Editorial Asides

Legislature Day seems to have been a success if we can judge from clippings from the various state papers.

Representative Ben E. Adams tells of his impressions in The Carolina Free Press. "What a beautiful beautiful Winthrop. . . . What a Winthrop fine body of young women. . . . And what a wonderful institution they have the privilege of attending."

"Mellowed heavily lends charm to many of the buildings and women trained in the Winthrop atmosphere carry into the life stream of South Carolina something the value of which can not be measured in dollars."

In their column, around the State House, in The State, J. E. Otter and Jess Rutledge say, "Winthrop is the only state school exclusively for women, and some contend she has not been treated as liberally in appropriations as some of the institutions for men."

"Winthrop has no football team, and so doesn't get so much in the spotlight as the institutions for men."

"House Speaker Solomon Blatt invited the girls to visit the house of representatives 'on the day of appreciation for Winthrop college is under discussion'."

"President Phelps as a new man in the educational field in South Carolina and promises to make his influence felt. He is a hard worker and Winthrop will continue to thrive under his administration."

Blue Slips descended upon us Tuesday. There were many woe-begone expressions and quite a few pleasantly surprised ones to blue be seen in and near the post-slips office.

Speaking from experience, we would like the freshmen to know that a blue slip does not mean that you are going to flunk the course; no, it does indicate that a great deal more time and effort is going to be necessary in order to pass at the end of the semester.

If you get a blue slip, sit down a few minutes and try to find out why. The professors will be glad to tell you where you have fallen down—they don't want to flunk you! Then, do a little real studying and make a sincere effort to improve. When January rolls around your blue slips may have become quality points.

Every educational institution likes to speak of the cultural advantages which it offers in addition to the regular curricula. Winthrop College can boast of a long, long list of ways in which its students are "exposed" to culture, but even more can be proud of the "exposure."

In addition to reading required as parallel in the library, many girls find time to read a daily newspaper, articles and stories in the better magazines, the newest news, the latest non-fiction, and the classics. Students who find time to read for the sheer joy of it are an asset to any college.

The artist course numbers are always enthusiastically received and well attended. By the way, there is a long write-up in the theater section of Monday's New York Times. The company will appear here November 15.

Religious services are usually given splendid receptions and lectures and discussion groups are popular. The Y program tonight at 6:30 in Johnson hall is an evidence of the interest in such discussions.

Sixty-Five Seniors to Exchange in S. C. and N. C. November 15-21

Winthrop Girls Will Get Practical Experience

Sixty-five Winthrop seniors are exchanging with teachers in North and South Carolina during the week of November 15-21 according to Superintendent O. M. Mitchell of Winthrop Training School.

Distribution of teachers according to levels is as follows: Primary level, 23; Intermediate, 21; and high school, 21.

The fall exchange program offers the opportunity of four days at Winthrop—demonstration teaching, check-up of methods, materials, and technique; and general round table discussion. In addition to this the visiting teacher has the opportunity of special conferences with members of the college faculty and of attending any classes as a visitor.

Through the system of exchange teaching, the Winthrop senior obtains practical experience in fields which she has been acquainted with through the problems found under actual teaching conditions.

The senior, doing exchange teaching, reports to the school to which she has been assigned on Monday morning of exchange week and observes on that day the regular teacher who conducts the classes. Thus the student teacher becomes acquainted with the new teaching situation. The regular teacher comes to Winthrop on Monday night or Tuesday morning, leaving the senior in charge of the classroom.

The exchange teacher takes the student's place in the dormitory and in the dining hall of the college. The Winthrop senior stays at the boarding place of the regular teacher.

In addition to the following names, four home economics exchanges will be made—Blackburg, Iron, Clinton, and Glasgow.

Those participating in the exchange program are as follows, the name of the teacher first, and the Winthrop senior taking her place, second:

Juniors, Seniors Undefeated in Hockey As Johnsonian Goes to Press Thursday

BY MARGUERITE AUSTIN

As the Johnsonian goes to press we find ourselves in the midst of the annual hockey tournament, with three of the five scheduled afternoons of play ended.

As present the junior team is ahead, having won the three games they've played.

The seniors stand in second place, having won the two games they've played.

The freshman A team has three games for the time being, having won one game and lost one.

The sophomores have lost three games and freshmen B's have lost three so far.

Monday's Games Seniors vs. Sophomores Play began Monday afternoon with a clash between the seniors and sophomores that ended in a 2-0 victory for the seniors. The game began with the following lineup: Seniors: Hanson, Gason, L. Mitchell, McLaughlin, McPherson, White McFiekin, Smith, Craig, Martin, Parrott, Sanders, Easterlin, Ryan, Noel, Gentry, Eddy, Eble, Clark, Warranmaker.

Devils Have Played Three Games, Dragons Four; Freshman Goals Third in Line in Tournament; Sophomores Still Tops in "Pop" Scores; Last Games Today

Changes in the freshman lineup were as follows: Owens for Toy, Trowbridge for Blesper, Agerton for Wolford, Wilcox for Miller, Chandler for Kneese, Sewell for Owens, Abrams for Blakeney, and Booth for Bradberry.

Tuesday's Games Juniors vs. Sophomores The junior team marked up a 2-1 score in a close game against the sophomores. The lineup: Juniors—Gledge, Ferguson, Williams, Amme, Pendergrass, Douglas, Kneese, Colton, Pendergrass, Legare, Brown; Sophomores—Ortiz, Parrott, Sanders, Easterlin, Ryan, Verone, Gentry, Eddy, Eble, Clark, Warranmaker.

In the first half the juniors made their goals, one by Gledge, the other by Ferguson. Easterlin made a goal for the sophomores in the second half.

The only substitution was Shillingbill for Ortiz.

Freshmen A vs. Freshmen B The freshman A team defeated the freshman B's with a score of 3-1. The lineup: Freshman A—McArthur, Lindley, Willis, Dargan, Snook, Williams, Williamson, Pant, Jones, Ballard, Mitchell; Freshmen B—Toy, Trowbridge, Barnwell, McRay, Wolford, Miller, Marshall.

Williams shot the goal in the first half and two in the second. Blagoev, Ferguson, and Amme shot one goal each during the second half.

Austin's Dog Plays Key Role in Play; Masquers Ask Public to Performance

Complimentary tickets to the entire student body and to the dramatic public in general have been issued by Masquers for their first 1937-38 public performance Saturday evening at 8 o'clock in Johnson hall.

From snoozing in on practice, an excitement which would almost warrant a soap hot carrying yell in the postoffice during morning shifts has been gathered. If you hear "Come right this way. The best show on the market, right this way!" you will know it is only one of the Masquers working up a volume of voice to call his heard all the way to the back row.

For weeks Louise Pant and Nancy Best have been sitting below in the foot-lights surveying the progress of "Madrums Coming Up." When Virginia Workman starts her Alice Virginia monologue, the whole cast has to take time out to laugh.

Emily Harrison will make her debut as the over-sophisticated author who literally knocks the reading world and the gentleman off their feet. Her maduroons come up, however, as do all the others.

Alce Williamson, the capable chorus speaker of Miss Mims' state traveling troupe, will lead the Greek legend in verse and rhythm. An attractive little "Pandora's Box," captivates the interest of the more intelligent and those who will appreciate beauty after a session of comedy.

The main characters of this play are Mary Cary as Pandora, Marguerite Tidmarsh as Epimetheus, and Ann Clark as Hermes. There is no "Hope" for this play because Margie Wagon was forced to drop her role as portrayal of Hope and take up that of amusing herself in the infirmary.

Always my night in South portico could not do justice to the play. "Never My God in Thee," which has only three characters—Ann Williamson, Ann Clarkson, and Jean McLaughlin.

A very young bride's separation from her husband; a cultured smart movie actress turning out to be a tin pan alley mail singer; and even life of the Greek stewards are given in this story of the horrors of a ship wreck. In a scenery dramatic and very short time the play is presented.

In wandering from practice to practice a new Masquer member was discovered, Marguerite Austin's dog is one of the leading characters in "Madrums Coming Up."

A number of other girls are learning lines, forgetting calls, and preceding their voices in a hasty haste. Members of the supporting casts are Rebecca Barr, Remer Lintley, Jean Moss, Bessie Clark, J. Vance Harter, Thelma Chandler, Lillie Blair, Mary Davis, Kinsey Drake, Wilma Smith, Bess Smith, Elizabeth Mansfield, Caroline Woodruff, Dr. Camk, Madeline Ward, and Dorothy Clineborn.

Rehearsing for the public performance tomorrow night, the following members of the cast of "Madrums Coming Up" are on the stage of Johnson hall: Susie Clark, Emily Harrison, Virginia Workman, Jean Moss, Remer Lintley, and Rebecca Barr.

Miss Sturtivant Explains Growth in Personnel Work

Problem Is To Individualize Education Says Columbia University Chapel Speaker

BY ELIZABETH ANDERSON

"Personnel work in the school systems of today attempts to do what used to be done naturally—that is to individualize education."

Miss Sarah M. Sturtivant, a former Winthrop student, in Columbia university, summed up the aims of guidance work in the field of education, she addressed the college assembly last Tuesday.

Miss Sturtivant emphasized the fact that guidance, personnel, and council are synonymous terms, all denoting an effort to individualize and personalize modern mass education. She differentiated them from personnel work in business, which is similar work, but with a greater emphasis upon vocational guidance and placement.

Consented to will blue sheer wool, silk many graceful plaies. Miss Sturtivant talked enthusiastically and authoritatively on this subject. She told of her early teaching experience in a small town and of her great interest in her pupils. As they had few recreational facilities, she gave parties and picnics, coached both boys' and girls' athletic teams, spoke with pride of her pupils' enthusiastic response and their fine records.

Later going to a larger school system, she became "tear of girls. She planned to attend Columbia university to do graduate work in English, but changed to personnel work upon finding a vacancy in that department. After getting her master's degree in 1929, she became associated with the university and is now a professor there.

Miss Sturtivant gave the following four reasons for the growing emphasis on personnel work: (1) mass education, (2) ever-growing curricula, (3) increased interest in vocations, and (4) realization through scientific studies of individual differences.

Expressing an opinion that there is a great opportunity for career young men and women who are naturally suited and properly trained for personnel work, she emphasized the large number of divisions which can be made in this field, such as student orientation, vocational guidance, activities, testing of abilities and aptitudes, personality development, etc.

In giving the requirements for personnel workers, Miss Sturtivant emphasized sincerity, understanding, experience, and life-long study. She said, "If I were an undergraduate planning to do guidance work I would take psychology, history, English, and all other languages to get the greatest possible knowledge of people. I do not advocate taking psychology and sociology until one is a graduate student, as I feel they are too advanced and too often confusing."

"Teaching experience should follow and then a year of graduate work before one begins to specialize."

Speaking of tests as scientific measurements of intelligence and personality, Miss Sturtivant said that some were good and some bad, but that no one test could be considered

Cornelia Otis Skinner Fails to Fume Backstage

BY MARY ELIZABETH BURD

"You can't find it!" Cornelia Otis Skinner calmly asked her maid who was making a mad search in all corners of Miss Skinner's bag for the box of powder, Thursday night, November 2, in the dressing room behind the stage in main building.

No temperament or dramatization showed itself in the face and voice of Miss Skinner, so famed for her dramatic art.

Methodically and even-tempered, she used the powder from her compact and continued making up her face among the profusion of toilet articles and the confusion of selecting the right table for the stage from the ones paraded to the door by Leonard.

"Really" she smiled as she applied her eye shadow, "the field of drama is always a gamble—a terrific chance. It's just a matter of luck, that's all. And then, too, it's hard to combat the high salaries paid by Hollywood."

"Of course, though, I was really born in it since my father was an actor. But he didn't influence me one way or the other. It was just in me."

"The movies! Well, I think they're improving. Of course, our American movies are far in advance of the foreign ones, but we have all the facilities. I think, however, you are to go on the stage if you really want to act."

"But I do like Hollywood. I have many friends there and have been there quite a bit. Ann Harding and I know each other when we were very young."

"No, I'm afraid I have to admit that I have no hobbies, but I realize that I must develop some," Miss Skinner said, and explained that even during her college days at Bryn Mawr she had been interested only in acting.

"As for time," she continued, "I really have none."

When asked when she wrote her monologues and magazine articles she replied that she did most of her writing on trains.

"BEND DOWN SISTERS" THEORY OUT

Ed. 35 students know that the German "gymnasium" is different from our campus gymnasium in that the former is a preparatory school. Our gymnasium is more like the "gymnasiums" of the ancient Greeks, a place for athletic activities.

Anyway, a student informed her German class one day that the German "gymnasium" is a school where gymnastics is taught.

My dear _____, they don't even teach gymnastics as we understand it in our Winthrop gymnasium now. It seems that the old "bend down sister" theory isn't in so much favor with our modern "phys-ed." I felt rather out of date the other day when a phys. ed. major laughed at the exercise I was taught in high school. It seems they found better ways of developing the physique than by the 1-2-3, up-side-down rackets.

And then just for fun I called Mary Houston a "sister" major—well, I've decided not to try it on any other phys. ed. majors.

If by the way, you know that all the class cheerleaders are phys. ed. majors?

ROLL-BOOK CUTS CLASS

Mrs. Post's roll book skipped a class and went for a ride with Miss Casey the other day just when she owned it for recreational sports class. I identify Miss Casey didn't see the roll book when she got into her car, or maybe she was in on the scheme and knew all the time that Miss Post had left the roll on the remaining board—but roll books never get lost permanently—trust lock for us.

I've been told that a number of juniors had colds Friday night at the pep meeting.

RESP., ENFT., EXPI-ATION

Training School students certainly do have faith in their phys. ed. teachers. One of them was so sorry that his teacher wasn't present at a recent football game to give athletic inspiration to a player who had broken his collarbone. After all, inspiration is just a matter of inspiration and expiration, according to one W. T. R. student.

BATHING CAPS FOR NIGHT CAMPUS WEAR

Miss Bradford was seen wearing a bathing cap on the campus the other night. How can that be explained—psychology? Or maybe Miss Bradford and the faculty members with her had been for a swim that night.

"BEST TEAM" WINS?

Latest bulletin—It is learned from reliable sources that the "best team" will probably win the hockey tournament. You know the best team doesn't always win, according to a certain sophomore hockey player. If we get beat, but we played a better game than our opponents," she proudly remarked after Tuesday's game.

APROPO!

I wonder if Mr. Harrison of the French department realized what a reasonable pun he was making when he saw a senior chasing a "screaking" freshman and remarked, "Goodness, that young lady sounds like she's being chased by a dragon."

BRAIN STORM

I had decided not to mention the answer that we so bravely ignored Friday night at the pep meeting. But something thought just occurred to me. Everybody was so heated up that night that if we had held the meeting in main auditorium the speaker system would have probably begun to work.

Sophomore Tigers Roar To Victory in Pep Meet

Steady Rain Falls To Dampen Enthusiasm Of Tigers, Dragons, Goats, And Devils

With spirit undampened by the persistent rainfall, the more than 600 students gathered in the amphitheater Friday evening to cheer their hockey teams, made the annual class pep meeting a "howl" night.

The sophomore Tigers "roared" through to capture the judge's decision at the close of the program. The senior "dragons", the freshman "bullygoats", and the junior "devils" were given second, third, and fourth places respectively.

The amphitheater was decorated for the occasion with colors and class colors. Winthrop penants adorned the stage, and the class banners and emblems were in evidence in the rear of each class section of the theater.

The program began with music by the W. T. S. band, which incidentally played the sophomore class song, too. At the signal of classing groups, members of the senior hockey team entered from the back and ran down the lighted aisle of the amphitheater, while the seniors sang "Other classes leaving followed in descending order to the accompaniment of class yell.

Training School Founded As 'Model School'

The house of experience for Winthrop seniors—Training School—has been a part of the college since it was founded.

At the time of Winthrop's founding training schools were a special feature of any teachers' college. During Winthrop's sojourn in Columbia the Columbia city schools proved most useful for this purpose.

After Winthrop was moved to Rock Hill two rooms on the first floor of the Administration building were known and used as the Model School. Here the seniors did their student teaching. In a few years two other rooms were added and as the need for more space arose rooms upstairs were added.

In 1912 the present Training School was opened with Professor W. D. Magrins as superintendent. It then offered, in addition to the grades, teaching experience in manual training, domestic science, and domestic art.

Judge for the meeting were Miss Chlo Fink, Miss Alice Tingley, and Mr. Thomas Noel. After announcing the decision, Margie McKeefrick urged students to encourage their class teams by attending the hockey tournament, of which M. E. Martin was chairman. In conclusion, all the classes joined in singing the Winthrop "Abn. Mater."

By this method the student teacher is introduced gradually to the requirements of the school room situation, and is expected to assume, in the order of their difficulties, the responsibility and duties of teaching.

Out of a graduating class of 234, 227 of its members taught in the Training School last year.
