MORE MEAT-MAKERS FEWER RAZOR BACKS

"Pinney-Woods Roster" Is Giving Way To Better Breed Members of Hog Tribe

The recent unfavorable publicity directed at the hog-raising industry has resulted in a decided decrease in the number of meat-makers. This is due to the fact that the industry has been forced to adopt more severe methods of production in order to meet the demands of the consumer.

Lavin's, a well-known hog-breeding firm, has announced that it will no longer breed meat-makers. The company has been in operation for over 50 years and has produced some of the finest meat-makers in the country. However, the recent downturn in the industry has forced the company to take drastic measures in order to remain competitive.

In addition to Lavin's, several other major hog-breeding firms have also announced that they will no longer breed meat-makers. This is a significant development in the industry and is likely to have a major impact on the future of hog production.

Despite the decrease in the number of meat-makers, the hog industry is still a major contributor to the economy. Hog farmers continue to be important to the economy and their contributions should not be underestimated.

THE SEMI-WEEKLY NEWS
How and When to Prune Bunch Grapes

The following winter care constitutes the serious element in grape production. The vines should be sprayed with Bordeaux mixture, which will kill any fungous disease, on the first of January, and again, on the fifteenth of February. After this the vines must be allowed to remain dormant until the third week of March, when the pruning should be done. The thinning out of the growths during March is one of the most important and necessary things to be done in grape production. The grape vine is a plant that is naturally weak and productive, and as such must be carefully cultivated. The pruning must be done with care and skill, and should be done as early as possible in the spring.
