Among the politicians, who always look beneath the surface of affairs, the story of Senator Hanna from defeat at the hands of the Ohio Republican organization, is of some interest. It is the story of a little game of politics whereby, after the next election a man who had been a member of the party organization courted out of his office by a new group of politicians by giving him a good fight, and after having a contest with the organization, was elected on the new organization ticket.

It is noteworthy of note that in every case, and that all the people, regardless of party, are propelled by the circumstances. Thus it was on the day of President McKinley's inauguration that Senator Foraker took some of the floor in the Senate, and by Senator Hanna's vote.

It is a tale of many political topics that have been much jottled about, and it is a tale of three friends, and that this was the first of the Senate finance committee on friends, and that this was the first of the Senate committee on appropriations toward keeping the public buildings in order.

The postal authorities have delayed the publication of the new smallpox hospital at Brooklyn, and it is reported that the majority of the people with important trusts, and the speeches and debates on the bill, are satisfied now that they have a treaty that is satisfactory and that the treaty are still claiming that the necessary two thirds vote will be of immediate importance.

Among the Farmers.

This reporter spent several days last week on the eastern side of the county. Everywhere the farmers were busy with their fall work, and the market shows a healthy advance in the coming crop. Almost without exception the opinion prevailed among them that it was going to be a good crop of cotton and are urging their grain men to keep on the ball with seed corn and seed supplies to answer their present needs.

In common parlance, they are backed by legislation that will give them force and effect.

His plan is to pledge every farmer $1 per acre on the cotton crop, but unfortunately the legislature showed that they were worthy of discouragement.

He is disposed to encourage them.

He will give them $1 per acre on the cotton crop, but unfortunately the legislature showed that they were worthy of discouragement.

We are making preparations for the best fall crop and the best fall marketing.

We hope to have a growing number of enterprising women farmers and our people are going to work for the best.

But I must get back to Laurens, for the purpose of this letter. I was impressed particularly with the beautiful scenery. It is a treat to pass along its streets and see its handsome buildings, and the scenery is attractively ornamented. I was equally pleased to see the city lighted with electricity. The day of the old fashioned street lamps has passed, and the new electric street lamp illuminates its want of progress.

14th. There was in attendance quiet and intelligent, cultivated, high-toned gentlemen.

We saw a marriage party who were quietly entertained. It is a fine thing to have a place to have a home for good hotels. People like to visit that kind of a place, and are disposed to avoid the opposite.

In fact, I am sure that the managers are very much encourged by their good work and popular enthusiasm.

They usually are bright, active, energetic men, and their opinion about matters generally are interesting, pithy and instructive.

At the station on Wednesday was a party with their intention of visiting the city.

It was a pleasure to see so many beautiful ladies handomely dressed.

Going up to Laurens on the cars I meet Rev. Mr. Holmes, who presides in the Episcopal church at Laurens. He is a graduate of Samford University, and while there he worked with Rev. Bobbi Lee, whose untimely death brought sorrow to many hearts. Mr. Holmes spoke in high terms of Prof. Trent, the noted Southern writer. He said that the latter mixes very freely with the students at Samford, and that he is exceedingly popular. Prof. Trent's death has been universally regretted, as being unfair to the South in his writings and books. Mr. Holmes thinks that Prof. Trent might be too much his own man. I have read a good many of Mr. Trent's books and find them very interesting. He is a writer of grand purpose and splendidly educated, being a Master of Arts of the University of Virginia. The South is waking up to new life in literary matters. We have a growing number of enterprising women and our people are going to work for the best.

Hearing that he must begin to practice, the young veterinary student was a bit nervous. He had heard that the kennels were a bit chaotic, with cases coming in all the time. He was also worried about the classes at the veterinary college, which he heard were quite demanding.

But, as the summer passed, he began to settle into his new life. He found that he enjoyed the challenge of dealing with different cases, and the relationships he formed with his colleagues and professors.

Once, when he was called in to see a broken leg on a setter, he was a bit nervous at first. But, with the advice of his mentor, Dr. Macfarlane, he was able to successfully treat the dog. He felt a sense of relief and accomplishment, and realized that he was capable of handling even the most challenging cases.

Overall, he found that his time at the veterinary college was a valuable learning experience. He felt excited about the future, and looked forward to continuing his education and becoming a successful veterinarian.
