Dolphin Club Presents Annual Water Show

Winthrop students view the exhibit. The performance of "Big Country" by the Ballet America received a standing ovation from students and guests in Byrnes Auditorium on Feb. 5. Pictured to the right is a scene from the dances of the ballet.

The Winthrop Fine Arts Association's Folk Festival was held last week and offered many cultural opportunities to both students, faculty, and guests to the campus. A display of ceramics, textiles, wood, and other crafts by the Southern Highland Handicraft Guild was a highlight of the festival. Pictured above on the left are several of the craftsmen showing their work.

The show begins with the modern ship painting from "The President" by N. S. Schmitt, performed by young circus trainer Tom and Tom's daughter, a member of the Midwest's only circus. The closing act is "The President" by N. S. Schmitt, performed by young circus trainer Tom and Tom's daughter, a member of the Midwest's only circus.

Language Requirement's Need Evaluation; Updating

At some point in a freshman's life he may come to realize that it is a very difficult language to learn. He may also come to realize that it is important to have this language ability, but he may not know how to acquire it. What he needs is a language major.

The reason that is given is that a student's education should be very broad. Consequently, many courses are required in the areas of science, the arts, and sociology. We feel that two years of a foreign language is required for all students. But three years? After all, we study English from the day we are born, and do we really need three more years? What is the purpose of learning a foreign language?

We ask that a study be made into this requirement and the proper evaluations be made. There are many students who feel that this requirement is entirely absurd. Will someone please start listening to the opinions of the ones who are dictated to--the students.

Professors At Winthrop College

Winthrop College is fortunate to have many superior professors on its faculty. Developmental apartments are even recognized as the best in the state of their kind.

Despite the general knowledge among the students of the "topnotch" professors, the students are seldom publicly recognized for their contributions to the college as a whole.

Consequently, the JOHNSONIAN, with this issue, has begun a weekly column in which a professor who is considered one of the best will be spotlighted. We ask for your suggestions and opinions as to your favorite professors.

We hope that other professors will profit from this column as well. Everyone can learn from another person. Perhaps professors will evaluate their own teaching techniques after reading of other professors' successes.

Let's face the issue. Some faculty members fail in their main objective of getting students to use their language skills. In class attendance, students who realize that the professor expects improvement in their language ability are usually the ones who fail to make the students who fail to make the students who do not care.

Winthrop Students Relate Trials Of Practice Teaching

By CHRY MOORE

When Beverly Lynskey, a junior English major, won a beauty contest, she realized that she wanted to be a teacher. By the time she was in high school, she was very aware of her limited teaching potential. "I knew I could have a great impact on my students in a high school setting," she said. "So I started planning my education at that time." Beverly is now a teacher at Smith's College and is working on her master's degree in education.

The senate passed several bills, including the resolution to build a new library on campus. The resolution was introduced by Senator John Smith, who said that the library is needed to provide adequate space for student learning.
