2001, Nov. 7 Myra Potter Bregger died

Obituary: The Greenville News, November 9, 2001

CLEMSON - An Upstate champion of children's causes for seven decades, Myra Potter Bregger died at home Wednesday at the age of 96.

Mrs. Bregger was South Carolina's UNICEF chairwoman for 11 years, established the school lunch program in Clemson, helped found the library, Girl Scouts and youth theater in Clemson, and served as state and Pickens County chairman of the Committee on Children and Youth. In 1960, she chaired and edited a White House Conference report on the future of children in Pickens County and South Carolina.

"More than anything she cared about children," said Louis Bregger, the youngest of her three children. "That was her deepest concern."

She also cared about education, women's issues, her church and her community.

Mrs. Bregger was founder and director of the Clemson Area Continuing Education Center, the first adult education center in the Upstate, from 1954-1980.

She helped found Clemson's Meals on Wheels, Clemson's League of Women's Voters, and was an officer and founding member of Clemson Community Council. She was a member of Clemson Theater Guild, past president of Clemson PTA, state president of the American Association of University Women, a member of the Federal Legislation Committee of the state Interagency Council on Aging and county chairman of the state Women's Council for the Common Good

She was a founding member of the Greenville Unitarian Fellowship in 1950 and of the Clemson Unitarian Universalist Fellowship in 1953.

"She was my mentor for many years," said Berniece Holt, a leader in the Clemson community, who recalls dinners at the Bregger home.

"She used dishes she'd gathered from around the world to entertain guests," Holt said. "She took great pride in making people sit next to someone besides their husbands and keep a lot of good conversations going. She stimulated lots of conversations in this community, too. She was way ahead of her time."

Mrs. Bregger was a teacher to those around her, speaking her mind bluntly but with love, and fully expecting others to work to make a difference in the world, Holt said.

Born on a Mulvane, Kan., farm, Mrs. Bregger earned a masters' degree in nutrition and chemistry from Kansas State University, and was doing research at Washington State University on the vitamin value of fruits when she met her husband, horticultural engineer John Taylor Bregger.

She moved to Clemson in 1939, when her husband took a job with USDA Soil Conservation Service to help start the peach industry in South Carolina, her son said.

"Mom came here and there was no school lunch program and she couldn't imagine how that could be and she changed that," Bregger said.

The library, Girl Scouts, theater and UNICEF involvement all followed, he said.

"She was very much involved with children's issues," Bregger said.

The state American Association of University Women's Research and Projects Foundation was named in her honor in 1979. She received the state organization's Women of Distinction Award and the local International Relations Award. She is a recipient of the Clemson Rotary Award for Community Service, the Sydney Sullivan Award for Clemson University and the Unitarian Universalist Unsung Hero Award. Survivors: Son, John E. Bregger, of Tacoma, Wash.; daughter, Margaret B. Coston, of Windsor, Calif.; son, Louis D. Bregger, of Clemson; nine nieces and nephews; five grandchildren; and two great-grandchildren.
