These are just a few of the characters you'll meet at Winthrop University this year, courtesy of the Department of Theatre and Dance's Fall One-Acts.

Opening Nov. 20 in Johnson Studio Theatre, the one-acts always feature an entertaining and eclectic mix of plays directed by advanced theatre students.

The one-acts are divided into Group A and Group B.

All's Well that Ends Wrong, directed by Caitlin Bryant of Liberty

Sex Lives of Superheroes, directed by Garrett Whiffen of Anderson, South Carolina

Michael's date, Elenor, is appalled when she finds out that Michael's ex-girlfriend visits Michael's apartment weekly to take away his stuff. He copes with the situation by giving fantasy lectures about comic book heroes' sexual habits. The date is doomed to be a failure until Michael discovers Elenor's obsession...

12 Rounds, directed by Madia Medico of Summerville

Finding love in a bar gets a comedic turn in this one-act.

Little Red Riding Hood, directed by Sarah Stewart of Ridgeville

The classic fairy tale like you've never seen it before.

Group B showtimes are 8 p.m. Nov. 21 and 2 p.m. Nov. 22:

Resurrection of Daughter Liliane, directed by La'Rae Carmichael of Spartanburg

Artist Liliane Lincoln is used to exposing herself via her bold and colorful artwork. But she soon realizes that to survive, she must come to terms with what she has kept hidden from herself.

The Spotted Man, directed by Frank Zellers of Lancaster

The end of the human race may be near when a good man is cursed with a strange disease.

One Tit, a Dyke, and Gin, directed by Rachel King of Rock Hill
