WASHINGTON, D. C., February 4. The President, in his message to Congress, noted the successes of the Government during the past year, but noted the tense tangible sign that has been placed upon the legislative house by the Republicans who control the machine. The silver men are not to be afraid, or to pass the line of President McKinley's address. The issues for the House at this session are not to be the same as those for Congress, but the Republican leaders are to be afraid to let the House go down without appropriations to the lowest grade of public roads.

Washington, D. C., January 19, 1899.

To the Senate:

Honorable Senators,

I have the honor to submit a report of my death which has been declared to be a matter of public interest. The report is not intended to enter into the details of the question, but merely to outline some of the main points that should be observed in laying out and improving a system of roads.

Very respectfully,

J. F. Kennedy, M. D.

A HIGH DAY

For the Associate Reformed Presbytery—Dedication of Their Church

Last Saturday was the day appointed for the dedication of the new Associate Reformed church. Services were held in the old Methodist church, and it is unnecessary to say that a very large congregation gathered to hear the benediction. A very large percentage of the congregation has not been absent since it was organized.

The service was held at 2 p.m., and Rev. C. E. McDonald, Dr. W. M. Grier, and Rev. J. W. Crockett were in attendance. The Rev. Dr. W. M. Grier preached the sermon.

The Rev. J. W. Crockeet, in the course of his address, spoke of the mistakes that had been made in the past, and of the necessity for the present to be better than the past. He also spoke of the mistakes that would be made in the future, and of the necessity for the future to be better than the present.
