It measures 115 feet in width on the west side, 58 feet on south side, 124 feet on east side and 67 feet on the north side. After it was built in 1890-91 at a cost of $15,902 until it was burned in 1929, this building served as the civic center of the city. It was a show house with leading minstrels and road shows playing there in the early 1900's.

9. Lewis Inn – Chester, SC (1980)

LEWIS INN

--Listed on the National Register of Historic Places--
Location: Off State Highway #72, seven miles north of Chester,
South Carolina.

Lewis Inn is a pre-Revolutionary War construction of dove-tailed logs and clay. Many of the original features of the house are still preserved. The original tongue and groove paneling throughout the house is 12 to 14 inches wide. Each door is made of wide boards secured by large wrought iron hinges. Handcarved mantels surround the massive fireplaces in the downstairs area at opposite ends of the house.

The inn won a place in history when it gave lodging to the captured Aaron Burr, a controversial American, who was on his way to Richmond, Virginia, for trial on the charge of high treason. The home is now owned by Mr. and Mrs. Paul Campbell.

The Lewis Inn was recently added to the National Register of Historic Places.

10. Joseph Wylie Building – Chester, SC (1980)

Location: 105-113 Main Street, Chester, South Carolina.

The exact date of construction of the Wylie building has not been determined. Joseph Wylie & Co. was formed in 1868 by Joseph Wylie & A. L. Agurs. The building could have been erected before that date or shortly afterwards. Joseph Wylie & Co. went out of business in 1930. It was one of the two large general mercantile establishments in Chester. What is now the Connelly portion was occupied by the grocery part of Wylie & Co. The portion now owned by Kimbrell's was used for clothing, shoes, fabrics, millinery, and related items.

It is a large two story stucco building with Victorian trim. The larger part of the building is owned and occupied by Kimbrell Furniture Co., while the smaller part is presently owned by Mrs. Susan Connelly. The Connelly portion has recently been renovated and the exterior painted in shades of beige and off-white with details in gold.

11. Landsford Canal (1980)

LANDSFORD CANAL

--Listed on the National Register of Historic Places--

Location: Along the Catawba River in northeastern Chester County, South Carolina.

Landsford Canal is a two-mile canal with three stone locks--one single and two double.

The Landsford Canal was a part of a plan to link Charleston to the Mississippi River through a series of waterways.

It was built in 1823 under the direction of Joel Poinsett, chairman of the South Carolina Board of Public Works, and Robert Mills, state engineer and architect, who later designed the Washington Monument. A mastery of planning and workmanship went into the construction of this project.

The name, Land's ford, is derived from a grant in 1754 to Thomas Land of a tract containing an ancient ford. There was much activity here during the Revolutionary War, centering around the forces of General Sumter and General Davie. It was here where Cornwallis crossed the Catawba in retreat from Charlotte to Winnsboro. It was here in 1805 where General William Richardson Davie, renowned soldier and statesman, built his home overlooking Landsford and built a mill on the river which is still in evidence today.

The Landsford Canal is included in the National Register of Historic Places. The South Carolina Department of Parks, Recreation & Tourism have plans to turn the area into a state park and renovate certain of the canal's features.
