AS CONSTRUCTION BEGINS

Winthrop really feels as though Santa Claus has been here now that a favorable decision has been rendered in the bond "test case."

With this settled, the construction of the new auditorium and the new home economics building on our campus will go forward rapidly.

Winthrop exceeds other buildings and equipment of course. A growing institution naturally does. We know that these will be supplied as soon as possible, for the people of our state are showing more and more interest in the aims and needs of our educational institutions.

The construction of the new auditorium and the new home economics building on our campus will greatly facilitate the carrying out of the educational aims in at least two phases of Winthrop's program.

USE AND ABUSE

We are proud of our Winthrop gymnasium, aren't we? But do we take advantage of and appreciate the recreational opportunities it offers us?

Students from other colleges visiting our campus recently on "Sports Day" were very complimentary in their remarks on the quality and extent of our athletic equipment.

SYMPATHY!

To the two students, Anne Tighman and Laura Mae Brown, who, in the past week have lost their fathers, The Johnsonian and the student body extend deepest sympathy.

the gymnasium, and every Winthrop student is cordially invited to "play" there in her spare moments at her favorite sports with fellow students.

So the gymnasium becomes a personal and social responsibility to the students to whom it is entrusted, at the same time that it is our "house of play."

SUCCESS RE-DEFINED

From the cradle on we are told, "If you work hard and behave yourself, you will succeed."

Does American education hold out false incentives? Do we urge work on with false encouragement to goals too high for them to attain and give them no balm for the bitterness of defeat?

Maxims such as the above may move children to learn their spelling words or their multiplication tables, but we seriously doubt it.

Then they discover that although they have worked hard and behaved themselves, they are not what they consider successful; that only one man can be president at a time, and one hundred twenty million persons must be content to be private citizens; that for every executive there are several hundred workers who must follow his instructions.

Why does not our educational system prepare us for this? Why doesn't it teach us to aim for a goal which we may have a fair chance to attain? Why doesn't it teach us how to choose our leaders intelligently and to follow them with discretion?

Most people will have fairly good jobs at mediumly low salaries and will hold these jobs by dint of hard work. As far as the world is concerned they are not successful, their biographies would not read like an Horatio Alger success story, but these people in their apparent mediocrity are the backbone of any republic and as such they can and must feel successful in their own eyes.

If we teach the maxims of spiritual and mental success in our public schools as well as we have taught the components of material success all will be well. If we teach the nobility of character, the power and pleasure that can be derived from a well-trained mind, and the importance of personality—then the material success will become unimportant.

America need have no fear of the future if its citizens learn thoroughly the realities of the spirit—which are in the end the only existing realities.

Campus-ing

BY MARTHA ORR

Emily Harrison has so ably expressed the present sentiments of the Winthrop student body that nothing would be more notable at this time than the expression, which is:

I think that I should never see A girl much heavier than me Should certain people that I know Kiss up on high and let us go The oftentimes day of the present month So we could go home and have some fun.

(I do not think that the proposed rhyme will come about.)

You know lately I've talked to many of our girls and they don't think boys are half as bad as they did before. In fact, boys, we couldn't do without you—and you know it. We can't imagine why we ever thought you were instructors of shooting bull, and

The time has come for us to say That we give in, boys—now, today, For not so long upon his way is Merry Christmas!

We love you all—but, one by one— And don't you think we have begun A romance meaning more than fun Merry Christmas!

You know how girls depend on you To keep their hearts from the blue And anything you say—'tis true—at Merry Christmas!

So do not tarry, or we grieve; There all these years we still believe "Be true to give to us to receive at Merry Christmas!

Which reminds me of another good point brought out by Emily Harrison in this little poem:

Boys had a little sleigh, He filled it high with toys, And brought it down to Winthrop For all good girls and Squidly members.

Not having a stamp to send this week, I decided to print this parody on a poem published in this column some time ago, written by some Winthrop student who thinks he is a good psychologist. (I am terribly sorry I could not find out your name to put under the poem—for I can readily understand the agony of reading a masterpiece written by yourself which does not bear your name for acceptance of due credit. You neglected to give me enough space information.) It seems that many of the Winthrop boys have been receiving "rat letters" from naughty Winthrop girls and consequently this appears:

A Soph's Dressed Twice a day the portman leaves, Cards and letters by the post. Talking how some freshmen grieve, If we fail to answer back.

"It's stickers," they say the Soph's demand, And a picture, too, dear friend! For the Winthrop Soph's loving aim, Are searching for each lovely man.

(The, yes, Editor Jones, aren't you glad I didn't have a stamp?)

And from The Los Angeles Outliner, that ultra-modern newspaper from the west coast, comes this addition to your absent-minded anthology:

"Why did you tear the back out of that book?" asked the long-suffering wife of the absent-minded doctor. "Where was, dear," said the surgeon, "the part you speak of was labeled 'appendix' and I took it without thinking."

THE SGO APPLE

Student organizations of the University of North Carolina, Washington and Lee, and Emory have honored the home "Big Apple." Some said that the floors on which most student dances are held were too frail to withstand the stamping. But the chief reasons seemed to be, we see fellow expressed it:

"The students are just fed up on the big apple." —Springfield Student

Here's some more dope on the musical situation—better break up on "What's What" before Christmas holidays—

"Shoppers" and "The Apples" may regret this, but a survey taken by one of the collegian's favorite hand-masters reveals that "swing" has dropped one third in favor of the college crew. How much more tops, and "swing" is called just a "fad." The student's favorite is still Star Dust, Sweet and Day, and Smoke Gets in Our Eyes—all of the sweet and slow variety. —Two Bits

She, gently: "Can you drive with one hand?" He, eagerly: "You bet I can." She: "Then have an apple." —Los Angeles Outliner

JUST LINES

Dear George, When I said that I thought that mother was right and that we were too young to be engaged, I didn't mean that we couldn't be friends.

Of course, George, dear, I realize that you felt surprised and disappointed at first, but I still don't think that that was any reason for you to try to make me ridiculous during the Thanksgiving holidays. Don't you think it was rather childish to set the way you did? Of course you couldn't hurt me by your attitude, but Peggy is so young and inexperienced that she might take all this seriously. She's a chub sister of mine, you know, so I have a kind of maternal feeling for her—being older, and having her look up to me, and everything.

George, I realize that I must have hurt you very deeply to make you write such a mean, nasty letter. I know that it was hurt pride speaking when you said that all that stuff about a Purpose in Life was just baloney, and that I was just jealous because you were taking her to the dance, and that I couldn't try to sound so old and sophisticated 'cause you could remember me last summer when my nose was peeling and my permanent was growing out. I've tried to make allowances, George, and I've decided to let bygones be gone.

I hope you can be friends again. I guess we can never be just friends tho' because we weren't so much to each other—I didn't mean to say that, but I was stinging here thinking about all the fun we've had together. We have certainly had some swell times. Remember the house-party at Myrtle Beach last summer and the night we all went sailing on the inland waterway?

I'll have to close now so go to supper tho' I don't feel that I can rest when my heart is so full of things I want to say.

Love,

JUDY

P. S. We get out December 21 for Christmas. I hope I'll see you during the holidays.

Y Entertains Those Having Birthdays In December

The Y was again hostess to a group of students and faculty members at a monthly party when those born in December gathered in Johnston hall Wednesday afternoon at 5 o'clock.

White O'Dell, president of the Y, cut the cake which was tall and white topped with a run of red Christmas trees.

Those receiving were Miss Lillian Hogarth, general secretary of the Y, and Y cabinet members. Others were Anna Toy, Ethel Elmer, Mary Lamar Bedenbaugh, Eleanor Edmondson, and Nell Lide.

Baccarat Girls Enjoy Formal Dances Saturday

Baccarat residents enjoyed a delightful dance Saturday night from 9 until 11 in Baccarat furnished.

The music was furnished by Eleanor Coulton and Anne Thomsen played the piano. Catherine Hughes played the violin.

During the evening there was a grand march in order to choose the most attractive couple. Ann King and Frieda Johnson were chosen and were given a box of candy as a prize.

Breasale Has Tea Thursday

Breasale gave a delightful tea Thursday afternoon from 4 till 6. The parlors were beautifully decorated, using the Christmas motif.

John Le Valley was official hostess and received the guests. Tea and cookies were served.

Shop in Rock Hill!

Rock Hill's stores offer a wide variety of general merchandise and at this season most attractive Christmas selections. We would like to make the suggestion to students who live in communities without Rock Hill's splendid shopping facilities to do their Christmas shopping here before they leave school. In other words, if they cannot find what they want in their own hometown—buy it in Rock Hill where it is convenient to shop.

We are prompted to make this suggestion especially for the reason that Winthrop students will have only two days before Christmas at home to select gifts and stocks will probably be depleted. The Rock Hill stocks are now "fresh" and there is time to "look" and choose. Winthrop students might also find in Rock Hill for mother, dad, brother or sister just that certain thing they wanted to give "So-and-So." Christmas packages for those at home can be sent prior to your arrival for the holidays by mail or freight, or taken by you. It goes without saying that the local merchant, salesmen and saleswomen are always happy to serve you.

"But an economy is hypnotic! I can't give it up. I've only been interested in it since 1914 when we moved to Rock Hill. City atmosphere of dark smoke is no place for telescopes. Even the bleaschery inconveniences me and the stars at times," he explained.

In the back yard is his own observatory and telescope, both of which he made and erected himself. The fun of the thing is in doing it himself, he believes. He laughed at the idea of ever discovering a star.

"I haven't the patience. The simple math part drives me crazy as it is. As for the complications I would love to make."

And he tossed his hand while he laughed a self-amused laugh. But he's not crazy. It's very such a case of a great many things with which English professors in love with their libraries aren't usually concerned. For instance, there's his other hobby of electricity.

"I've played with low frequency ever since 1908 when I dug up some old batteries thrown away in the garage, tore them up, put them together again, and discovered I could make them do things for me."

Then he showed us the practical application of this hobby. Each room in his house is connected by telephone. Soon there will be one on the observatory. Every room also has a loud speaker from the radio; upstairs a radio dial duplicates to the one on the radio capable him to change stations by merely turning a button.

"It's Tops!" Say Cadets At Dixie Speech Journey

But not one proposal! Above is the best-reading result—among one line, at least—of the Strawberry Leaf tourney on Winthrop campus for the year 1937.

That is, if any Winthrop man did have the so-called blessed estate proposed to her—she's laughing the fact well hidden.

And so the curtain rings down on the sixth annual Dixie tourney with some problems solved, some decisions reached, and some opponents outspoken, but seemingly no one who comes near to claiming the handsome reward promised by Winthrop's foreman director to the girl who becomes the bride of a delegate to a foreman meet.

However, let no man say that this "top" wasn't the best in the line at Winthrop—even without the foregoing omission.

"I've been a lot of places and done a lot of things—football and all, but this Winthrop—it's tops!" was a declaration made by a uniformed male delegate and corroborated by his friend. No, nobody asked his opinion about it—he just said it! That's all, and he had his own reason.

switchboards all too complicated for us (with our general acquaintance knowledge of positive and negative charges), a telephone made from a dressed up coffee can, and a hair dryer which in former days called itself a simple milk-shaker. These and others—all are results of his hobby.

The talk returned to the new radio. We heard Berlin, London, Rome, within the space of a few seconds. Then he dashed to another cabinet, took out a record, switched buttons here, there. We listened. Another button was pressed, tuning in his wife and mother upstairs.

We went home a few minutes later hearing the thrilling tones of Richard Crooks still ringing and humming in our own off-key soprano the Serenade from Jochelli.

The man's a wonder, so agreed. How on earth has he had time to do all he's done, to learn all he's learned, and still managed to keep that folksy, easy manner that begged us to fix onion sandwiches with him at the kitchen table.

SPORTS

COMPETITION
There seems to be a spirit of competition growing between physical education classes. Recently Miss Cassey's sixth period team sports group challenged Miss Wellner's second-period group to a speed-ball contest. The first race was 2-3, in favor of both teams. "See"—so there were no hard feelings. But now the Wellner group have retaliated by inviting the Cassey group to match their skills in a volley ball tilt, so here's good luck to both sides!

"APPLER" AGAIN
They say Miss Fung was really "tripping the light fantastic" the other day. She gave a little Big Apple exhibition in her folk-dancing class.

Did you know that over two billions of dollars are spent in the United States each year in the field of sports?

MEK-UP
Here's a note of sympathy to all those whose recent "check-up" turned out to be a disappointing "mis-up." It's sometimes a little difficult to make good connections between the head and the feet, don't you think so?

TABLE-TENNIS
We may have a professional exhibition of table tennis before the potential Winthrop experts now enrolled in recreational sports classes get too good. Kinsey Evans already has a neat "slice" under control, and Grace Punderbark aims over some powerful "smashes."

DO WE NEED ANOTHER GYM?
You should have heard the jolly little "argument" as to which one of two athletic staff members should have the gymnasium from three to four o'clock Tuesday. It seems that two classes had met with a little commotion in Roddey basement for the fifth period class, and the instructor of each class felt that she had suffered enough during the preceding hour to deserve the gymnasium from the next.

Maybe we just need to build another gymnasium, or else move Roddey basement nearer the main gymnasium and raise the basement ceiling. The note that 40 slugging students make over there is really enough to raise the Roddey roof.

Wardrobe Tumbles Spilling Blue—Makes Girls White

Pictures may fall, curtains and even clocks, but it is a rare occasion indeed when a full-sized, true to life wardrobe comes tumbling down almost bodily upon bewildered students. But that's what happened to two juniors! When the sound of the crash had finally subsided and the echoes had died away, they bravely eyed the debris in an attempt to discover what casualties had been incurred.

A demolished shoe-bag with shoes only slightly flattened, a disintegrated sock, and a mangle array of navy blue clothes covered with white spots suspiciously resembling that well known Winthrop plaster, apparently told the tale of the disaster.

When the two finally recovered their breaths, the paler one said in a betraying small voice, "Just think, two minutes before, I was sitting right there in front of it!"

Three of Faculty Make Talks at A. A. U. W. Toy Show
Home Ec. Classes Solicit Toys; Majors Is Chairman

Three of the Winthrop faculty spoke at the American Association of University Women's toy show at the Episcopal parish house last Thursday and Friday, according to Miss Etta Majors, chairman of the show.

Dr. Hampton Jarrell, professor of English, discussed "Stories for Young Children"; Miss Janette Anteburn, assistant professor of public school music, spoke on "Musical Experiences Every Child Should Have"; and Miss Stella Bradford, instructor in psychology, lectured on "Development of the Child Through Play."

Miss Dowell, treasurer of the A. A. U. W., presided over the toy show in the afternoon; Dr. Elizabeth Johnson, president of the association, was master of ceremonies at the evening lectures.

"Soliciting toys from Rock Hill merchants, and arranging them according to age groups, members of the home economics classes had much to do with the success of the toy show," said Miss Majors.

"Waks Up and Live" Stars Bernie, Faye
Walter Winter, Al, Ben Bernie and his orchestra, Allee Faye, Faye Kelly, Ned Sparks, Jack Haley, and numbers of others will be seen in "Waks Up and Live" tomorrow night in Main auditorium.
The plot is built around the Winchell-Bernie feud. Jack Haley, a Radio-Caster guide, fearfully sings into what he thinks is a dead microphone. He proves to be good, and the world in general and Winchell and Bernie in particular are eager to find the "phantom crooner."
Allee Faye promises to deliver the phantom and then tricks him to overcome his "mike" fright.

Glee Club Honored

Twenty members of the Winthrop college glee club will sing in the state college chorus at the Columbia music festival the latter part of March.

The Columbia music festival is an annual affair and much interest is being shown in the all-state college chorus which will be featured this year among the many other outstanding events.

A cushion seat, we've heard it said, wards off chill winds from heel to head. In which respect its chief creation's Much like No Draft Ventilation's.

Folks take such things as No Draft Ventilation as a matter of course now that all GM cars have this improvement. But when you add Knee-Action, the Unisteel Body, the Turret Top, improved Hydraulic Brakes and a steady parade of betterments—you see how a great organization moves ahead—using its resources for the benefit of the public—giving greater value as it wins greater sales.
