The church of Charlotte has decided to build a new church bond at a cost of $50,000. The church says: "The new church will be a monument to the city. It will be of Byzantine architecture, and will have a seating capacity of over 1,500. There will be a large auditorium, with galleries, and handsome woodwork and interior finishings."

The new church bond will also be used throughout the year to provide new clothing and shoes for the poor. The church hopes to build a new building in the next year. The new building will be designed by a local architect and will be made of the finest materials available.

The church says that the new church will be started by September 1. The church is going to be a very handsome and attractive building and will be built after the most modem and approved plans of architect.
