CAMBRIDGE UNION STRESSES GOOD-WILL

Reporter Hears Englishmen's Views on Movies, Dancing, and Ambitions

Mary Virginia Flouwen and Addie Stokes debated against John Royls and C. J. M. Alport, of Cambridge Union, Friday night, November 18, in Main Auditorium. The query for the debate was "Resolved: That the judiciary should have no power to override the acts of the executive and the legislature."

John Royls prefaced his speech with a declaration of goodwill between the two countries represented on the platform, and wished for America, as for his own country, England, peace. Mr. Royls stated that, regardless of whether the Cambridge Union debaters won their debates, they should consider their task a success if they in any way increased the understanding between the two countries or advanced the cause of brotherhood and peace.

Speaking first for the affirmative, John Royls centered his debate on these issues: first, laws are of no effect if the judiciary will them so; second, the hope of a law's being declared unconstitutional causes a diminution of respect for the Constitution; and third, the uncertainty of judicial decisions causes economic insecurity.

Mary Virginia Flouwen, as the first negative speaker, pointed out the lack of necessity for abolishing judicial review. As evidence, she cited the social and economic benefits from decisions of the court, and the impartiality of the verdicts rendered by a bench of learned, non-partisan Justices.

C. J. M. Alport, the second speaker for the affirmative, developed the issues that the Supreme Court adheres to economic ideas at least fifty years old; that Justices, who are brought up with conservative ideas, know too little of economic and politics to judge questions on an economic and political standpoint; and that the people need some quicker system for changing the Constitution.

Addie Stokes, as the second negative speaker, pointed out that the change advocated is inadvisable, undesirable, and impracticable.

FRESHMEN PROVE "PEPPIEST" CLASS

Freshmen Win Pep Meet Held in Amphitheatre; Event Almost Unprecedented

An event almost unprecedented in the history of Winthrop College was the awarding of the silver "Pop Out" to the Freshman Class at the annual pep meeting Monday night, November 18, in the Amphitheatre.

The meeting was for the purpose of introducing the four hockey teams, which began their inter-class games Tuesday, November 19. The Amphitheatre was divided into four parts for the four classes, each section marked by its class blanket hanging at the rear.

Jean Ryan led the ball rolling when "Diddy" Burnett, their class leader, led them in the class song, yellow, red, and blue song. Next were the Juniors, led by "Ear" Jones. The Sophomores cheering was led by Helen Maude Murray.

Jean Ryan led the Freshmen in the pep exhibition of class spirit of the night; and it was to them that the Judges—Miss Chlo Pelt, Mrs. Mary E. Gibson, Miss Julia Post, and Dr. Hampton Jarrell—awarded the trophy.

The following resolutions, presented through the steering committee, were listed for discussion and revision: (1) Regulations of quiet hour are to be observed during Sunday meditation; (2) Students when leaving the campus for any reason or at any time must file in the office of their dormitory upon leaving and check there upon returning; (3) Students are to be in full uniform when leaving the campus to go in the direction of town (i. e., applying in Rogers and the Little Shoe Shop); (4) No student who has been restricted may hold an office, unless restriction has occurred during her Freshman year. In this case, she may hold an office during her Senior year.

The action taken by the Senate will not go into effect until it has been approved by the faculty committee and announced as a Student Government Association meeting.

He thinks that writing is one of the best means of expressing one's self.

Mr. Burt said that most people intend to write at some time in their lives, but do not have time. Since the field is already overcrowded, he feels that it is a good thing that they do not have the opportunity.

He declared that it is impossible to answer the question of what makes an author, but outlined the following points which should go into the make-up of a writer: First, an author ought to be an introvert, but at the same time, something of an extrovert. That is, he should have learned to express himself. Second, he should have the power of observation; he should be interested in other people and in the outside world, and not so much in himself. Third, he should not only be able to observe, but should turn this ability to observe and feel, into the ability to comment, and to connect his observations.

The fourth necessary attribute is hard work. The final secret, and Mr. Burt thinks this is most important of all, is the ability of figure and metaphor. All the rest, he said, is merely technique. Metaphor is the basis of writing, and is the ability to reduce things to a definite figure so that others may see and understand. Mr. Burt stated that the amateur often avoids saying something original in using a metaphor.

Paul Fleming Presents Program of Magic—Is Assisted By Wife and Brother

The following program was presented: Part I: The Phantom Handkerchief, Imaginary Colar, Rapid Transit, The Flight of Time, East Indian Magic; Part II: Tests in Mind-Reading, Spiruistic Manifestations, Including a talk with the late Madame Blavatsky, a Message from the Spirit Land, The Spirit Cabinet; Part III: A Past in Mesmerism, The Dance of the Cards, Money, Money Everywhere; Magical Cookery, The Hindoo Gong.

In an interview with the reporter, Mr. Fleming revealed the fact that he has been a amateur magician for thirty years and is a professional for twenty-five. Most of his own tricks he learned from books, some of them as old as 70 years, some of them very recently published.

Fleming has a library of over 600 volumes of books on magic arts.

When he first started practicing magic, Mr. Fleming said, he traveled with other people. This is his fourth performance at Winthrop. The last time he was here was in 1920. In answer to the question, "Did Mr. Fleming practice magic before you were married?" Mr. Fleming answered, "No, before we were married, she was entirely before me."

"James," Mr. Fleming disclosed, is his brother, Walker, who is more important than the magician himself. "James is the power behind the throne," Mr. Fleming stated.

ROOSEVELT'S THANKSGIVING PROCLAMATION

The Thanksgiving proclamation by the President of the United States is usually a formal message; this year President Roosevelt has delivered a peculiarly personal proclamation. We reprint the text of the proclamation for many reasons, not the least of which is that it may be interpreted in the diminutive to apply to our campus. As we read the message, it behooves us to take stock and redirect our energies along the lines that the President suggests for the nation, and the world, as a whole.

The proclamation reads as follows: "I, Franklin D. Roosevelt, President of the United States of America, hereby designate Thursday, the twenty-eighth of November, 1935, as a day of national thanksgiving.

"In traversing a period of national stress our country has been knit together in a closer fellowship of mutual interest and common purpose. We can well be grateful that more and more of our people understand and seek the greater good of the greater number. We can be grateful that selfish purpose of personal gain, at our neighbor's loss, less strongly asserts itself. We can be grateful that peace at home is strengthened by a growing willingness to common counsel. We can be grateful that our peace with other nations continues through recognition of our own peaceful purpose.

"But in appreciation of the blessings that Divine Providence has bestowed upon us in America, we shall not rejoice as the Pharisee rejoiced. War and strife still live in the world. Rather, must America by example and in practice help to bind the wounds of others, strive against disorder and aggression, encourage the lessening of distress among peoples and advance peaceful trade and friendship.

"The future of many generations of mankind will be greatly guided by our acts in these present years. We have a new trail.

"Let us, then, on the day appointed, offer our devotions and our humble thanks to Almighty God and pray that the people of America will be guided by Him in helping their fellow men.

"In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

"Done at the City of Washington this 12th day of November, in the year of Our Lord nineteen hundred and thirty-five, and of the independence of the United States of America the one hundred and sixtieth."

"WHAT'S SAUCE FOR THE GOOSE?"

Something is happening on our campus that is upsetting the whole student body; and we feel that their resentment is justifiable. It was announced last Wednesday that if students were not in the dining room by the time the second bell for meals rang, they would be locked out.

Of course, such an announcement stirred up ill-feeling. Why should girls between the ages of 16 and 22 be compelled to come to meals on time? They are polite enough to be there if they reasonably can. And when they are late, it makes no difference to the dining-room scholarship girls or to the waiters. If the dining-room sponsored individual service, the reasonableness of the announcement would be evident. As it is, the food is set on the tables once and for all, and each student eats what she wants and leaves. If she is late, she eats a little more hurriedly and leaves at the usual time, for classes still begin at 8:30 and the dining-room is cleared of students before that time.

What is still more unjustifiable in the enforcement of the announcement referred to is the fact that whereas students are locked out of the dining room, the officers of the college—faculty members, matrons, and office workers—are allowed to come in as late as they please! Now in certain cases, and very few of them, we can understand this procedure. But it is the duty of matrons and faculty members and officers to arrange their relief by assistants and their alarm clocks and their work so that they can get to meals just as much as it is the duty of students to arrange their alarm clocks and work and dressing time so that they can get to meals, on time—if we must be compelled to this childish regulation of meal times.

DIVORCE IN THE SOUTH CAROLINA STATES

Next January, an appeal to legalize divorce in South Carolina will be heard at the session of the General Assembly. To eliminate a 18-word prohibition against divorce from the state constitution, there must be legislative approval of a joint resolution presenting the question to the people next November, popular assent, and legislative ratification in 1937.

The Constitution, adopted in 1895, proclaims, in its shortest division, the permanency of marriage in South Carolina: "Divorces from the bond of matrimony shall not be allowed in this state"—the shortest provision, and yet, of all, the most lasting!

Why should South Carolina refuse to recognize divorce? She is not narrow-minded along other lines. If her citizens are determined to obtain divorces, it is easy enough for them to rent a postoffice box in Cartersville, Georgia, for six weeks, send a trunk to Atlanta for a short while, or take the short drive across the Savannah river to Augusta, and obtain their divorces there. They will get their divorces, regardless of cost, so why should South Carolina not be the beneficiary of the money spent this way?

Perhaps some South Carolinians feel that by making divorce harder to get, they can hold together broken homes. This is entirely wrong. Broken homes that are forcibly held together inevitably result in but one thing—more unhappiness to the parties concerned. Frequently, one or other of the parties deserts. Whether or not he or she then enters upon a life of laxity varies with the individual. But certainly it is not morally right to continue to live with a mate whom one no longer loves or respects!

According to the modern standards, divorce is considered the logical and broad-minded solution of marital unhappiness. So far has this trend gone that one member of the present House of Representatives included the fact that he was divorced in his biographical sketch in the official legislative manual.

We do not advocate wholesale or "Hollywood" divorces. We believe that just cause for every legal divorce should be duly established; and we believe that a certain period of time should elapse between the time the first papers are filed, and the final decree is granted. This will give both parties time to think things over. And when broad-minded South Carolinians have shown themselves capable of the right interpretation and usage of divorce laws, we believe that they should have the privilege of obtaining their divorces at home.

FACULTY OPINION

I have been following with a great deal of interest the various articles which have appeared under "Faculty Opinion." Many of these have been tabloid sermons, and I have agreed with what the preachers have had to say. It would be gratifying from the point of view, were the students of Winthrop College to follow this well-meaning and kindly advice. But I am not minded to preach to you this time: in the first place, because I am not a good preacher; in the second, because all the good words that have been used up by my predecessors. Instead, I should like to say something that has been clamoring for expression since I first came to Rock Hill. This is really the only criticism I have had to make to the entire student body at the same time. When I have looked at assembly, a topic has been assigned me ahead of time; when I had the privilege of eating at the President's table in the dining-room, no one has called on me for a speech; when I sat on the platform at "The Big Meeting," I didn't get a chance to put a word in edgewise, and my desperate effort to assert myself was rewarded, you will remember, by a black eye. But now I feel that I hold you more or less helpless. I assume that every student, from the budding freshman to the blooming senior, religiously reads every word in The Johnsonian and then turns back and rereads "Faculty Opinion" a second and even a third time. And, if I can trust rumor, there are some of you that have not yet read a moment and I may think your walls gape which you have mined from this column. So I know that my message will reach all of you, even the faculty who surreptitiously scan this column.

room. I've become convinced of it. I know from experience that there are colleges where fair young daughters of distracted parents attend because there is nothing else to do. Papa and mama have to send them off somewhere to keep from admitting that papa and mama are lousy. But there are exceedingly few of you that are here just because it's stylish or because you are seeking relief for ennui.

Better even than your earnestness, however, is your amiability, your willingness to be shown. Thank God for students who come to class because they want to learn something. I've taught in institutions where more than one student went to sleep in my class; and it wasn't because of my teaching, for I've tried the same thing on you and you've stayed awake! Generally speaking, you are amenable to suggestion and, on my own account, I-bless you for being so. One of the richest remunerations that a teacher can derive from his teaching is the thrill that he experiences when he feels that his students are following closely and seriously, accelerating the discussion instead of holding it back like dragging brakes.

It seems to me that your earnestness and willingness to be shown, your amiability, is your loving, characteristic. Now I've said it, and I feel better. I'll forgive you all your pique-like faults: I'll look aside in assembly when you carry on a conversation in the desk and dumb language with some one in the gallery; I'll smile at you when you let the door slam in my face; I'll even control myself when you come to consult me with your finger nails painted with blood, if you'll only continue to be amenable!—PAUL M. WHEELER.

Levy Slim—There has been a rumor going about the campus that our cuts will be taken away from us. This has been greeted with great surprise everywhere.

We cannot understand why anyone should think that three cuts a semester would be detrimental to progress in our work. All up-to-date colleges are using the cut system, so it must have proven itself successful. Ours seems just a little more of much needed recreation from school worries and cares. Let us hope that the rumor is false, and we'll have cuts now and forever.

BLUE SPECTATOR

Anna Louise Renneker just before a Greek Archaeology mid-term: "The first Greek tragedy was presented in 454 B. C.; the second one will be presented this afternoon." . . . Can you imagine people like Mabel Browne and Hazel Moore engaging in the art (?) of writing with their toes? . . . We heard a Freshman in North has been treated of her little low-bird (please interpret liberally). We think we can offer a solution for his expiration: its name, Dedeomona, was more than it could stand! . . . Did you know that Mr. Roberts can imitate Mamie Kendrick's imitation of a "Finkler"? . . . We notice that Mrs. Maggins has been acting as Professor of Secondary Education. Mr. Maggins says that for many reasons he hopes she is not to good. . . . Have you seen Callie Orum and Duplex Thomas portray "Men in White"? Duplex is the would-be counterpart of Clark Gable. . . . Excuse us for being a little behind with this bit of news, but maybe you haven't heard it, anyway. The article was arrested in Charlotte a few Sundays ago. It seems that Mr. Only interpreted the sign, "No parking except for unloading," to mean he could "unload" the article. The Charlotte police, though, interpreted the sign another way. . . . Have you seen the dress in which Louise Howe feels aesthetic? . . . Upon a very accurate mathematical examination, we have been able to come to the marvelous deduction that it is only twenty-eight days until we go home for Christmas; and, in the meantime, Thanksgiving is just five days off. . . . Excerpt from the write-up of one of our young reporters: "The wife of Mr. . . . whose husband went down on the Titanic. She did not accompany him. . . . Current suggestion on the campus: That The Johnsonian's name be changed to The Tigris."

Bergant: "Did you shave this morning, Jones?" Jones: "Yes, Bergant." Bergant: "Well, the next time stand a bit closer to the razor."—Siren.

CHANCES AGAINST HAPPY MARRIAGES

Stanford Reports Odds Against as Two to One, After Extensive Study of Matrimony

Once upon a college professor who has been looking into the state of holy wedlock...

The professor—Dr. Lewis M. Terman of Stanford University's psychology department—has studied 300 marriages.

Of those, he found that 100 developed into the "happy ever after" stage...

It is typical of the present age to believe that there is something new in a set of figures like these.

Whether we did it through over-much reading of novels, through too much staring at movies, pictures, or simply through a process of wishful thinking, we do seem to have persuaded ourselves that a marriage ought to glide along with the utmost smoothness.

If it does not, we pity ourselves; and if that gets us nowhere we decided that the other party to the domestic equation is an impossible person...

By looking on marriage through the eyes of romantic 16-year-olds, we leave ourselves unable to meet the inevitable disillusionment...

What we need is understood, it is that while these chances may be slim, they are probably as good now as they ever were or ever will be...

If we are men and women enough to accept the disillusionments, the petty annoyances and the occasional quarrels...

The reason the divorce rate is so alarmingly high is that too many people enter into marriage in the spirit of spoiled children, ready to pick up their toys and quit at the first sign of trouble.

So the chances are two to one against a happy marriage? Well, they are at least that great against a happy outcome to any other form of human endeavor.

If we would simply realize that fact in advance, and guide ourselves accordingly, we would get along a great deal better.—The Greenview News.

POEM APPEARS IN NEWSPAPER

Dr. Paul Mowbray Wheeler has had three of his poems printed recently in The Atlantic Journal. The latest to appear in print is the following:

Reflection Oh, you may fairly close your mind to sorrow

And shut your ears unto the ceaseless rain Of memories that nourish the old pain...

Yes, you may lock away your poignant store Of touch-sakes in the room where spirits throng...

And time your lips by force to some brave song. To which you set your outward step once more.

But pluckish Orif will soon or late discover Sober subtle stoop to turn the music's bridge...

It needs not much a flower, a bird's far note. Or you may sly turn a book's worn cover...

To find your late love's tender beckoning smile That calls you to a pencilled word she wrote.

"Tailor-Made" College Curriculums Discussed

The movement between colleges and secondary schools to eliminate standards and adopt an educational treatment appropriate to the individual student has spread to virtually all the institutions of higher learning in the country.

Valley reports on the movement were discussed by 200 college administrators and headmasters and guidance counselors at a conference. The third report of the committee on school and college relations of the Educational Records Bureau, just published, cites figures to show that a large majority of the colleges are co-operating with the schools.

The movement, organized about ten years ago, was sponsored and led by the central committee of guidance of the American Council on Education. The committee was headed by Dean Herbert E. Hawks of Columbia College.

Dean Hawks is credited with initiating the movement by Dr. Ben D. Woods, director of the Bureau of Collegiate Research at Columbia.

This history of the Johnsonian to date might well end with the last paragraph which appeared in the write-up of the creation of the paper in 1923.

NEW RECORDING DEVICE IS DEMONSTRATED

Faculty Members and Students "Star" in Recording Demonstration

Mr. A. J. Clarke, of London, and Mr. G. Rose, of New York, a member of the National Recording Company of New York, were guests of the Music Department in the Music Room of Johnson Hall, Monday afternoon, November 17.

At Winthrop, they made records of a speech by Dr. Phelps, poetry read by Dr. Kinsard and by Dr. Wheeler, a soprano solo by Mary Davis, a piano solo by Minnie Greene Moore, and a selection by the sextette.

Mr. Clarke explained that this process which is about eighteen months old, has reached the peak of its development within the last six months. This method is direct and instantaneous. The recording is made directly into a record, and may be played immediately. The wax process of making the earlier types of records can be used only once; whereas, the record made in this new way can be used many times to make other records and also electrical transcription.

The first record which Mr. Clarke made in the United States was an electrical transcription of the preview of "Chorus a Million," starring Dick Powell. On Tuesday, the sextette made a record of "Ed and Pine Tree Parly," "In the Luxemburg Gardens," and "Serenade." On Wednesday, Dr. Shelton Phelps made a record of his inaugural address; Dr. Paul M. Wheeler made a record of two selections of poetry; Mrs. Paul Wheeler, a record of one poem; and Dr. James P. Kinard, a record of Shakespeare's thirtieth sonnet.

MR. STRUTHERS BURY SPEAKS TO AUDIENCE AT WINTHROP

Mr. Burt pointed out the various types of writing one may do when he has become a professional. These are newspaper writing, editorial work, free lance writing, and the writing of essays, articles, poetry, short stories, novels, and plays.

He reviewed the different kinds of magazines for which one may write. First, the "pulp" magazines, which usually pay a person for any other kind of writing. All that is necessary is a story, and no brain is needed in writing it. Second, there are the "big flats," which have definite ideas, and are usually copyrighted, but it is possible to write for these without any damage to one's prestige as an author.

PHYS. ED. MAGAZINES DISCUSSED AT MEETING

Magazines pertaining to the field of Physical Education were discussed at the meeting of the Physical Education Club Friday, November 15, in Johnson Hall. E. ### CAMBRIDGE UNION STRESSES GOOD-WILL

(Continued From Page One) Delta Sigma Rho, national debating fraternity, and that Addie Stokes had been elected to the Strawbery Leaf. Following the debate, the delegates from Cambridge spoke informally in Clio Hall to town people, members of the faculty, and members of the Debaters' League.

In an interview with the delegates, The Johnsonian obtained information concerning some of the forensic activities, opinions, and ambitions of the two delegates. Alport has been debating nearly six years; and is now President of Cambridge Union. Before this American tour he debated in Ireland. Hoyte has been debating two years, and at present is Chairman of the Standing Committee. These representatives, selected by the officers of the Union, left England four weeks ago. From Winthrop, they went to the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. They plan to return to England by December 14. These debaters were acquainted with each other before this tour, but had never debated together. In the United States, they have already met teams from Kalamazoo, Cleveland, Agnes Scott, Auburn, and the University of Florida. Winthrop is the second woman's college that they have ever debated.

In addition to the query of Friday night, Alport and Hoyte debate also written and written compositions, the menace of advertisements, unemployment, and specialized education. In answer to the question, "Do you prefer British or American films?" the debaters replied that they thought the production and music of American films better but they preferred the English voices to American.
