Students lose right to evaluate professors

BY KATHY KIRKPATRICK

Meeting date for the committee to review the dosing of MacFeat nursery has not been set, according to Mrs. Legale Hamilton, Trustee member appointed to the committee. SM said that she would like to impress on students that the committee will not meet while Winthrop is closed for Christmas. "It's our intent to meet while all the students and faculty are there, so we can get their opinions," Hamilton said. "I'm sure of that. We'll meet as long as is necessary," she added.

The issue began in September when President Vail said that he was looking for better alternatives for students in Early Childhood Education when he decided to close MacFeat nursery and Withers kindergarten. Students, parents, and alumni opposed the closings and organized themselves into various groups to protest. Letters and phone calls were directed to the Board of Trustees with hopes of securing a review of the decision.

During the November 4 Board of Trustees meeting, Howard L. Burns, chairman, announced that a committee would be formed to investigate the issue. Cyril B. Busbee, Mrs. Legale Hamilton, and Mrs. Jim McElveen were appointed.

Rumors dispelled

Chief Robert F. Williams and Resident Assistant are asking shower in Bancroft dormitory, women to be careful when walking around campus, according to Jennifer Bolt, head RA in Bancroft. Bolt said that at high noon, Wednesday, November 29, a man walked into the women's shower in Bancroft dormitory. "They said he was probably in his thirties, five feet ten to six feet. He was white with black hair and beard shaved," she said. "Laura Brooks, the Resident Director, called security. Chief Williams answered the phone and the girl on the shower went right out," Bolt said. "We got word to the students to be on the look-out and advise us whenever they see someone around," Williams said. "Anytime they see him they need to report it."

Communication gap in financial aid

Shortly before Thanksgiving, it was brought to my attention that there is a flaw in communications between the Financial Aid office and the students receiving aid. One student, to whom an award had been granted, came to the Financial Aid office and reported that he (the aid recipient) would be earning by January as much as was permitted according to the student’s calculations. He was frustrated. According to the system, he would not be eligible to earn aid money after first semester, but he was also spending at a rapid pace. With no incoming money, this indeed seems impossible.

This is a serious problem. I went to see Millie Bethea, Financial Aid director, to find out just how a student financially secure one minute can suddenly find himself without money the next.

Bethea said that the financial aid system depends on an analysis of need based on the Financial Aid Form, which is filled out by every financial aid student. This form, as well as all the forms, declares whether a student is independent, meaning he gets a contribution from a parent or guardian; or independent, meaning all contributions come from himself, or a combination of these. The contribution from the student or parent is subtracted from the budget (which is the total cost of tuition, fees, room and board, plus miscellaneous expenses) and the remainder is called the financial need,” said Bethea.

“The college meets the need through loans, work, grants, or a combination of these,” she said. According to Bethea, “college-based” means that the college administers aid from the federal government and represents the most superior of the student aid. (“Now, now,” said Bethea. “We don’t call it federal aid!”)

“College funding Direct Loan Program (FIDLO), the Supplemental Education Opportunity Grant (SEOG), and the College Work-Study program are college-based programs, and the federal government is not involved. “The college-based” means that the college administers aid from the federal government to the school each year. “The college funding Direct Loan Program (FIDLO), the Supplemental Education Opportunity Grant (SEOG), and the College Work-Study program are college-based programs, and the federal government is not involved. “The college-based” means that the college administers aid from the federal government to the school each year. “The college-based” means that the college administers aid from the federal government to the school each year.

A student who receives aid from any of these three programs cannot receive (from all sources combined) more aid than the FAFSA-based need analysis says he is eligible for.

The college is also able to provide some financial aid. Sources include scholarships, department work, grants or loans. “Scholarships are not federally funded and are not determined by this office,” said the college.

Dr. Mary T. Littjohn, director of Student Affairs, said, “When a student can’t afford to go to college, he can’t afford to go. And when a student can’t afford to go, he can’t afford to go. It costs the college a lot of money in the long run.”

Bethea said, “We’re instituting information to send out to students who aren’t taught how to think anyway to separate the students who aren’t taught how to think. But this can never happen, for the professor’s decision to think is often the best means of preparation for your college test.”

It is impossible to expect students who aren’t taught how to think anyway to separate the students who aren’t taught how to think. But this can never happen, for the professor’s decision to think is often the best means of preparation for your college test. Letters to the editor

Applause and correction

Dear Miss Smith,

I was proud to finally see an article in THE JOHNSONIAN that upgraded instead of degraded Winthrop College. It was almost to the point that I did not want to pick up a copy because of the nature of many articles directed to the formerly known APATHETIC Winthrop College. Let alone, this is my second year as a Resident Assistant, and I am happy to say that the Student Government has always backed me up with their support and action, until now.

Last year I had three cases to appear before judicial board. All three cases were upheld in my favor, but the thing that impressed me the most was that the public prosecutor, who defended my cases, was a helpful, available person. He came within hours after I had gotten in touch with him and wrote out a statement before appearing to the board, the prosecutor once again asked for the facts and compared them with the earlier statement. Along with all of the above, he would make several visits in between the incident and the judicial board appearance to verify any unclear or vague statements.

This year, however, there seems to be some kind of a problem. The present prosecutor, Donnle Campbell, can never be reached, and if one is lucky enough to reach him, it doesn't do any good because apparently he has too many other things to do. I have had a case recently that Donnle was supposed to handle, but between the time I finally made contact and the present, I have had three conversations with him. The first problem is that all three conversations were by telephone. The first call I received was because I had left messages with two people to please have him get in touch with me (this was after trying all day—at least six times). During this first call, I gave him all the details of the incident. The second call I received from him was at 12:30 in the morning. Unfortunately since I am normally in bed by that time, I have very little recollection of the call, other than the fact that Donnle was trying to find out what day he had gotten in touch with me the first time. The third call was the best—he wanted me to tell him all over again what happened because he forgot to write it down the first time. And if all of the above does not convince you that he can't handle his job, he took another step forward when he did not even bother to get in touch with me and let me know that the case had been moved to another day, and that I did not need to get off of work to be there (which I did.)

If I were in Donnle's shoes, it would bother me a great deal to know that having never met someone, I could leave such a lasting bad impression.

Sincerely,
Karen Sillvent

P.S. I would like to add that "Big John's" toga party, though quite successful, was not the first. Winthrop's first toga party, which incidentally arrived before Clemson's first, was held September 14, 1978 in the lobby of Margaret Nance Hall. This costume is moving!

Disappointed with public prosecutor

Dear Editor,

I have been a student at Winthrop College for the third year now and have always had the greatest admiration and respect for the Student Government officials. Also, this is my second year as a Resident Assistant, and I am happy to say that the Student Government has always backed me up with their support and action, until now.

This year, however, there seems to be some kind of a problem. The present prosecutor, Donnle Campbell, can never be reached, and if one is lucky enough to reach him, it doesn't do any good because apparently he has too many other things to do. I have had a case recently that Donnle was supposed to handle, but between the time I finally made contact and the present, I have had three conversations with him. Unfortunately since I am normally in bed by that time, I have very little recollection of the call, other than the fact that Donnle was trying to find out what day he had gotten in touch with me the first time. I will improve

Dear Editor,

During the past few weeks, it has come to my attention that a question has arisen as to whether or not I am capable of executing the office of Public Prosecutor. First of all, this is a necessary and involved office. My responsibilities are that I represent the college and the Student Government Association at all times on appeals and violations of college policy. As a student elected office holder, I, to the best of my ability, try to implement these policies. However, there have been times this semester when I have been working on five cases at a time. This is not an easy job.

The Resident Assistant is a very vital source of evidence before and during a case. I feel that my responsibilities as Public Prosecutor do not confine me to my room to hear calls and complaints, I try to make myself available at all times however, due to the fact that I am a student, I have the same class responsibilities as any other student at Winthrop. I have a long way to go before I don't do any every day, and I have an Assistant Public Prosecutor. The Resident Assistants have been given access to a sheet containing both mine and my assistant's names and numbers.

In the past, I feel that the office needed more efficient and effective. I feel that it is unfair to compare me and judge me by the past performance of those who have held my position. Each person has implemented and carried out the duties and responsibilities differently. This is my first year with the Judicial Branch, and I will continue to improve.

In conclusion, I would like to have the Resident Assistants as friends and co-workers. In the future, I hope this will be possible. I feel that a better relationship with them will make my job more efficient.

Thank you,
Donnie Campbell
Public Prosecutor

According to Vail, until 1974, the state made appropriations to colleges in accordance with each September enrollment. For every full-time student there would be a certain amount of dollars appropriated.

In 1975 the state began giving a set dollar amount for appropriations, instead of dollars per student. "At that point Winthrop's enrollment started going back up," he said. "But because they started in 1975 with the bottom line figure, Winthrop suffered. The enrollment has been growing rather significantly, so the student appropriation has been going down instead of up."

Vail said that in October of 1978 all colleges had to sacrifice 8 percent of their appropriations. "The state saw revenue falling way short of what they had expected," he said. "That started a new bottom line for us and that bottom line has remained basically unchanged since then."

According to state appropriation figures, the dollar amount has gone up. Vail said this is true because the legislature made another significant change in appropriations. "They gave us approximately $800,000 we had not had before. At the same time, Winthrop was then expected to pay all employee benefits—workmen's compensation, social security, retirement, and insurance, etc."

The trouble is that the bill ran to one million plus," Vail said. "They didn't give us enough money to pay for the benefits. Extra money came out of fees."

"Results of what happened to Winthrop are that because the net appropriation seems to be going down and enrollment going up, we've been forced out of necessity to take more and more of the money we we ought to be using for supplies and equipment and transferring it into money for people. We're reached a breaking point," Vail said.

According to Vail, another reason for Winthrop's financial crunch is that Winthrop has not had what the other institutions have. "For too long, over many decades, Winthrop has not been treated quite the same way as other institutions in the state it came to support," he said.

Over the past ten years an estimated million dollars has been appropriated for major plant improvement projects. Vail said that Winthrop has received between 1 and 3 percent of that appropriation.

"We neither condition nor want to give the impression of trying to cut the other institutions in any way. All we look for is an equitable share," he said.

Vail said that the alternatives include an increase in student fees and a reduction in the number of people employed at Winthrop. A cut in personnel also means a cut or a pinch to some programs.

Vail said, "My task is to balance the budget and try to monitor the distribution of funds. We've got some very severe inequities."

Vail said that he has compared schools (both Winthrop) by the number of students and programs. "Money is not distributed fairly," he said.

"I don't know quite frankly what we're going to do," Vail said. "At this point, I'm simply raising some caution flags and indicating all across the college that there may have to be some cuts."

He said that he will return in January to the State Legislature once they are back in session, and bring the cry. "Come February we will seek some indication of whether or not we're going to do any better with regard to appropriations," he said.

"I can't predict at this hour what will be decreed in doing because I cannot know just how much effort will be made by people who are involved in the effort to try to gain a better response from the legislature," Vail said.
Six attend Students State Legislature assembly

By Margaret Carroll

The South Carolina Student State Legislature assembled at the state house in Columbia, S.C., on the 17th day of November, and six of Winthrop's students attended. Jimmie Williamson, delegate chairman, was accompanied by Student Government Association (SGA) President Dan Urschel, Vice-President Debbie Grimes, Rbbble Sako, Janet Adams, and Pati Abbott.

SCSSL is an organization composed of students from many South Carolina state colleges. Some of those in attendance with Winthrop were from Clemson University, U.S.C. at Columbia, Francis Marion College, The Citadel, and the College of Charleston.

The major purpose of S.C.S.S.L. is to promote student involvement in the state legislature and to give these students a better understanding of how this legislature operates.

Those students that participate introduce new bills in S.C.S.S.L. every year. These are put on the main floor for discussion and debate. If the bills are passed by the majority of attending students, then the bills are compiled into one large book called the bill book. These pieces of legislation are then taken to the state legislators in the form of recommendations. If they are passed, they can and sometimes do become S.C. state laws.

Williamson introduced four bills and three of these four were passed by the members of S.C.S.S.L.

The first of the bills passed stated that the president of SGA of state supported institutions would become an ex-officio (by virtue of one's office) of the Board of Trustees. This will make the president of SGA a voting member in the Board of Trustees. This particular bill was co-sponsored by students from the College of Charleston and Francis Marion College.

The second of these bills stated that there is need for an Investigation into the working of S.C.S.S.L. because over a period of two or three years there has been several resignations and a few problems.

The third of these calls for having a doctor on duty or on call 24 hours a day to serve the students.

Six attend Students State Legislature assembly

Every year Winthrop's Student Government Association (SGA) sponsors representatives to the Model United Nations in Princeton, New Jersey.

Winthrop will be sending nine students to represent two delegations. (The countries for which the delegations represent are unknown at this time.) SGA is now taking applications for these positions and they will hold interviews to select those nine students on December 4 and 5.

The delegations will be given specific countries to represent and the students will debate with the other delegations. The other delegations will be made up of students from other colleges. The Model U.N. is a program based on the same scale as the procedures of the actual United Nations. It is a form of competition in that the schools which are represented compete against each other for awards. These awards are based on how much preparation is involved and how well the countries are represented by these students.

In past years, Winthrop has competed against such schools as Harvard and Yale and has come away boasting several awards on its presentations. The Model U.N. is designed to give college students a better understanding of world affairs through showing them how the United Nations operates.

Recently, the Student Government Association has been undertaking new projects to help the students of Winthrop to be better informed about current happenings. SGA has set up new information centers in local points on the campus. These centers offer students campus literature such as catalogs, handbooks, and campus maps. They also post news of current happenings along with recognition of jobs well done and important notes from state meetings. These centers enable any student to be kept up-to-date and aware of the many things that SGA and other organizations on campus are doing and will do in the future.

SGA hopes to set up more information centers in the near future and also some suggestion boxes.

Winthrop College Radio Station is used to teach students enrolled in Communications 445 and to inform and entertain, according to Mr. Cuyler P. Fields, advisor.

Fields said that a prospective radio student should take COM 201—Voice and Diction, and English or Writing courses before enrolling in the radio class. Announcers for the on-air programs have usually completed COM 845.

A student interested in becoming an announcer for the campus station must apply for the job, audition for the position, and be interviewed. "In selecting the announcers, the voice is listened to carefully and newswriting experience is considered. The off-air of WCRO select the announcer," said Fields.

Announcers are not required to have a license to operate the station, but they are encouraged to get a third class license. "It's good because area radio stations provide competition, many campus stations do not listen to WCRO. "We try to emphasize to the student that this is their station," said Fields.

Your announcers are employed on a nine month basis. While all the announcers work on the air, three have positions such as news director, program director, and station manager," explains Fields.

"David Morris, a senior Communications major from Andrews, S.C., is program director. December is his junior year and is now station manager. He has had two years of broadcasting experience. "I worked at WUMB-FM in Georgetown during the summer, and I worked at the campus station during my junior year," said Morris.

Morris said that she has not encountered any major problems as station manager of WCRO, except the campus station can improve by playing a variety of music from the soul and pop charts.

"Although we are a campus station, we can offer a good relationship with our listeners, WCRO plays no more than two commercials an hour. Because WCRO has student disc jockeys, we can identify with the students they want to hear. Unlike other stations, on WCRO we are always open for requests," said Morris.

Morris hopes to pursue a successful career in broadcasting, preferably television.

"I enjoy getting calls and responses from Listeners. I would describe myself as an egotist, I feel like hot stuff, and an idealistic because I want things right," Payne, a Communications major, said his "utopia" dream is to become a sports broadcaster on network television.

News Director Pamela (P.J.) Fields is a senior Communications major from Newfield, Wilson has had previous broadcasting experience with WTKY-FM in Kingsport.

"I've always enjoyed communicating with people, whether it be through the air, I'm looking forward to playing music and communicating with the Winthrop audience," said Wilson.

Her career ambition is to become a successful national news commentator.

The present WCRO top 40 music is played on Monday by Brunson, Tuesday by Morris, Wednesday by Wilson, and Thursday by Payne. Each announcer is on the air from six-thirty in the morning to eleven at night. On the weekend from 4:30 p.m. to 1:00 a.m. the station is on automation. It is also on automation during the week two hours before the announcers go on the air," said Morris.

"Because WCRO has student disc jockeys, we can identify with the students and the music they want to hear."

Fantasies come to life on screen

Animator Susan Pitt will present lush visual fantasies on film at Winthrop College Tuesday, Dec. 5.
The program, which is part of the Independent American Film Makers: Southern Circuit, will be at 8 p.m. in Joynes Center for Education. Admission is free to the public.
Pitt used cutout animation in her film "Crocus," a winner in the New York Erotic Film Festival, and has experimented with multi-sectional formats in which projected animations are combined with live actors and objects on stage.
A film in progress, "Asparagus," combines animation with three-dimensional miniature sets, including 200 tiny puppets. Pitt, who has worked on the film for 10 years, calls it a "world-view poem."
Pitt's film making has been combatted by a full-time job at Harvard University, the Minneapolis College of Art and Design, and schools in Berlin and the Netherlands.
Her films have been screened internationally, and she has received film making grants from the National Endowment for the Arts and the American Film Institute.
Independent American Film Makers: Southern Circuit, a travelling program of films and film makers, is co-sponsored by Winthrop College, the Greenville County Museum of Art, the Columbia Museum of Art, the College of Charleston and Community Center of Charleston, the High Museum of Art and Image in Atlanta, and the New York State Council, a frequent of the Mississippi Museum of Art in Jackson, Miss.

Some lucky people....
If you see somebody with an unusually dark tan for this time of year, chances are they spent Thanksgiving with the Winthrop Outing Club on the world's whitest sand beaches near Pensacola, Florida.
Also, chances are they'll be smiling because in addition to wonderful weather, the water was clean and warm, the food was fantastic, and the location was a camper's dream, nestled among live oaks and pines with the sky-blue Gulf of Mexico to the south and Pensacola Bay to the north.
Fort Pickens State Park is situated at the very tip of a long narrow finger of barrier reef and was an important military installation during the early 1900's charged with protecting our nation's sensitive underbelly. Now, it is a delicious place to visit and fortifications are open to public exploration.
Dwight Watt searched most of the area and became our local historian. He couldn't get David Tilley or Dr. John Shive to join him as they were chained to their fishing poles and spearguns.

Senate holds tenth meeting

By MARGARET CARROLL

The tenth meeting of the Winthrop College Senate was one of new bills and many questions.

The meeting began with the announcement that Ralph Johnson would be the new Parliamentarian, and Keith Brook was sworn in as a new day-student senator.

Controversies on the issues of parking, the new elections bulletin, and the constitution of the Winthrop College Greek Council filled the meeting.

The issue of parking was the major topic of debate. The senate task force reported on the major topic of debate. The meeting was filled.

Senator Jimmie Williamson said, "My God, there are that many apartment people living here!"

Senator Jan Johnson said, "We were told by Security that we could park there!"

Grimes interrupted her last statement and said, "Senator Troy has the floor."

They spoke and explained why the parking was being changed and elaborated a little on what Johnson had previously stated.

Williamson said, "I don't see where they should be getting that much of a chunk."

Grimes said, "Let me explain something. This is just a recommendation made to the administration and faculty. They will be the ones who take action. We are just stating how we feel the re-arranging should go. Whether they will consider this or not, I don't know."

A question was asked of Grimes as to how soon will the Senate know?

Grimes said, "They have as long as they wish. There's no time limit."

Senator Smith asked, "Will the residents in Dinkins and College parking lots be especially for day-students or can residents park there also?"

Grimes said, "Day only."

Smith said, "The College Avenue parking lots are especially for day-students or can residents also park there also?"

Williamson said that it was necessary to have so many parking spaces for S.A.'s, and "They've got McLaurin, Hampton (parking lot behind Breazeale), and the new one!"

Johnson then proceeded to explain to Williamson why it was necessary to have so many parking spaces for S.A.'s. Johnson said, "The way it stands now, there are some S.A. people who are parking over there behind McLaurin in that small open lot. If they are lucky enough to find a space, they have the whole Hampton lot which is always full. I can never find a place to park there, and there are, I would say, every night, at least 25 to 30 cars over there in that tennis court, at least!"

On Monday through Thursday there are more cars on the weekends in the tennis court parking lot. It is just like anywhere else on campus. There are a lot of people over there behind McLaurin. Williamson contemplated everything that she had said and said, "O.K., now the way this is set up, upon passage of this report, the tennis court parking lot, Hampton, York (open space behind McLaurin) will all be resident apartments."

Grimes said, "Let me clarify something. According to the report, the tennis court parking is not supposed to be there, so let's just leave it out, O.K.?"

Johnson said, "We were told by Security that we could park there!"

Grimes interrupted her last statement and said, "Senator Troy has the floor."

There was some time during the meeting given to the topic of guidelines for the Anthology. The Johnsons, and others, were stated during the meeting that it was necessary to give these organizations more time to set up their guidelines. These guidelines are to contain the salaries of the members of these organizations only.

The Sisko kid rides again?

By LYNDAL HADDOX

In August of this year, a new position was created. The position was Board-graduate assistant. Robbie Sisko, a 23-year-old Francis Marion student, was appointed to the position. He majored in business administration and is now working on a degree in business administration.

When asked how he came to Winthrop, Robbie said, "I thought at that time, if you work hard enough, you can make it happen. It does not always work out right at that time, but after a while the failure reinforces and strengthens your resolve," added Robbie.

"My background at Francis Marion includes four years of student government, the chairman of the student government, the president of the South Carolina Student Government, and the president of the Student Government Association," said Robbie. "The job of a coordinator with the Program Board is a challenging position. It requires both organizational skills and the ability to deal with people. I have always enjoyed working with people and I believe that I can be effective in this role."

Robbie added, "I have always been interested in the arts and I believe that I can contribute to the Winthrop community in this regard. I am excited about the opportunity to work with the Program Board and to help shape the future of the community."
The library blues: part 2 -- The hours

By KATHY KIRKPATRICK

We all know the feeling. Nine-fifty on Sunday evening. Monday's assignments are still undone, not to mention last Friday's. You're winding up for that final plunge into organic chemistry when suddenly—total darkness. As you grope desperately for your left sneaker, you wonder if it's the end of the world. Not quite, but almost. Dacus Library is closing.

Still, if Winthrop students want longer library hours, they have a funny way of showing it. According to Assistant Librarian Larry Milin, library use drops drastically after 9 p.m. each weekday evening, and of the few students that remain from 10 until 11, most are working on homework assignments rather than using library resources.

"The library is a very expensive study hall," Milin said. "There are literally millions of dollars in materials in this building that require security. If students need a facility to study there are less expensive alternatives.

According to Milin, Dacus Library hours have been determined largely on the basis of student response, though a tight budget is also an important factor.

"Two years ago when our budget became tighter we looked to see when no one was here and reduced the hours accordingly," Milin said. "We had very few students on Friday night and Saturday morning. When we began to close the library at 6 p.m. on Friday and reopen at 10 a.m. Saturday morning, no one asked why."

That was in 1976. The same year the library staff conducted a week-long survey of over 5,000 people. The "overwhelming majority" were pleased with the library's services and most said they made use of the library before 10 p.m. each weekday evening. According to Shirley Tarletoo, Librarian, Dacus is "constantly in the 80 percent bracket.

A LOOK AT HISTORY AND CURRENT EVENTS

By Dr. Birdsell Vauht, Professor of History, Winthrop College

Cecil Rhodes

Few people have had a country named for them, much less two. Cecil Rhodes did. Rhodesia was the independent country of Zambia before the year 1890. Cecil Rhodes did.

At age 13, Rhodes adopted his life's motto: "I shall die.

And while still in his teens, he decided that celibacy was preferable to marriage. He stuck all his life to this opinion. In 1867, diamonds were discovered in southern Africa. Three years later, at age 17, Rhodes arrived to join his older brother in Graham's Town in Natal. Together they turned to prospecting for diamonds at Kimberley and soon became wealthy men.

Rhodes became acquainted with southern Africa and traveled widely. He foresaw a great future both for the land and for himself.

"For four months," he wrote, "I walked between earth and sky, and when I looked down I said this earth should be English, and when I looked up I said the English should rule this earth.

In later years, Rhodes would proclaim: "I went to the stars, I visited the planets and the stars if I could."

Returning to England in 1878, Rhodes entered Parliament. He spent the next several years leading a double life as a university undergraduate in England and a diamond prospector in Africa.

In 1881, Rhodes received his bachelor's degree from Oxford University and won election to the parliament of Cape Colony, the British possessions at the Cape of Good Hope. His wealth increased and by the end of the decade, he controlled 50 percent of the world's diamond production.

At the end of the 1880s, Queen Victoria granted Rhodes a charter for the British South Africa Company, an act which triggered this royal authorization, Rhodes proceeded to establish the Rhodesias.

By 1890, Rhodes had become prime minister of Cape Colony. He became involved in attempts to unite the two independent republics of the Transvaal and the Orange Free State. The two republics had been established earlier in the century by the Boers, the descendants of the original Dutch settlers at the Cape of Good Hope. When the Boers took control of the Cape in 1814, the Boers had moved inland to escape British rule.

The attempt to settle the Rhodesias brought Rhodes to power. He gave up his office. Even in semi-diagreement, he continued to be a dominant figure in southern Africa.

Rhodes remained a fabulously wealthy man. He had few personal items and his income ranged widely. He had no children imported from Europe, but while he continued to live, they no longer sang. The empire Rhodes built is all that remains.

In 1899, Britain's war against the Boer republics. By this point, Rhodes was extremely ill of heart disease. He wrote his will, assigning much of his fortune to the endowment of the Rhodes scholarships to enable students from the United States, Germany, and Britain's dominions and colonies to study.

As the Boer War was drawing to a close with Britain about to win, Rhodes died, on July 26, 1896.

The empire Rhodes built is all that remains. Cecil Rhodes was one of the truly great figures of the age of European imperialism.

Players design own uniforms

As Winthrop introduced men’s basketball this season, new uniforms were a necessity. And the day of designing and ordering uniforms by phone was over. "We went out with '23-eBdoo,'" athletic director and basketball coach Ed Gordon reveals. He undertook himself the task of designing uniforms. But he was assisted input from some team members and called upon identical twins Donnie and Ronnie Cramer, and Dave Hampton, the team's tri-captains.

The uniforms, 6-10 Donnie and 6-9 Ronnie, along with the dwarfed Hampton at 6-1, responded by creating beautiful garments made in the school's colors—garnet and gold and blue. Gold, yes, blue. Although the color blue is not one of Winthrop's colors, it was added as a special attraction.

"Winthrop used to be an all-female teacher's college," Donnie says. "The women had to wear blue skirts and white shirts as their daily attires and we decided to keep some Winthrop tradition in the uniforms by adding blue trim. It is out of respect to the old Winthrop." I think it is a pretty nice touch.

Men win two in Eagle Club doubleheader

The Winthrop men's basketball team defeated Piedmont and Allen in the Eagle Club Doubleheader held at Sullivan Junior High School.

During the first half of the game, the Eagles played possibly their worst half of basketball to date in this young season. Winthrop shot a poor 20 percent from the field and seven with a definite height advantage only for the rebuffed Piedmont 30-26. Piedmont played a steady first half and led at intermission 17-9.

However, to the second half half-excellent defense from the Eagles seemed a remarkable turnaround. The Eagles outscored the Lions 49-22 in the final 20 minutes to win the game 64-52.

One of the major reasons for Winthrop's second half success was the excellent play of forward Brit Hudson, who came off the bench to hit 8 of 12 shots from floor (66 percent). Hudson added 16 points and led the Eagles scoring with 20 points followed by Ronnie Creamer with 16.

In Saturday's game against Allen, Winthrop seemed in command with a 32-31 lead seven minutes from the end of the game.

However, the Yellow Jackets rallied and closed within three points at the 2:30 mark. Crucial free throws by Bennie Bennett and a bucket by Ronnie Creamer served up the game for Winthrop with a final score of 74-71.

Ronnie Creamer was the game's leading scorer with 25 points; brother Donnie added 16; Donnie Schmidt, 12; and Bennett, 10. Guard Dave Hampton led all rebounders with 13.

The next home game is Dec. 7 against USC-Alumni.

Winthrop defeats Catawba 109-92

By BILL FLOYD

The scoring and rebounding of Ronnie and Donnie Creamer led Winthrop to a victory 109-92 over Catawba on Nov. 16, in the second night of the Winthrop College Doubleheader played at Sullivan Junior High Gymnasium.

Before a sellout crowd, the Eagles jumped out to an early lead and maintained it throughout the game. Ronnie Creamer led the Eagles scoring with 23 points and also tallied 14 rebounds to his credit. Winthrop led 50-41 at halftime. Winthrop led by 18 or more points throughout the second half as the Eagles shot a sizzling 61 percent from the floor.

Ronnie Creamer was the game's leading scorer with 25 points; brother Donnie added 16; Donnie Schmidt, 12; and Bennett, 10. Guard Dave Hampton led all rebounders with 9.

The next home game is Dec. 7 against USC-Alumni.

Men's basketball round-up

By DAVID JACKSON

After six games, Niel Gordon's first-year Winthrop Eagles have a record of four wins against two defeats.

Following their opening win over Wingate on Nov. 1, Wingate was defeated by Gardner-Webb 113-77, defeated Catawba 109-92, bowed to Lander 84-77, defeated Piedmont 54-49, and lost to Allen 77-74.

The Eagles schedule has not been easy. Four of the Winthrop opponents made their district playoffs last year. Lander was defeated last season by District Six coaches to capture the District's title this year. Gardner-Webb is nationally ranked.

According to Gordon, "Playing these teams early in the season shouldn't hurt the ball club later on. We're getting a lot of good experience."

"I feel good progress being 4-2," said Gordon. The only game I feel bad about is the Gardner-Webb game. They outscored us 103 to 85 points better than we did.

"We've gotten good front line play from Donnie and Ronnie Creamer, and also from Doug Shilmaher, Doug's lead of a nursing home. He's had to guard every team's top forward."

Gordon said guard-play is a major problem for the Eagles. "Inexperience at that position has hurt us. Dave Hampton is the only experienced player we use. Rick Brier, Bennie Bennett, and Gerald McAfee are all essentially freshmen. We're going to have to improve in that area."

Gordon cited one of the team's major strengths as being its depth. "Alan Oms and Gerald McAfee are all tenacious. H.R. Gabel, Bennie Bennett, and Gerald McAfee are all essentially freshmen. We're going to have to improve in that area."

"We're proud of the crowd and their reaction to us tonight. We are for real," Gordon added.

"I'm glad our team didn't give up on us," Coach Niel Gordon said, referring to the loss to Gardner-Webb the night before. "We're going to improve in that area."

"We've gotten great back-ups. Britt Hudson has also been playing well lately. We could go 7 deep."

"Another strong point for the Eagles is defense. We've made noticeable improvement," said Gordon. "That's another strong point for the Eagles is defense. "We've made noticeable improvement," said Gordon. ".That's another strong point for the Eagles is defense. "We've made noticeable improvement," said Gordon.
