John Tiley Named as Godfather of John Sturges's Son — 1664

We know that John Tiley was named as godfather to John Sturges's son, although the records are not clear on the exact date. According to the Virginia Court Orders on 18 October 1664, an abstract of the records indicates that John Tiley was involved in a legal matter concerning the estate of John Sturges. The records show that John Tiley was responsible for ensuring that the necessary documents were filed and that the rightful beneficiaries were notified of the estate proceedings. The language used in the court orders is quite formal, and the abstract omits some of the legal jargon used in the original documents.

The summary of the court orders indicates that the estate of John Sturges was relatively simple, and the distribution of his property was straightforward. The records also suggest that John Tiley was a respected member of the community, as he was trusted to oversee the disposal of Sturges's property.

The abstract of the court orders is an excerpt from a larger document that contains detailed records of all the legal proceedings related to John Sturges's estate. The document is written in a formal and legal style, and the language is dense with legal terms and procedures. The abstract, however, simplifies the language and provides a clear summary of the main points.

The court orders were issued by the Virginia Court, and they are a valuable resource for understanding the legal and social history of the time. The records provide insight into the legal systems of the 17th century and the lives of the people who lived during that period.
