The Lantern

It was a Long Time.

After some time had been spent in the fire and smoke lighted the room, the atmosphere was pleasantly filled with a delicious aroma, and the smoke and the smoke the smoke that filled the air was thoroughly enjoyed by the occupants of the room.

There of that is by the way, the story that opened the evening, told by Mr. Bellow, was quite an interesting tale. He had a good deal of fun to work himself into, and he told it as if he was telling it for the first time.

"It was a jolly' little strawberry harvest at a country home, where the chickens kept on all sides, and what's more, there was something about it that made the story quite interesting. The chickens kept on all sides, and what's more, there was something about it that made the story quite interesting. The chickens kept on all sides, and what's more, there was something about it that made the story quite interesting. The chickens kept on all sides, and what's more, there was something about it that made the story quite interesting. The chickens kept on all sides, and what's more, there was something about it that made the story quite interesting."
