Christmas unites campus, community

PAO Release

Christmas will come to the Winthrop College campus in a burst of lights, song and dance on Dec. 4, and thousands of students, faculty and staff members are expected to gather in celebration of the holiday.

The Christmas season comes to the campus each year when the School of Music presents a free, public program of music and dance that combines the talents of various on- and off-campus groups. The program is one of the most popular campus events presented during the school year and in the past has attracted a standing-room-only crowd to the 3,500-seat Byrnes Auditorium.

Prior to the 7 p.m. program, students traditionally gather to perform Christmas carols and watch a lighted float, which is followed by the switch on the string lights adorning a 95-foot magnolia tree in front of Tillman Hall, the historic administration building on central campus.

Guests attending the program in Byrnes Auditorium will be greeted in the lobby by a 95-foot Christmas tree decorated that day by members of the Winthrop Club, an employee organization.

An appearance by Santa Claus and an audience sing-a-long are part of the program in Byrnes that will feature several campus choirs, a community ballet company, bell ringers from a local church and choral ensembles from two Rock Hill high schools and a junior high school. Winthrop College faculty members will also be featured in solo performances.

Schedules to perform are the Castle Heights Junior High School Choral Ensemble, the Rock Hill High School Choral Ensemble, the Northwestern High School Choral Ensemble, the Saint John's Ringers and the Winthrop College Chorale, Chorus, Singers, Concert Band and Dance Theatre.

Faculty members Jim Cross, piano instructor, and Paul Martin, associate professor of music, will perform a piano duet of Appalachian Christmas carols and Jerry Helton, associate professor of music, will sing a tenor solo.

Scheduled to perform are the Rock Hill Concert Ballet Company, featuring Anne Blackwell, Tom Mitchell and Regina Davis, performing variations from Peter Tchaikovsky's "The Nutcracker."

Later in the program the combined high school and college choirs will sing "Carol of the Bells," a Ukrainian Christmas carol.

The program finale will feature the combined choirs and band performing Alfred Burt's "Carol of the Bells," an arrangement by Robert Eager, professor of music, who is himself and also to offer students the opportunity to see more of the world than they might find in South Carolina.

When Mann receives enough response, he will meet with the students to discuss departures.

Mann said that he is planning the trip, which is underwritten by the Winthrop Athletic Department, first floor Crawford Health Center, for 2 dollars each. Money from tickets sold here goes directly to the Winthrop athletic fund, while money from tickets sold at the door goes to the tournament committee.

The tournament semi-finals will be at 7 and 9 p.m. on Friday night. The championship game is scheduled at 3:30 p.m. on Saturday afternoon and will be televised by WBTV, Channel 5.

WBTV hosts Eagles

This weekend, Nield Gordon's Winthrop Eagles will participate with nine other North Carolina teams in the WBTV/Carolina Basketball Classic at Belmont Abbey College in Belmont, N.C. (near Charlotte).

Winthrop's first round game will be on Thursday, Dec. 6, at 9 p.m. against Johnson C. Smith University.

Tickets for this game may be purchased from the Winthrop Athletic Department, first floor Crawford Health Center, for 2 dollars each. Money from tickets sold here goes directly to the Winthrop Athletic fund, while money from tickets sold at the door goes to the tournament committee.

The tournament semi-finals will be at 7 and 9 p.m. on Friday night. The championship game is scheduled at 3:30 p.m. on Saturday afternoon and will be televised by WBTV, Channel 5.

On the verge of war?

In announcing his request for an urgent meeting of the Security Council to discuss the crisis in Iran, United Nations Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim said: "In the current situation, tension has now escalated to such an extent that a threat has been created not only to the peace and stability of the region, but to the entire world."

In a speech in the United Nations General Assembly of U.S. citizens, Mr. Waldheim has made a strong plea for the United States to reconsider its participation in the war. In his address, he pointed out that the United States is financing a major military action under the guise of fighting terrorism. He further stated that the United States has failed to make any meaningful contribution to solving the crisis in Iran.

Unfortunately, protests in this country have little effect on changing conditions for the hostages. What these protests have caused is animosity toward Iranian students studying in this country. Often, these students are innocent of ill will toward America and undeserving of persecution.

The rally held at Winthrop Nov. 15 was good in that it showed that WC students were aware of the international consequences of the conflict and could take a stand. They wanted to show that we're not apathetic, as one proponent asserted. This desire to exhibit Winthrop's "with-it-ness" was evident as sign-bearers and chanters gravitated toward television cameras and newsmen.

The rally was the original purpose of the rally, to discourage "America's education of political enemies," as an issue worthy of consideration. At least one college has threatened to expel students who took part in the protest. But what student can afford to lose their college education? A showdown is certain.

In all fairness, the original purpose of the rally, to disassociate Winthrop from Iran, failed. The crowd was split, with some students opposing the rally and others supporting it.

As time passes, the situation becomes more critical. The United States is spending billions of dollars to keep the hostages alive. And yet, despite all the demands for their release, there is still no sign of the hostages.

Is this the way we want to see our government handle an international crisis? I think not. The United States must take a stand and demand the release of the hostages immediately.

Teddy: The Least and the Tarnished

Bruce McDaniel

Teddy was deep water when he made this nationally televised speech ten years ago, but not in the sense that you or I would have been in similar circumstances. The only thing he had to fear was the possible loss of political capital, not criminal charges, which any ordinary person would have received. No, Teddy's wealth and clout enabled him to make a strategic option from the start, and now he apparently thinks that all is forgiven, as he begins his public quest for the highest office in the land.

Teddy has worked hard in the Senate during the past ten years, and although he's never really gotten anything significant accomplished, his face has been prominent on the nation's electronic and obliging news media throughout.

Teddy is undeniably the black sheep of his renowned and influential clan, however, and now that he's finally come out into the open with his presidential ambitions, his shortcomings are likely to be flung in his famous face more frequently than ever before. He is certainly different in many crucial respects from his older brothers.

First of all, he was the worst student of the bunch. Teddy only made it into Harvard by virtue of his father's connections, not his own efforts, and once there, he found himself having difficulties in his studies. Teddy has worked hard in the Senate during the past ten years, and although he's never really gotten anything significant accomplished, his face has been prominent on the nation's electronic and obliging news media throughout.

Teddy can look impressive when he's stumpinbg from behind his famous face more frequently than ever before. He is certainly different in many crucial respects from his older brothers.

The fact is, on the day of the accident, Teddy was released from the hospital with the bright idea of paying money and power, Teddy did most of the laughing.

The real extent of Teddy's influence, however, was not fully revealed until seven years later, in his true moment of crisis: Chappaquiddick.

At eight-thirty on the morning of July 19, 1969, a young woman's body was discovered in the waters of Chappaquiddick's Poucha Pond. An hour and a half later, Teddy summoned to the nearby Edgartown Police Station in a crisp, newly dried suit, Teddy's attorney filled out the accident report, which explained that the Lord of Hyannis Port had been dazed by the affair and that he had repeatedly walked past phones in the area, and then decided to get a good night's sleep in his hotel room, before finally deciding to report the incident nine hours after it had happened.

You might think that Teddy should have been interrogated as a potential suspect of the accident, and perhaps given a test of alcohol levels in his blood, even at this late stage of the game, but no such test was ever taken. For him. "After all," Edgartown Police Chief Donald McAlena was quoted as saying, "when you have a United States Senator reporting, you have to give him some credibility."

But friends, the real horror story only begins at this point, and it concerns the fate of the earthy remains of the victim—Miss Mary Jo Kopechne.

When pulled from the depths, Miss Kopechne's body was found right beside him, and there were reportedly bloodstains on the back of her blouse. Only a thorough analysis of the lungs would have revealed for certain, drowning..."

Teddy was soon back, finally to receive a degree in law. Soon after Teddy got out of school, brother John moved into the White House, leaving his Massachusetts Senate seat vacant. With brother Bobby re-entering the political scene, the possibility of Teddy and his friend, serving the position of U.S. Attorney General, was a shoe-in for the Senate seat, even though he had never done an honest day's work in his life, and at age thirty there had been no political experience at all. As Teddy's opponent said in their T.V. debate just before the election: "If your name was anything but Kennedy, your candidacy would have been a joke!"

It was a joke, of course, but with his resources of inherited money and power, Teddy did most of the laughing.

The real extent of Teddy's influence, however, was not fully revealed until seven years later, in his true moment of crisis: Chappaquiddick.

At eight-thirty on the morning of July 19, 1969, a young woman's body was discovered in the waters of Chappaquiddick's Poucha Pond. Ray Killian speaks

BY CONNIE CHYLSTUN

Ray Killian, vice-president of Belk Stores, spoke to over 150 Winthrop College students at the Textiles, Clothing and Interiors (TCI) fall seminar held Monday, Nov. 12, in Thurmond room 209, according to TCI advisory council member Connie Chylstun.

Cindy Patterson, TCI advisory council member, introduced Killian as author of four books, vice-president, director of personnel and public relations director of Belk stores. He received an honorary doctorate degree from Lenoir-Rhyne College where he did undergraduate work.

In 1969, Killian wrote one of his first books about women entitled THE WORKING WOMAN. He details women's opportunities available to them in business and how to be successful at it.

The vice-president spoke on "new women can take advantage of opportunities in business today and tomorrow." He explained that the social mores have changed and it is acceptable for women to work in high level positions. "Women should be aggressive with their work and seek the position they feel qualified to hold," he said.

Killian said, "The best course a high school student could take is typing and the most beneficial course college students could take is English. A businessman spends over 90 percent of the time communicating. It is extremely important."

Killian advised women preparing for business by stating: "Don't rule out a profession because there are too many males; don't waste time on businesses that don't promote women and never stop studying or learning."

Killian predicts a new woman will emerge in the 80's. She will bring in a job more of a whole personality. She will also develop strong qualities and bring something into a working relationship.

The myths of the "dumb blonde-type woman will be gone."

Who's Who at Winthrop

The 1979-80 edition of Who's Who Among American Universities and Colleges will carry the names of 28 students from Winthrop College, who have been selected as being among the country's outstanding campus leaders.

Campus Nominating Committees and editors of the annual directory have included the names of these students based on their academic achievement, service to the community, leadership in extracurricular activities and potential.

They join an elite group of students selected from more than 1,200 institutions of higher learning in all 50 states, the District of Columbia and several foreign nations.

Outstanding students have been honored in the annual directory since it was first published in 1934.

Also, Dionne Anna Foote, Julia Marie Gilbert, Janice P. Gies, Jonathan C. Hayes, Angela Elaine Hendrix, Bonnie Eleanor Jordan, Ralph James Johnson, Jane Cline Kleckley, Rondrae G. LaFlotte, III, and Lynda Cheryn McCreary.

Also, Joyce Elaine Pieler, Robby Davis Street, Claude Pachisma Sneed, Carolyn Elisabeth Sox, Debra Denise Tolar, Arnold Daniel Unscheider, James C. Williams and Carol Anne Wright, and Dodie Shre Yongue.

Jane Fonda movie

A 1974 Jane Fonda movie will be the last in a series of free art films to be presented this semester at Winthrop College.

"A Doll's House," directed by Joseph Losey, will be shown at 8 p.m., Dec. 12 in the Baruch Room of Joynes Center for Continuing Education.

Ms. Fonda portrays a young woman named Nora who wants to be liberated from a confining home life to find personal satisfaction.

Book and Key expands

Nine seniors in the College of Arts and Sciences were received into Book and Key last night in an initiation ceremony at President Vall's home, according to Dorothy Medin, co-sponsor of Book and Key.

Book and Key requirements are in accordance with national Phi Beta Kappa standards. Names of Book and Key members are listed each year on the bookplate of the current volume of Master's Abstracts, which is presented to Dacus Library by the organization.

Present Book and Key members are Patricia Ann Abbott, History major from Spartanburg, S.C.; Barbana Ann Strickland, B.S., History major from Jacksonville, Fla.; Kathryne Lee Bridges, English major from Rock Hill; Dalea Leiy Farrow, secretary, French major from Central, S.C.; Victoria M. Hensel Johnson, vice-president, Chemistry major from Winston-Salem, N.C.; and Lusted Nelson, president, Psychology major from Gastonia, N.C.

The new members are Amy Lee Brown, English major from Union, S.C.; Martha Marie Campbell, History major; Dorothy M. Gallien, Psychology major, and Fred Eugene Hembree, History major, all three from Rock Hill.

Also, Angela Elaine Hendrix, Political Science major from Aiken, S.C.; Deborah Ann Killinger, Art major from Sumter, S.C.; Deborah Joanne Lowery, Biology major from New Elenton, S.C.; Joyce Elaine Pieler, Political Science major from Monroe, N.C.; and Wayne Edward Worley, History major from Chester, S.C.
Anti-Iranian sentiment erupts

(CPS)—Lloyd Ewart, a student at Lamar State University, who has a protest record extending back to helping organize the 1970 May Day anti-war protest in Washington, yelled at an anti-Iranian rally on the Beaumont, Texas campus that, "The time has come for the American people to lift up their heads and roar like a lion."

The crowd at the Nov. 12 demonstration complied with chants of "GO HOME" and "Kill Them." The Incidents range from throwing eggs at University of California violence. The Incidents range from throwing eggs at University of California campuses earlier in 1979, marching by Iranian nationals here. Jenkinson isn’t sure how many Iranians are here.

Hugh M. Jenkins, executive vice president of the National Association for Foreign Students in America, had similar advice. He observed that Iranian students in the U.S. are visible. "They’re going to catch most of the heat of the American anger until the crisis is resolved."

The "best" on most campuses has been asking Iranian nationals to maintain an uncharacteristically low profile. Texas Governor Bill Clements urged Iranians in his state to stay out of sight and out of mind. "The (Iranian) students are about all (Carter) has to bargain with," he said. The staffer with the House Foreign Relations Committee sees the American economic system was held Nov. 27 at the Audubon Hall.

Webb said that twelve photographs corresponding with the campus-campus activities or student life. I feel that having such photos will enhance the new edition. Webb is a collection of photographs corresponding with the twelve months will be used. All shots need to be horizontal, black and white, and 8 by 10.

Entries should be sent by campus mail to Webb, Dinkins. Winners will be selected by a Student Handbook Committee.

Poetry reading tonight

A poetry reading, featuring two North Carolina poets, will be given at 7:30 p.m. Dec. 3 at the Joynes Center for Continuing Education on the Winthrop College campus. Ruth House of Athens, N.C., will be reading from her collection of poems, "Finding Things in the Dark," which will be published by Briarpatch Press of Davidson, N.C.

Mary Kratt of Charlotte will be presenting selections from her "Spirit Going Barefoot," also to be published by Briarpatch Press of Davidson.

The reading is free to the public.

Economic lectures prepare students

By 1981 all South Carolina high school students will have to complete a course in the study of the American economic system to graduate. Winthrop College’s Center for Economic Education is trying to prepare the students for this new course requirement.

The first in a series of lectures sponsored by the center to acquaint teachers, students and the general public with the American economic system was held Nov. 27 in Kilnar Auditorium on the Winthrop College campus.
Carter's deportation efforts mark policy shift

WASHINGTON, D.C. (CPS)—President Carter's Nov. 10 request that all Iranian students in this country report to the nearest Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) office marks the third shift of administration policy toward Iranians here within the last year.

A violent January demonstra-

tion by Iranian students at the Beverly Hills home of Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi's sister, led to then-Attorney General Griffin Bell's first direct deportation of non-immigrant Iranians.

In the months that followed, the Dept. of Justice, which oversees the INS, almost regularly announced mass deportation programs to round up and deport "non-immigrant Iranians" who had violated the terms of their visas. In February, the INS estimated that nearly 70 percent of the 4,000—6,000 Iranian students in this country then were "out-of-status," and thus eligible to be deported.

However, INS Public Affairs Officer Vern Jarvis told College Press Service at the time that the "out-of-status" Iranians might be difficult because INS computers had a backlog of two million reports, and that records were six months out of date.

There are doubts about the figure's accuracy, since the out-of-status students are not easily counted.

Hugh M. Jenkins, executive vice president of the National Association for Foreign Students in America, noted last week that "the students who are perfectly legal — the ones who are on campus — are the ones who are easiest to find. It's the out-of-status people who are the hardest to find.

Indeed, the INS ultimately deported relatively few Iranian nationals. In March, 38 out-of-status Iranians were found in Los Angeles, nine in Newark, and one in San Antonio.

Shortly thereafter, the Shah of Iran was driven into exile, and while demonstrations against the new government of Prime Minister Shapour Bakhtiar continued until the assassination of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, they were not as frequent, large or violent as the demonstrations that had sparked Bell's January threat.

Administration policy, in fact, began to shift again in April, when the turmoil in Iran cut off the money supply for many students here. Most universities quietly began allowing Iranians more time in which to pay their bills. At one point, a mail shipment containing an estimated 4,000 support checks for Iranian students was held up in Tehran by the new Khomeini regime.

At that point, the administration "quietly" re-opened negotiations with the new regime about the status of the Iranians studying here, according to a staffer with the House Foreign Relations Committee.

University administrators, according to the source, who requested anonymity, had begun to pressure the U.S. Office of Education "to do something about the money. (Iranians) were starting to amass a huge debt, and colleges got scared. The last thing they wanted was to have these kids deported before they could pay what they owed."

Finally in September, the "intensified" interest in Iranians seemed to coincide when the INS announced a six-month moratorium on its deportation investigations. It gave the Iranians until June 30, 1980, to completely fulfill the conditions of their visas, and to allow them to get off-campus jobs without INS approval.

Carter's Nov. 10 announcement, though, erased the deadline.
Martial art to be taught at Winthrop

BY MARIE A. GOODSON

On the evening of Monday, November 20, a demonstration was given for the Winthrop students by the Kim School of Tae Kwan Do. This demonstration was given to introduce PE 205, which will be taught here next semester.

Tae Kwan Do, what Karate is to Japan, is the Korean martial art. It was originally developed by the Korean people as a self defense from invaders, according to Ron Chepeski, instructor at Dacus Library. The demonstration emphasized kicks, whereas Karate stresses punches.

The lowest rank of the bowies wears a white belt, he can gain rank in the following degrees: white, yellow, red, green, brown and then to black which, according to Ron, "theoretically consists of ten degrees."

Manuel Jackson, one of the evening, stated that here in Rock Hill at the YMCA, Tae Kwan Do classes are held on Wednesdays from 7:30 to 9:30 and on Saturdays from 10:30 to 12:00. He stresses the fact that Tae Kwan Do is an art, rather than a self-defense.

Ellerbe begins first season as coach

By David Jackson

As with all Winthrop female sports teams this year, the Eagles women's basketball team begins a new era under new coach Ann Ellerbe.

Ellerbe, who doubles as associate athletic director and field hockey coach, comes to Winthrop from Greenville's J.L. Mann High School where she posted a three-year record of 44-12.

She inherits the nucleus of a team which went 14-30 last season and is supplemented with new players, five of them freshmen.

The key returning players for Winthrop are Rosita Fields, Sara Dukes, Jan Rampcy and Sharon Dixon. Fields led the team in scoring and was second in rebounding, despite starting only three games.

Point guard Rampcy returns to direct the offense, while Dukes will provide solid shooting and rebounding experience at the center position. In addition, guard Paula Kirkland and forward Beth Knell return to give WC some added experience.

Winthrop's only transfer this year is an interesting proposition, guard or wing Cassandra Barnes (referred to by Ellerbe as "C.B."), comes over from Anderson Junior College where she hit 58% of her shots last season.

As far as Winthrop's competition throughout the state, Ellerbe says that "everybody is excited, especially the Eagles of Charleston, Furman, Maroon, Lander, USC-Union and all of whom are eager on the Winthrop schedule this season."

The Eagles will again host the annual Winthrop Invitational this Feb. 7-9. They will also participate in the Virginia Tech Invitational Feb. 1-2.

Winthrop's schedule also features seven games which serve as half of a doubleheader with the men's team. Ellerbe is pleased with this, saying that "the doubleheaders with the men will be good for us and the whole program. We will be able to have new and different people watching us."

So begins the Ann Ellerbe era at Winthrop. Not worried about making the abrupt transition from high school to college, she is eagerly anticipating this first season which began last week with games against UNC-Charleston, Anderson Junior College, and Easley.

The results of these games will be in next week's T/J.

Player Profiles

Rosita Fields started five of the Eagles' games this season. Last year, Rampcy led the team with 60 assists and averaged exactly 6 points per game.

Connie Welch is a 5'10" freshman from Matthews, N.C., who comes to Winthrop from Charlotte's East Mecklenburg High School, Ann Ellerbe's alma mater. She was that team's Most Valuable Player last season and will give Winthrop some added depth at forward. Welch also plays for Ellerbe on the Eagles' field hockey team.

Julie Vanderwier was a teammate of Welch's at East Meck last year. A 5'9" freshman who also hails from Matthews, N.C., Vanderwier will be able to play either second guard or wing for the Eagles. She is a tremendously versatile athlete, having majored in 10 different sports during high school.
Bowen, Gonzalez, Griffin, Casada honored

BY DAVID JACKSON

The Winthrop soccer Eagles ended a fantastic season on a rather disappointing note on November 17 when they lost the Atlantic Division championship game 2-0 to the University of Alabama at Huntsville.

The Eagles of Coach Jim Casada finished their District Six championship season with a record of 18-5-1. Alabama-Huntsville, who finished as NAIA runners-up last season, accorded both their goals in the first 18 minutes and outshot the Eagles 17-9 in a very rough game which featured 72 fouls. But losing the game certainly did not take the luster of this season which gave Winthrop's men's athletics their first district championship.

Naturally, post-season honors have rolled in for the champion Eagles. Jim Casada, who has directed the team for all five seasons, was tabbed coach of the year by his colleagues in the district.

This was Casada's third consecutive winning season and it raised his overall coaching record to 41-43-4.

Meanwhile, three Eagle players (Bob Bowen, Carlos Gonzalez, and Frankie Griffin) were named to the all-district team. Goalie Bowen, by receiving a vote from every coach, was recognized as District 6 goalie of the year (along with a goalie from Coastal Carolina). Bowen, a sophomore from Hialeah, Fla., already holds the school record for saves and set another one this season with 9 saves, two of which were shared with back-up Bob Manesi.

Bowen yielded only 1.14 goals per game and hit his peak during the district tournament when he shut-out Coastal Carolina and Emkine.

Another sophomore who was named all-district was Bowen's roommate and teammate from high school, forward Carlos Gonzalez. A native of Cuba, Gonzalez scored 11 goals and had 8 assists, leading the team in both categories for the second year in a row. Gonzalez was a first-team selection last year and is very well repeat.

Eagles start slowly, but whip G-W

BY DAVID JACKSON

Nield Gordon's Winthrop Eagles crawled out of starting gate, losing three out of their first four games, but regained some confidence and respect by beating highly regarded Gardner-Webb in games played over the past several weeks.

The Eagles, who were picked to win the District 6 title and were ranked the 17th best NAIA team in the country by Street and Smith's magazine, have simply a floup during the first eight days of the current campaign. They dropped their opening game to USC-Allan 87-69, and then lost to Lander 78-64. They then captured their one win for that week, a 108-76 thrashing of Wingate College. However, they came down the next night and lost an 89-73 decision to Allen.

The basic problem in the three losses was an inability to put the ball in the basket.

During the games against Allen, Landen, and Allen, the Eagles hit only 43 out of 93 attempts for 46.1%. Contrarily, they made 36 out of 65 shots (55.3%) during the win over Wingate. The Eagles were either taking bad shots or simply missing the good ones which they took.

During these first four games, Gordon had a particularly major problem in stabilizing his starting line-up, particularly at the second guard and short forward spots.

Gordon started Brevin Ben nett at guard during the first game and he played poorly, scoring only 2 points, 0 of 3 from the floor, and grabbing only 2 rebounds. Meanwhile, substitute Gerald McAfee was able to score 16 points (8 of 10 from the floor), collect 5 rebounds and capture the Game honors.

Two nights later, Bennett failed to respond again as he had only 3 points and 4 rebounds, hitting but 3 of 13 from the field. McAfee did not exactly set the world on fire, shooting 2 of 6 for four points, but he did have 5 rebounds.

So McAfee started the next two games—but, like his predecessor, he could not produce. He had only 8 points and 5 rebounds for the two games. Meanwhile, Bennett had 19 points but did not make a rebound during these two contests.

While all of this was going on, the Eagles were also having a problem at one of the forward spots. Carl Feaster, who had an excellent pre-season, started the first two games but couldn't produce. He had a particularly bad game against Lander as he had no points or rebounds.

With Tim Baxter nursing a sore elbow and Doug Schmedt, still out with an injured knee, Gordon turned to Jim Gibson. He came up with a brilliant game against Wingate (16 points, 13 rebounds, and great defense on Bulldog star Mitch Branson) but did little the next night against Allen.

So the question of who was to start, who was to substitute, and what was the right combination appeared to be a major problem heading into the Monday, Nov. 26, game at Gardner-Webb in Boiling Springs, N.C.

Guard Rick Riete, forward Ronnie Creeper, and center Donnicly Learning started this game as they had the four previous ones. Gordon decided to stick with Gibson at the other forward, and started a new guard-senior co-captain Dave Hampton.

The situation was an ironic one. Last year, he had started at the beginning of the season but lost his spot after a loss to Gardner-Webb.

Hampton made the most of this opportunity. Playing hard and keeping the team under control, Hampton hit 3 of 3 shots for four points, grabbed eight rebounds, steall the ball four times, and had 7 assists.

His teammates did pretty well too and rolled up a 70-50 victory over this team which had beaten Winthrop by 36 points last season.

This week, the Eagles will face nine teams from North Carolina in the WTVF Classic at Belmont Abbey College in Bel- mondt, N.C. Winthrop's first round game will be this Thursday, Dec. 6, against Johnson C. Smith University at 9:00 o'clock.

Tickets for this game can be purchased at the Winthrop athletics office for $2 dollars apiece. Proceeds from the tickets and the gate will go to the WC athletics department, while ticket money given at the gate will go to the tournament committee.

Volleyball finishes season with 42-6 record

BY DAVID JACKSON

The Winthrop volleyball team ended a most unusual season at the AIAW Region 2 tournament on Nov. 17 and 18 in Martin, Tenn.

The Eagles advanced to the finals of the double elimination tournament but then lost twice to the College of Charleston (for the fifth and sixth times this season) to finish their year with a 42-6 record.

Yes, that's right—all six of the Eagles came at the hands of the same team, the traditionally volleyball-powerful College of Charleston Cougars. Against the rest of their schedule, Montigo's squad was a very impressive 42-0.

Despite the regional runner-up finish, the Eagles could still have received an invitation to the national tournament in Florida, but they decided not to pursue a bid. As Montigo explained, "We wouldn't know if we would actually be invited for nine days, some of the girls would have to have practiced for two sports (basketball and volleyball) and we would have had to cancel two basketball games. Besides, we didn't actually win the regional outright." The Eagles advanced to the region finals by defeating Bellarmine (Ky.), Waka Forest, and UNC-Greensboro twice. All four of these matches went onto two games. But then came those two heartbreakers to Charleston, both of which went the full three games.

The score to the last Charleston game were 15-7, 13-16, and 14-16. During that third and final game, the Eagles had a 14-12 lead with the serve. Unfortunately, they could not score match point and gave up four straight points to the Cougars to end the match and the season.

Montigo cited Charleston's rugged schedule as a major factor which helped them. "They play all over against nationally ranked teams, while we played only a couple of tough matches all season. Next year, we're going to upgrade our schedule and get that experience against tough competition which we need in the state and regional tournaments."

Now that the volleyball season has ended, Montigo hits the recruiting trail to replace departing seniors Joby Williams, Beth Amick, and Meg Chislet. She claims that there are "a bunch of prospects," including one player who is reputed to be the best server.

The volleyball team received a number of postseason honors. Joby Williams and Beth Amick were named to the all-tournament team, while Amick, Sharon Dixon, and Meg Chislet were named to the all-region tournament team.

Despite their six setbacks to Charleston, it was a tremendous season for the Winthrop volleyball team, one for which they should be very proud. Elaine Montigo, in her first season as a college coach, did an excellent job, and with her at the helm, the future of Winthrop volleyball looks good.
Miss Purple and Gold

BY CYNTHIA J. WILSON

"The Miss Purple and Gold Scholarship pageant is a totally different experience in the art of pageantry design and leisurely entertainment," said Dale Jordan, president of Winthrop's Omega Psi Phi fraternity. "It is designed to bring forth further enrichment of Winthrop College. If accepted as an annual event, it will be one of the most anticipated events at Winthrop."

According to Jordan, the chapter will be receiving student applications for the second Miss Purple and Gold pageant through December 15. The chapter will also accept applications for special entertainment spots during the pageant. Students may pick up registration material in the Dean of Students office Monday through Friday from 9 a.m.-5 p.m. Jordan said that applicants are not obligated to the fraternity.

"When the chapter has received a completed form from a prospective participant, the participant will be immediately notified," Jordan said. Then, an interview will be set up between the participant and a representative from the chapter, Jordan said.

A tentative date for the pageant is March 1, 1980, according to Jordan. The chapter reserves the right to change the event to another date.

Jordan said that the first Miss Purple and Gold, Barbara Perry, a former Winthrop student, received her title in Ralph W. McElroy Auditorium last Feb. 17. Jordan said about 150 people were present for the first pageant. Since the pageant will be better coordinated than last year and will be held on campus, Jordan expects a larger audience this year.

When asked what the purpose of the annual pageant is, Jordan said, "to develop the finer qualities of womanhood, to induce culture, and to promote scholastic achievement."

The next portion of the demonstration showed the audience a few of the forms (i.e., series of movements) necessary for promotion, beginning with Chun Ji, which is translated as "Heaven and Earth," according to Manuel. "You must retain each form that has been learned. . . . We can lose our rank," Ron stated that "there are fourteen forms that I know of."

Bobby and Howard then showed the audience one-to-one basic self-defense using body contact (with the floor). Manuel stated that they do not use hand or foot-pads and occasionally used mats.

SIGMA SIGMA SIGMA

The Delta Pi chapter of Sigma Sigma Sigma initiated six new members into its sorority Nov. 10, according to Denise Wade, the new members are Connie Caropp, Kathy Cook, Tammy Finley, Pam Hamilton, Susan Jones, and Kim Wright.

“Sigma Sigma Sigma is a national social sorority, founded in 1898 at Longwood College, Farmville, Virginia,” said Wade. “The sorority offers opportunities for lifelong friendships and commitment to young women attending college and preparing for careers.”

The sorority installed its new officers for the 1980 school year on November 17, said Wade. The new offices are Diane Taylor, president; Pam Gray, vice-president; Joya Davis, treasurer; and Tammy Crone, secretary.

Also, Kathy Herring, rush chair; and Debbie Crawford, education director. Gwen Godd and Sharon Harrellson are the chapter advisors. Professor Gary Stone is the faculty advisor.

SCHOOL OF BUSINESS CITED

The Winthrop School of Business Administration has been recognized for its relations with the business community.

Each year, the Southern Business Administration Association (SBAA) presents awards to business schools for outstanding performance in selected areas. Winthrop, which received an honorable mention, was runner-up to the College of Business Administration at the University of Georgia, winner of the award for 1979-80.

Winthrop began its program for development of business school and community relationships in 1974. This current year saw Waite as an information resource for area businesses. Since then, Winthrop has added a small business advisory center and a business development center, and has worked closely with Springs Mills, Inc.; AT & T; and other corporations. In addition, Winthrop sponsors workshops in business management, law, and ownership.

Advisory Committee formed

BY BECKY ALLEN

President Charles Vall has appointed ten members to a newly formed Advisory Committee for Archives and Special Collections to help develop the archival program at Winthrop, according to Ron Chespasik, head of Special Collections.

The committee will meet every four months to recommend, discuss, and develop new projects that the Archives has initiated or hopes to initiate, and plan for the future development of the Archives. The Archivist will present a report at each meeting on the state of the Archives and the committee can provide support and resolutions on the programs.

Chespasik said the members will be head librarian Shirley Taston; the archivist, Chepe- skak; assistant archivist, Ann Evans; and archival consultant, John Bonner of Camden, retired director of Archives and Special Collections at the University of Georgia. Also: Arnold Shankman, associate professor of history; Thomas Morgan, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences; Betty Bagley of Chester and Jan Flint of Anderson, members of the 1979 Board of Visitors; the President of York County Historical Society, Elizabeth Stowe of Rock Hill; and Patricia Jervey of Greenville, a member of the Board of Trustees. The members will serve a two-year term.

Immaturity or patriotism

Probably one of the most dangerous issues that I could talk about right now is the Iranian crisis. This subject causes unrest and even hostility among most Americans. However, I feel that it is an important issue which will affect all of us in some way.

All of us have potential to be world leaders someday, but none of us have reached that day yet. The only real effect that we have on the world is in opinion. We either feel one way or another about a world issue. The crisis in Iran is simply another issue. We can like it or hate it. The most important thing is that we know why we feel the way we do.

In past months there have been hundreds of demonstrations around the country over the crisis facing America. Some of these protests were against the Iranian students in general and some of them were against the issue of the hostage. I tend to believe that a majority of the students who participated in the demonstrations didn't really have all of the knowledge about the subject that they should have. Many of them participated because it was a cause to get upset about.

College life tends to be boring at times, and anything which interrupts the normal boring flow is welcome. I feel that this was the same with the Iranian protests. They were good reasons for college students to raise hell about something and to be seen by the world.

I don't mean to imply that all college students who participate in protests are ignorant of world issues and simply like to raise hell, however I think it is the case with some of them. If you know everything there is to know about an issue and feel it will help to demonstrate, then by all means do. If you find it a good chance to do something different and to get on the six o'clock news, you're displaying more immaturity than patriotism.

An interview with Kim Hunter

BY DON SAVELLE

The academy award winning actress Kim Hunter appeared in Charleston this past weekend (Nov. 16 & 17) for the South Carolina Theatre Association Convention as guest speaker. Miss Hunter, portraying Stella in Tennessee Williams' "Streetcar Named Desire," won the 1951 academy award for best supporting actress; she is well remembered by science fiction fans for her role in "The Planet of the Apes." She also portrayed the woman in the "Planet of the Apes" story, "Return to the Planet of the Apes."

During a brief press conference, I spoke with Miss Hunter about her life in the theatrical world and what actors get out of it.

"Acting takes a great deal out of you. It's an extraordinary field for self-discovery, in many ways. We have no easels, plinths or easels; what we bring to our characters from within is what we (as actors) get out of theatre. It is a great opportunity for self-awareness and self-discovery."

I don't mean to imply that all college students who participate in protests are ignorant of world issues and simply like to raise hell, however I think it is the case with some of them. If you know everything there is to know about an issue and feel it will help to demonstrate, then by all means do. ATS will start the holiday season with Kirk Edwards. According to DSU president Ronnie Laffitte, Edwards will perform December 5, admission is a WCID.

Edwards is from New York, and his original music often reflects his experiences there. Accompanying himself on guitar, Edwards blends his vocal ability with fine instrumentals to create music of unusual quality.

ATS will also be showing comedy films every night until Christmas. The films, Laurel and Hardy type shows, will begin around 8 each night.

DSU Christmas caroling

DSU is sponsoring a Christmas hayride starting at 7:30, December 7. According to DSU president Ronnie Laffitte, the wagon will pick people up from campus every hour and take them to the Shack. There will be Christmas carols, a visit from Santa Claus, and refreshments for everyone.

Laffitte said there will be bluegrass music and a fire at the Shack to get everyone in the Christmas spirit. The shuttle service will run every hour from 7:30 to 12:30.

McBryde Cafeterias will be the place to go Saturday, December 8, for the 1979 Christmas Dance. Music will be provided by Symbol 8, a group which has appeared with the Commodores. Admission to the 8-12 p.m. event is a WCID and $1 for guests. Dress is semiformal.

According to Ronnie Laffitte, Symbol 8 plays a variety of music from Top 40 to Disco. Students are urged to come to the dance if for no other reason than to hear some fine music.

A time for singing

Christmas is the time for singing, and DSU, SGA and WCCM is hosting a Christmas carol program in front of Tillman December 6.

All persons interested in making a joyful noise should meet in front of Tillman at 8 p.m. The caroling will finish up in the Johnson lobby, where refreshments will be served.
