Even with a record advance sell-out and overflow for Thursday’s opening night performance. The following night show were also played to solid audiences. Even with a variety of unexplainable events follow which force Jerry’s one-liners. Reiner has dared to be Highlighting the show was a final song and dance routine by the cast. Composed by Dr. Reynolds, it added an icing to the show’s comic cake.

After the final night’s applause, the only big job remaining was that of turning the “beach” back to a normal stage. This was achieved by a bucket brigade, and the help of a giant vacuum cleaner used to suck up the remaining shore.

THE COMEDY OF ERRORS, a funny farce, caught everyone by surprise—except maybe Shakespeare. He meant it that way.

EAGLE QUIZ!

The Winthrop Eagle was hatched on April 29, 1976, and has since made selected public appearances at athletic events, on tee-shirts, and on car window decals. There has been no consistent effort to develop the Eagle’s identity.

The Public Affairs Office wants to know what you think about the Winthrop Eagle. Does he/she eat mice, or does he/she/it prefer the food in Thomson Cafeteria? Is the Eagle sophisticated, or a good ole boy/girl? The idea is to make the Winthrop mascot a three-dimensional character, and not just a flat occasional design.

Please take some time to respond to the following questions, and don’t be afraid to say what you think. We’ll take the answers and respond in a later Johnsonian with what we believe to be the consensus.

1. Did you know before reading this that Winthrop College has the Eagle as a mascot? Yes No

2. Did you participate in selection of the mascot? Yes No

3. Has publicity of the Eagle seemed to adequate too little too much?

4. What kind of eagle is the Winthrop Eagle? Golden Bald Other

5. What kind of personality do you think the Eagle has?

6. Is the Eagle female male neuter does not matter.

7. Do you think the Eagle should be limited to athletic sponsorship or should the Eagle be used for all Winthrop activities? Check one: Athletics only All activities.

8. How could the Eagle concept become more meaningful to you?

9. Do you like the Eagle design adopted by the student body? Yes No; why or why not?

10. If you would prefer another design, should it be formal, cartoon-like, somewhere in-between.

11. What kinds of “dine-ins” can you think of for the Eagle and Winthrop College? (Example: the Eagle’s Roost could be the Tillman Tower)...

'Optacon' Reader Donated For The Blind

BY GARRY BALLARD
SPECIAL TO T.J.

Most people take reading mail in private for granted. But for blind student Regina Lee Hannagan, 21, a Winthrop College junior, being able to "read" her mail is a fantastic experience.

She used to have to depend upon a third person to read her mail to her.

But now, thanks to the York County Lions club, blind students at Winthrop College can "read" their own mail or any other printed materials.

A machine which translates the world of print into vibrating letters that can be felt with one finger was recently donated to the Winthrop library by Glover, River Hills, Tega Cay, Fort Mill and Rock Hill Lions clubs.

Called an Optacon, the machine makes the instruction and resource materials of the sighted directly usable by the blind. It enables a blind person to "read" a regular book, newspaper or magazine.

"When you have a boy friend, you don't like the idea of having a third person reading his letters," said Regina, or Gina as she is known around the Winthrop campus.

Gina, who was chiefly responsible for the college obtaining the Optacon, applied to the Commission for the Blind more than a year ago for the machine to aid in her studies.

After several months with no answer, she approached the local Lions club, and they agreed to purchase the machine for the college.

Gina is currently undergoing a 50-hour training course on the use of the machine. The course is necessary to make sure the machine is used properly.

"It's a slow process because of the many styles of print," said Gina. "Going from a thin to a thick type requires an adjustment on the machine."

The machine can't read handwriting, so everything must be typed or printed.

Two other blind students at Winthrop as well as others who might enroll in the future, will have access to the machine.

Use of the Optacon means that Gina and others will no longer have to depend strictly on tape recorders, braille and reading aides in pursuing their education.

"If I'm going to be a teacher," she relates, "and using the Optacon will better prepare me for that field," she's majoring in special education and learning disabilities. She will do her student teaching next fall before graduating in December.

A native of Des Moines, Iowa, Gina has been in Rock Hill for four years. "I like Rock Hill and want to stay here after graduation. "Hopeful," there is someone broad-minded enough to give me a teaching job," she said.

"If I see no reason why I can't teach in a regular classroom," the mother of two relays well with kids and they relate well with me."

She is spending four hours a week this semester working with children in the Winthrop kindergarten.

"I don't want someone to give me a job because of my handicap. I want them to want me because of my qualifications in working with elementary children," she stated.

Daughter of Ken and Mrs. L. J. Hannagan of Macon, Ga., Gina has been blind since birth. Her optic nerve was destroyed when, as a premature baby, she was given too much oxygen, a condition sometimes called "cerebral palsy."

"I'm open about my handicap," said Gina. "I want people to ask questions. That's the only way they'll learn that the handicapped can function as well as anybody."

She owns a tandem bicycle which she and a friend rode 25 miles in a recent bikathon.

"All I need is someone to take the front seat," she said. "I can peddle as good as anybody."

She also got an "A" in a required art course for students preparing to teach elementary children. She wrote poetry and sculpted.

She helps support herself by babysitting.

Gina gets around the Winthrop campus with her golden retriever, Banner, a golden retriever.

"Many blind persons won't have dogs, because some people believe the dogs are answers than the blind," she said. "But Banner and I am a team. He helps me find the curbs and steps, but otherwise he obeys my commands.

Regina Hannagan shown using Optacon.

Gina has two other pets as companions, a small dog named "Chippie" and a parakeet called "Sunshine."

"Chippie" stands for Chihuahua-Pekinese-terrier for all the dog's breeds, she explains. Her parakeet is named "Sunshine" because he is yellow like the sun and brightens her day.
